DEUTSCHLAND SAILING TODAY? NO U. S. CONVOY

German Submarine to Slip Away—Officially Held a Merchant Vessel.

FEAR BREMEN IS LOST.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Special protection for the German merchant submarine Deutschland when it starts out of American territorial waters was asked of the American government late today, with the intimation that the boat would leave Baltimore some time tomorrow. After conferences between state, treasury and navy department officials, it was ruled that no extraordinary precautions could be granted because the United States views the Deutschland as an ordinary merchantman.

Baltimore, Md., July 29.—[Special.—It is now the plan, according to under surface information, that the German submarine merchantman Deutschland shall sail for the first leg of its homeward journey tomorrow. If this plan is carried out, it will be just three weeks after its arrival here.

For more than a week, the Deutschland has been in the hands of experienced mechanics. These men have been at work on the great Doesel engines, overhauling the submerging apparatus, and even the battery room. Thursday night a corps of electricians was summoned to the Deutschland to examine and test the batteries. Severel plates were renewed and other repairs made.

CAPT. KOENIG OPTIMISTIC.

Now all repairs have been completed and officials of the Eastern Forwarding company, as well as Capt. Koenig, feel that the return trip will not endanger the crew.

Word has reached both Capt. Koenig and Capt. Hinsch that motor boat owners are planning to follow the Deutschland down the bay as far as possible. In order to avoid this, the Deutschland will sail suddenly, possibly during the early hours of the morning. Its only convoy will be two tugs and several newepaper dispatch boats.

Capt. Koenig, thoroughly enthused over his treatment here, is confident when he gets back to Germany with a report of American feeling toward the Germans, the kindly sentiment there will be materially strengthened.

FEAR BREMEN IS LOST.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Belief that something has happened to the Bremen, the German undersea liner and merchantman scheduled to arrive in this country more than a week ago, is growing among officials and naval experts here.

It has been three weeks tonight since the Deutschland was towed through the capes and up Chesapeake bay, at which time Capt. Koenig announced that his sister ship, the Bremen, would come into port in a few days.

Experts here are not much afraid that it has been captured by allied warships off the capes, but believe that it has run into heavy seas or broken down in the Atlantic. The possibility that it has been overhauled by an enemy at sea is also given some credit.

CREW IS LESS CONFIDENT.

At the time of Capt. Koenig's arrival in command of the Deutschland at Baltimore he announced that the Bremen was only a few days behind him. Since then the Deutschland has unloaded its cargo, taken on freight for Germany, and apparently has been lying idle in sea-shape for more than a week. It was popularly understood that he would put to sea as the arrival of the Bremen was announced.

The Deutschland is still waiting, but something has happened to take the "starch" out of the crew.

Russians Win Great Victory; Crush Teuton Southern Line

LONDON, July 29.—The Russian armies have celebrated the opening of the third year of the great war with one of the biggest military strokes ever witnessed on the great eastern front. Smashing through the Teutonic lines in Volhynia and northern Galicia for a distance of 100 miles at the lowest calculation, they have achieved a victory of the greatest magnitude.

From the region northwest of Czartoryak to the northern Galician line south of Brody the Russians have swept forward and the Teuton defenses have crumpled in. Two days and nights of the fiercest fighting have given to the Russians 39,000 prisoners, 100 field guns, and miles on miles of lands furrowed with the strongest fortifications.

Teuton Forces Withdrawing.

The Austro-German defenders of the positions before the lower Stokhod have withdrawn behind the river that has proved Gen. Brussiloff's greatest obstacle to an advance on Kovel from the west. Less than twenty miles from the railroad junction of western Volhynia the Russian right wing is plunging forward with furious bursts of power. A few more such plunges and the Teuton positions both at Vladimir Volynsk and Kovel will be made untenable.

Further south Gen. von Bothmer's army, outflanked both on the north and the south, is trying desperately to extricate itself from the perilous position in which it has been placed by the Russians' crushing blows south of Brody.

The people of eastern Galicia are fleeing before the Russian advance.

Austrians Menaced on South.

Even along the Stripa there are signs of imminent retreat by the Austrian forces. A few days more and the Russian advance will threaten these positions flank and rear, and the fortifications which have barred the Russians along the winding river front for months will be left deserted.

The northern battle lines of Field Marshal von Hindenbug's troops also will feel the effect of the latest Russian coup de main. Compelled to fall back from the Riga-Rovno front, the German field marshal must lengthen his line to an enormous degree. Besides surrendering territory won only at immense cost and valuable time, he must allow his lines to be thinned out and exposed to the growing pressure exerted by Gen. Kuropatkin.

Teuton Defense Crippled.

The loss of such a large number of heavy field pieces will undoubtedly prevent the Austrians and Germans from making any such stand as they did on the Stripa after their first retreat. It will impair the efficacy of Teuton resistance as nothing else could.

In southern Galicia the Russians have again taken up the drive for Lemberg through Stanislau and Halicz, both important railroad centers.

Russian Analysis of Campaign.

PETROGRAD, July 29.—After being compelled to halt their advance for several weeks before combined Austrian and German resistance on the northern wing of Gen. Brussiloff's front the Russians again have scored an important success and are pressing the Teutons back along the entire front from the Kovel-Lutsk railway as far south as Brody.

The new Russian attack south of Lutsk not only threatens Vladimir-Volynski, but opens the possibility of a successful attack on Kovel from the south, since an important railway line connects these points. The proximity of the Russians to Sokal likewise constitutes a definite threat at Lemberg from that direction. The chief significance of the new advance, however, is the fact that it is the first decisive success scored by the Russians against German forces in the present campaign.

Overcome Germans' Defenses.

Since the first breach of the Lutsk front the Germans, taking over the defense of Kovel, had been able to hold the Russians on the line of the Stockhod. The combined effect of the two Russian advances—toward Vladimir-Volynski and toward Brody—now has been to drive the Austro-German armies back along a sixty mile front.

The latest computation of prisoners taken during the first half of the summer campaign gives a total of 350,000. Russian officers estimate also that the Austro-German losses in killed and wounded are close to 450,000.

Russian Official Statement.

The official statement issued today says:

> Our troops have constructed bridges on the river Stokhod, in the region of Gulevitchi, and have crossed to the

"INSECT SQUAD" SCORCHES HOME

Illinois' 135 Disqualified Soldiers Promise Disclosures of Brutal Treatment.

BY SIDNEY WILLIS.

San Antonio, Tex., July 29.—[Special.]—The "insect squad" is on its way home.

This is the phrase applied by an officer—and cynically adopted by the men themselves—to the 135 men of the First and Second infantry disqualified for service because of physical disability. The "squad" left San Antonio tonight bitter against the federalized militia and promising to make hair raising disclosures of mismanagement and brutality when they reach home.

Seventy-five of the 135 men are going directly home and will reach Chicago Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Others will go by way of New Orleans, and a handful will remain in San Antonio for a few days.

Made an Example Of.

Stories of atrocious treatment by company and regimental officers were told by the disqualified men today after they were mustered out and no longer feared to speak without restriction. They assert that from the time they were rejected at medical inspection a deliberate policy of frightfulness was adopted toward them, as an example to the other men of what they might expect should they seek to get out on immunity offered college students and soldiers with dependents.

All of these disqualified men were turned down by regular army inspectors at Springfield, but nevertheless were brought along by Cols. Sanborn and Garrity, in the hope that they could be put through here.

Here Are Grievances.

Here are some things complained of:

That they were stripped of blankets, mess kits, and cots when the First brigade started for Leon Springs.

That they were not taken on the hike.

That they were served bad meat, though they admit the rest of the regiments received the same.

That they were given deliberately all the menial and scavenger details.

That their sick were unattended.

That they were called "quitters," "yellow dogs," and "insects" by the officers, not to mention some other names.

That the treatment was a cold policy to make them appear contemptible in the eyes of their comrades.

Their Stories All Agree.

So many men were clustered around me trying to tell their grievances that it was impossible to get the straight of half their stories, but in essentials all agreed.

"After we had been rejected," said Private J. A. Romney of Company M, Second regiment, "Lieut. Robert Moore of my company came down the street telling all the 'noncoms' to give us the dirty work. 'We will teach the insects to shirk,' he said. I told him if he would

'PROTEGE' GOES ON A RAMPAGE

Youth Mothered by Oak Park Women Beats Lockup Keeper.

There is grief in a hundred woman hearts in Oak Park. It is a quiet, tense grief that comes of disappointment deep and genuine. It is sorrow for the misfortune of "Little Napoleon."

When, in 1910, a hundred club women of Oak Park became mothers to "Little Napoleon" there was a new birth of sentiment for the boy without a chance who had spent a year in the John Worthy school. "Little Napoleon" was 13 years old then.

"Little Napoleon" became the son of a hundred mothers. His future was secure. This was written of him:

"The smile of a little child; how much may depend upon it! In its charm may rest the future of a family, the salvation of a despairing mother. Who knows the hidden emotions it may conjure up in an unguarded moment?"

Leaps on Policeman.

Last Wednesday this sweet, drooping little blossom, Napoleon Howe Cheffer, the son of a hundred mothers, leaped upon the aged lockup keeper in the Warren avenue police station, struck the old man down, beat him into unconsciousness with the jail keys, and escape like a flash through the squadroom into the street. "Little Napoleon" still is going, in the belief of the police. He is wanted for the theft of an automobile, and this is his second jail break in a month.

Policeman Joseph Fallon, the lockup keeper, is in the county hospital with several broken ribs and other injuries.

Of course, "Little Napoleon" is "little" no more. He is known as "Nape" Cheffer in police circles, and he is nearing his twentieth year with a record.

Sympathy aroused for Him.

It was Harry Neal, secretary of the Fine Arts society of Oak Park, who, in 1910, aroused sympathy for "Little Napoleon." The boy had served a year in the John Worthy school and was about to be liberated. Mr. Neal enlisted the aid of Mrs. George W. Trout, who, with the aid of other women, got busy on the telephones. In three hours a hundred women of Oak Park and Austin had agreed to become "mothers" to "Little Napoleon."

Judge McKenzie Cleland was guardian of the funds raised for the boy's welfare. Among the "mothers" were Mrs. John C. McDonald, Mrs. Louise E. Yager, Mrs. John Ingram, Mrs. Sherman T. Edwards, Mrs. Howard Skillin, Mrs. Roland D. Flitcraft, Mrs. F. D. Updike, Mrs. Allen S. Ray, Mrs. W. Gifford Jones, Mrs. James E. Hildreth, and Mrs. P. A. Beachy. The young unmarried women styled themselves "motherettes" and took a huge interest in bringing up "Little Napoleon."

CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Deckhand on Theodore Roosevelt Arrested for Polluting Lake Water with Garbage.

Dr. John Dill Robertson has had reports that lake steamers were polluting the drinking supply by dumping barrels of garbage into the lake when not far from shore.

Last night he sent out inspectors. Dr. Bundeson, on the Theodore Roosevelt, caught a deckhand in the act of dumping a barrel of garbage into the lake. He arrested him.

"They can't pollute Chicago's drinking water and expect to get away with it," said Dr. Robertson.

I. W. W. MOB IN NEW YORK DAMAGES NEWSPAPER PLANT

Demand Italian Journal Work for Release of Carlo Tresca, Who Killed Minnesota Sheriff.

New York, July 29.—The business office of the Italian newapaper Il Progresso in this city was wrecked tonight by a mob which demanded that the management of the paper begin a campaign to obtain freedom for Carlo Tresca, a leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, who is imprisoned in Minnesota. Tresca is awaiting trial, it is said, in connection with the killing of a deputy sheriff about three weeks ago.

The police assert that the mob was composed of members of the I. W. W. who had attended a meeting in Union square earlier in the afternoon.

Shortly before the mob went to the newspaper office there was an incipient riot a block away in which two policemen were injured. Police reserves rescued their fellow officers. Six prisoners were placed in commandeered automobiles and rushed to a police station.

MOTHER, YOUR ABANDONED BABY IS FOUND—IT'S DEAD.

Infant Left in Peach Basket Near Lily Pond in Lincoln Park Discovered by Boys.

This is to tell the heartless mother who put her new born baby in a peach basket, covered it with paper, and left it in the bushes near the lily pond in Lincoln park, that her child has been found.

But do not be alarmed, madam. The baby is quite dead, as you doubtless wanted it to be. Or perhaps you put it there after it died?

Whatever the case, Louis Richard and Frank Tolstam came upon the basket and its little burden while hunting for lizards, and Officer Harry Licht carried it away.

ANOTHER ALLIGATOR CAUGHT

Mrs. F. F. Kitving Snares It Under Her Garage in Austin.

It's the open season hereabouts for alligators. Mrs. F. F. Kitving called up The Tribune last night to say she had snared one which had been making its home recently under the garage back of the Kitving residence, at 117 North Parkside avenue, Austin. It is thirty inches long, and Mrs. Kitving says it will be added to her young son's aquarium.

TORRID SPELL BREAK IS DUE TOMORROW

Firemen Flush the Streets as City's Death Toll Mounts.

ICE PRICES BOOSTED.

Relief from the heat is on the way to Chicago from the northwest. There is a cool wave in the western part of Minnesota. It is expected that it will arrive in Nebraska and Iowa today, and will be in Chicago tomorrow.

The government forecast given out last night reads:

> Fair and continued high temperature Sunday followed by cooler weather Monday and Tuesday. Unsettled Monday and possible showers, with gentle winds Sunday, becoming generally moderate northerly Monday.

DEATHS AT FIFTY MARK.

The number of deaths for the day due to the heat ran over the fifty mark, while prostrations ran into the hundreds.

Temperature reached a maximum of 96 degrees at 1 p. m.

Hope for a cooler night arose late in the early evening when a breeze was felt, especially outside the loop district. This reached a movememnt of eleven miles an hour, but soon after the sun set it almost disappeared.

The minimum temperature during the previous night was 85 degrees, the highest minimum ever recorded in this district, surpassing the high records made on preceding nights. The high average for the last two days has already raised the month's average temperature to the mark set in July, 1901, which was the hottest July in the history of Chicago prior to the present month.

BOOST ICE PRICES.

It was announced during the day that most of the independent ice companies were raising the price of ice 10 cents a hundred pounds.

When these things were made known to the various authorities and charities renewed efforts were made to alleviate the suffering among the poor and sick. The chief concern of the health authorities and the charities are the babies.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, announced that during the last twenty-four hours the record for the number of baby deaths was broken—forty-four under 1 year old succumbing between noon Friday and noon yesterday.

FIREMEN FLOOD STREETS.

Floods of water from the city hydrants was turned loose on burning pavements and hot brick flat buildings last night all over the city. In districts where ice is almost unknown, where poverty makes any escape from the intense heat radiated by brick and mortar almost impossible, it was the first substantial relief in days—and it was eagerly welcomed.

Health Commissioner Robertson and Fire Marshal O'Connor were the good samaritans who brought it about. The suggestion first came to The Tribune from Charles H. Wood, and it was passed on to the city officials.

ORDERS OUT HOSE CARTS.

Within three-quarters of an hour the chief had ordered out the auxiliary hose carts and they were busy during a large part of the night flushing the streets and showering water around generally. A specially large contingent went out 'back of the yards,' between Forty-second and Forty-ninth street, in the Ghetto district along Halsted street, and in the northwest part of the city in the vicinity of North and Milwaukee avenue.

The "kiddies" of these neighborhoods were perhaps more joyful about the advent of the firemen than anybody else. They all got shower baths. Older folk, too, emulated the example of the youngsters and jumped into the streaming water.

PERFECT PLANS TODAY.

Further plans for cooling off the town by the water method will be perfected today. Requests for turning on the water in different neighborhoods should be made to the health or fire departments. As far as the water supply will permit the requests will be granted, Chief O'Connor said.

"I sure do feel sorry for the people in the crowded districts," Chief O'Connor continued, "and if we can help them I'm ready to go the limit."

Earlier in the day the chief announced that a free shower bath awaits Chicago horses at every fire station. Any driver may stop at the nearest station and have the hose turned on his horse.

SHOWER BATHS FOR HORSES.

Despite the extraordinary demands made on the city's water system, City Engineer Ericson said comparatively few complaints of insufficient water have been made. The pumping stations are being operated to full capacity, 770,000,000 gallons of water being pumped into the mains daily. The normal is 580,000,000 gallons.

Water shortage is being felt to a slight extent in Rogers Park and Austin. Ald. H. D. Capitain of the Twenty-fifth ward issued an appeal to householders to refrain from sprinkling lawns between 5 and 7:30 in the evening, when the heaviest demand is made on the north side pumping stations. He has received many complaints from people living on the third floor that they were unable to obtain water at this time of the day.

PROTEST PRICE ADVANCE.

A protest against the price increase of ice adopted by a majority of the independent dealers is being made by various hotel and restaurant organizations and other wholesale users. According to some figures, which could not be confirmed by any of the larger dealers, within a radius of fifty miles of Chicago and in the Wisconsin lake region there is enough ice to supply the city for five years.

Most of the dealers who raised prices say the action was taken because a shortage was feared. Others say there is no likelihood of a shortage. The Consumers' company, of which Fred Upham is president, stated that no increase would be made in their poduct to the general public.

The price of 300 pound lots has been raised from 30 cents for 100 pounds to 40 cents. For smaller lots the increase ranges from 25 to 50 per cent.

WORK DOUBLE SHIFTS.

Ice dealers worked double shifts all day and still were unable to provide orders. In the poorer sections of the city many residents flocked to the ice houses and besieged the men in charge, imploring them to sell them ice.

Because of the great demand all of the ice companies have announced they will stay open until noon today to supply all who come for ice. Arrangements were made with officials of the labor unions to permit their men to work on Sunday.

The serious effects of the withering heat was apparent in every building, street, and park in Chicago. Hundreds of horses fell dead, hundreds of men and women were stricken, and many deaths resulted. Even the bathing beach crowds felt the ill effects of the heat and there were numerous rescues.

50,000 SLEEP IN PARKS.

A rough estimate made by the police last night placed the number of persons who slept all night in the parks at 50,000. At Grant park on the lake front men literally covered the ground.

The bathing beaches had the biggest day in history and all day long lines of men and women stood waiting for their turn to take a dip. At the municipal beaches the supply of bathing suits was exhausted early. At Lincoln park the place inside the "dead line" was jammed with bathers and it was possible only to sit or stand still, as there was no room to move.

EMPLOYES SENT HOME.

Most of the big department stores, many of the railroads and other big corporations dismissed their office forces early in the day.

In the federal, state, and city departments all the men and women that could be spared were allowed to seek relief wherever they saw fit before noon. Long before supper time the parks and beaches entertained record breaking crowds.

Every department of the city was strained to its utmost all day in an effort to afford relief and prevent further suffering. Warnings were sent out by the police to owners of dogs against allowing them to play with children or run the streets. Policemen were given orders to shoot all dogs found acting strange in the streets.

TEAM OWNERS WARNED.

Warning salso were sent out by the Illinois Humane society to team owners regarding the treatment and care of horses during the hot weather. An extra force of inspectors and officers was put to work by the humane society and they will be on duty all through the hot spell.

A number of dog and horse owners were arrested because of nonobservance of the ordinances.

According to the police report sixteen persons were bitten by dogs during the day. Those listed are:

Charles Doherty, 4142 Wentworth avenue.

Margaret McInerney, 3343 South Wood street.

Leo Fitzpatrick, 3723 South Halsted street.

Mrs. M. Tripp, 2500 South Park avenue.

Morris Goldberg, 1216 South Sangamon street.

Mabel Adams, 6000 South Elizabeth street.

Julia Eisen, 6318 Justine street.

Christian Fiebert, 5150 South May street.

Fred Manchester, 643 Blackhawk street.

William Navide, 3127 West Fifteenth street.

Herbert Blumer, 3827 North Marshfield avenue.

Inspect Meat Shops.

Sanitary conditions of butcher shops, groceries, and milk depots again were given a rigid inspection by a staff of officers from the health department and many not "spick and span" were found.

Warnings were issued to the proprietors to "clean up or close up" within twelve hours. A detail of policemen and sanitary inspectors was also put out to better the conditions of various alleys and streets. The street department force was first detailed to the congested districts, where the bad conditions might seriously affect the many babies in those sections.

A "cleanup" of the alleys in the poorer quarters at first is considered more important at present than the fashionable resident districts or the downtown streets.

Mayor Helps Relief Work.

Mayor Thompson occupied himself during the day with efforts to alleviate suffering and issued all orders necessary to bring about better conditions.

The mayor was particularly concerned about the hospitals and gave orders that all necessary measures be taken by subordinates without waiting for an official "O. K."

GARY DEATHS THIRTEEN.

Gary, Ind., July 29.—[Special.]—Two more deaths occurred this evening, bringing the list of heat fatalities here up to thirteen. A temperature of 109 was reached at 3 p. m. Hundreds of steel workers were prostrated. Three thousand men refused to work on construction jobs.

44 BABIES DIE IN 24 HOURS; RECORD BROKEN

Fatal Temperature Sends Infant Mortality Up; Nurses Hired.

The heat death roll of babies is growing. Forty-four died in the twenty-four hours ending at noon yesterday, the largest number on record in Chicago.

With no relief expected for the next four or five days, health officials fear the list will grow to appalling proportions. Especially in the district "back o' the yards" is the situation acute.

No money to buy ice and very little ice to be obtained by those who have money is the general condition. Steps to alleviate the suffering among the sick babies somewhat were taken by Dr. John Dill Robertson with the financial aid of some citizens and a few firms. A number of the stockyards companies contributed $750 to employ ten nurses to aid as many sick babies as possible. More help is needed, however.

Hundreds Near Death.

In the congested districts of the west side hundreds of babies are at the point of death from the heat. Pure milk and ice are needed to keep them alive. In Chicago and immediate vicinity it is estimated there are 5,000 sick babies.

That most of the suffering infants of poor parents need ice more than anything else is the general opinion of the health officials. In many cases the poorer homes have no place to keep more than twenty-five or fifty pounds of ice at a time and this supply is soon exhausted.

Not Many Contributions.

Contributions to Dr. Robertson's fund to employ nurses for sick babies were few in number. That of the stockyards firms was the largest with $700. One letter contained a check for $250 from a man who desired to be known only as "gentleman farmer." Contributions from Bert Leston Taylor of $10; John J. Sloan, $70, and Mary H. Y. Freeman, $20, were received.

Three suspected cases of infantile paralysis, which, if verified, will make thirty cases in the city, were reported to the city health department during the day.

JACKSON PARK BEACH SCENE OF RACE RIOT.

200 White Men Attack 10 Negro Men and Women While 3,000 Watch.

Three thousand persons who had gone to the Jackson park beach last night saw 200 white men participate in a fight with ten Negroes, five men and five women. One of the Negroes, it is said, made an insulting remark to one of the white men who was passing.

Riot calls were sent to the Hyde Park and the Woodlawn stations. Two Negroes and one white man were arrested.

Several thousand persons were turned away from the Wilson avenue beach after all the suits and lockers had been rented out.

Nearly half Chicago's population, it was estimated by exuberant beach mangers, got into Lake Michigan yesterday. From early morning until late at night, from Rogers Park on the north to the far end of South Chicago, every available bit of beach was crowded. Any one who made an inspection of Chicago's water front would be inclined to agree with the beach managers.

WOMEN FAINT IN LOCKERS WHEN ROW AT BEACH STARTS

Crowd of 500 Tries to Force Way to Water and Police Are Called to Quell the Trouble.

One man was slightly injured and about wenty men and women fainted in the locker rooms at the Clarendon beach yesterday afternoon when a crowd of about 500 persons tried to force their way through the door to get on the beach. Abe Mabab, 1339 North Maplewood avenue, was bruised and his left foot was crushed. Police were notified and ambulance physicians from north side stations were called. Sergt. George Cudmore and twenty policemen fought the crowd before it became quiet again.

The trouble started when the men who were inside the building and standing in a line four blocks long waiting for a chance to go in bathing became impatient and began knocking at doors demanding admission.

THE HORSE SUFFERED MORE.

Men Forget Their Discomforts in Interest in Sunstruck Animal.

A knot of men standing in front of the Saratoga hotel forgot the heat yesterday in their interest in a horse which fell to the pavement and lay motionless—a victim of the heat.

When an officer of the humane society had brought the animal around and had gone from the spot temporarily, the driver proceeded to readjust the harness as if he were going to drive on.

The crowd jeered, but the teamster persisted until the return of the humane society's representative. The driver was unable to face him and agreed to give the horse a rest for half an hour before driving on.

Five minutes later the heat settled down again on the crowd in front of the Saratoga hotel.

FOR FLOATING BEACHES

Ald. Capitain Suggests New York Scheme for Use Here.

"FLOATING beaches" were suggested yesterday by Ald. Capitain to relieve beach congestion during the hot weather in Chicago. Such beaches—huge boxlike affairs—are in use off Battery place in New York.

"They don't cost very much and they would be just the thing to put into the water around the municipal pier," said Ald. Capitain. "They are made of wood, are six or eight feet deep at one end and two feet deep at the other, and around them is a floating sidewalk with dressing rooms on it.

"I think the council should take up the question of floating beaches this fall, with the idea of putting some of them in use next summer."

HEAT DEATH LIST ELSEWHERE GROWS

The list of deaths and prostrations in various sections due to the hot wave continued to grow during the last twenty-four hours.

Reports from over the central west showed widespread damage to crops as a result of heat and drought, and many large cities began to fear a curtailment in the milk supply as a result of burned up pastures on the dairy farms.

Kansas prospects for a bumper corn crop are reported gone. In Illinois the situation is rapidly growing serious, owing to lack of rain. At Peoria, however, a thunder shower broke the dry spell when the thermometer climbed to 109.

Factories in many cities are closing their doors or running only night shifts pending relief from the hot wave.

BOY DROWNS IN PARK TANK.

In view of several hundreds of persons, Herald Seelos, 17 years old, of 1929 Barry avenue, was drowned while in the swimming tank in Hamlin park last night. He was swimming with several other boys when he was seized with cramps and sank before help could reach him. A physician said heart disease led to the boy's drowning.

$382 TOTAL OF DAY'S DONATIONS TO THE ICE FUND

Children Send Money They Earn and from Penny Banks to Help the Babies.

The sympathies of Chicago's "kiddies" are aroused and their purses opened by the terrific heat which has caused so much suffering among the poor of the city during the last few days. No children would suffer for want of ice if the city's more fortunate juveniles had their way and they do their best to relieve the distress. Many of the eighty-two donations to THE TRIBUNE'S ice fund that totaled $382 yesterday and came from the little ones.

Mostly in Small Sums.

The contributions nearly all were for small amounts. The total reached shows what even a single dollar from a person will do toward making some home happy. Many of the donations came from children who had earned the money themselves. Here are a few of the childish letters that accompanied donations:

G. W. Longstreet—Inclosed please find $1 for the fund. I made this by running a lemonade stand.

Arthur and Lester Baer—Please give the inclosed dollar to the poor sick babies. My little brother and I feel so sorry for them.

Lenore and Norval Donahue—We are sending the contents of our penny bank for ice for the poor babies of Chicago.

Anonymous—From two babies with ice to those who have none.

Run Stand in Rain.

Another letter encloses $3 and says: "This money was earned by Helen Davenport, Ruth Leadstone, Libby Hurwitz, Roberta Williams, and Russell Williams. These little folks stood in the rain all one day and sold ice cream, cake, and candy to help the babies of Chicago."

And while the needs of the sweltering babies in the city were remembered, the mothers and children at Algonquin camp were not forgotten. The contributions to the hospital fund reached $46.26.

MENUS FOR HOT WEATHER SUGGESTED BY DOCTORS.

Hot Drinks Better than Heavy Food, Dr. Robertson and Dr. Anna Dwyer Agree.

To lighten the load on the housewife and the burden of the stomach this hot weather menu is advised by Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, and Dr. Anna Dwyer, physician of the Morals court. They say hot drinks are better than heavy food. Here are the menus for the three meals:

BREAKFAST.
Fruit.
Oatmeal with cream and sugar.
Bread and butter or toast.
Coffee.

LUNCH.
Fruit.
Cheese. Potato salad.
Hot or iced tea. Watermelon.

DINNER.
Cold consomme.
Small portion of lean meat.
Peas. Boiled potatoes.
Sliced tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce.
Black coffee or iced tea. Ice cream.

Dr. Robertson wants to know why more people don't try these menus.

CHARGE BEACH LOCKER RAIDS

Complaints Are Made That Women's Rooms at Clarendon Are Robbed When Bathers Are in Water.

Girls who bathe at Clarendon beach have just as many chances for a thrill as their sisters in the shark-infested waters of New Jersey. They may have to go home wearing nothing except what nature gave them. Such is the burden of a complaint on the new municipal beach, which reached THE TRIBUNE last night. Numerous robberies in women's lockers were charged.

"On several occasions," said the complainant, "girls have had all their clothing stolen. One girl had everything stolen but her underwear and shoes. Another woman lost $25 from her locker."

A policewoman from the Town Hall station was reported to have been looking into complaints of the robberies, but the desk sergeant denied that he had any reports of such thieving.

FOOD INSPECTION BECOMES RIGID IN HOT WEATHER

Licenses of Fruit Stands, Milk Depots, Bakeries, and Grocery Revoked.

The city health department isn't going to take any chances on insanitary fruit, milk, and bakery shops these hot days. Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday announced a drastic policy of immediate revocation of license "on suspicion." In the past it has been customary to file suits that dragged along in the courts for days.

The first batch of revocations was ordered yesterday by Dr. Robertson. It includes eight fruit stands, two bakeries, one grocery and milk shop, one poultry shop, and three milk depots.

Lose Their Licenses.

Here is the list:

FRUIT STANDS.

JAMES LAMBOS, 101 East Eleventh street.

GEORGE MANOS, 119½ East Eleventh street.

GEORGE ARYIHIS, Randolph and Jefferson street.

ALBERT BEHAR, Union avenue and Madison street.

M. GRIVIS, 430 South Dearborn street.

M. LAVEZZORIO, 402 South Wabash avenue.

JOHN KLOITSIDES, 129 East Eleventh street.

GEORGE POLOE, Randolph and Jefferson streets.

BAKERIES.

DAVID JACOBS, 1308 South Jefferson street.

TONY CANCIMILLA, 211 West Twenty-third street.

GROCERY.

LOUIS DAVIDSON, 1141 North Ashland avenue.

POULTRY SHOP.

CASIMIR KIPKIN, 1552 South Homan avenue.

MILK DEPOTS.

DAVID ELLIS, 1347 South Union avenue.

FRANK KUCERA, 1814 West Eighteenth street.

MARTIN BRAGIEL, 3652 South Marshfield avenue.

Report on Bakery.

Dr. Albert J. Stokes, head of the food inspection bureau, cited conditions in Jacobs' bakery as typical of the kind which menaces the city's health. The floors, walls, and ceiling of the shop were reported "very dirty." Tables, tins, pans, and utensils used in baking were found covered with dough and grease. There were flies in swarms in the bakeshop and the surroundings were reported as filthy. Jacobs has been sued many times without result.

Dr. Stokes spent the afternoon working on a list of peddlers' licenses that will probably be revoked tomorrow. Dr. Robertson also proposes to make public a list of food dealers who do not keep sanitary conditions up to standard.

Ice to Cool Lake.

Valparaiso, Ind., July 29.—It was reported here today that several tons of inferior ice had been purchased by residents at Flint lake, near here. The ice was to be dumped into the lake to improve the swimming.

HUGHES WINDS UP WORK ON SPEECH; HAS 8,000 WORDS

Draft of G. O. P. Nomination Acceptance Goes to Printer; T. R. Not to Talk.

Bridgehampton, N. Y., July 29.—[Special.]—The completed draft of Charles E. Hughes' speech of acceptance was taken by messenger to the printer in New York tonight after Republican National Chairman Willcox and Mr. Hughes had passed most of the day discussing various phases of the address.

It contains about 3,000 words, and will not be committed to memory, but read by the nominee at the notification exercises in Carnegie hall on Monday night.

Mr. Hughes has prepared his address the way a lawyer would a case, his "indictment of the Wilson administration," as one manager described it.

The speech will treat of all the big issues, particularly the Mexican situation, the tariff, the part America will play in the reconstruction period after the European war, woman suffrage, social justice, and the country's present prosperity, which Mr. Hughes has asserted is due to war time conditions.

Criticizes Wilson Policy.

Mr. Hughes' address has been prepared with the utmost care. While the public has been led to believe only Mr. Willcox has seen the draft, it is known other men have been taken into the confidence of Mr. Hughes.

It is asserted on good authority that the Republican nominee will say that had the United States adopted and observed a firm attitude on the German submarine question neither the Lusitania nor any of the other passenger ships sunk without warning would have been destroyed

He will also refer, it is said, to the fact that more than a year has elapsed since the Lusitania was sunk, yet the Wilson régime has obtained no reparation from Germany.

Mr. Hughes also will declare that had a firm stand been taken with the allies, the trade difficulties at present experienced by the United States would have been avoided.

Mexican Mixup a Target.

The Mexican policy of the present administration will be Mr. Hughes' main target. It is declared, he holds, that President Wilson has pursued a weak and vacillating policy with a problem that has been costly in American life and property with no return in the way of internal peace and order across the Rio Grande.

It is said Mr. Hughes does not advocate intervention, but he does make it clear that he regards it as a first duty of this government to protect the lives of American citizens in Mexico and their property.

Mr. Hughes will insist that he is as strongly for peace as if Mr. Wilson. He will assert that the course which he would have taken would have assured this condition for the United States, while that of Mr. Wilson has led to complications which menace the future of the country.

Roosevelt Not to Talk.

Chairman Willcox, who came here this morning and will leave tomorrow, said positively that Col. Roosevelt would not speak at the notification ceremonies.

"Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft were sent boxes for the notification," Mr. Willcox said. "Mr. Taft has not accepted and probably will not be present. Col. Roosevelt accepted the box today, but I do not know whether this means he will occupy the box himself or merely have some of the members of his family there."

There has been such a demand for tickets that 300 persons, mostly Republicans of prominence, from all parts of the country, will be given reserved seats on the stage.

Mr. Hughes will go to New York early Monday morning. He will return here Wednesday night to get in two days' rest before he starts on the western trip on Aug. 5.

Tour Has Double Purpose.

The Hughes tour through the west, politicians point out, has a double purpose. First is the laying out of the issues in the campaign, the points on which the host of Republican spellbinders who will sweep over the country later will criticize President Wilson's administration and the stewardship of the Democratic party.

The second object will be to allay all feelings of bitterness among the radicals of the Progressive party and win them back into thorough sympathy and active coöperation with the Republican cause.

In both these purposes Republican leaders predict Mr. Hughes will be eminently successful.

From the outset Mr. Hughes is expected to come out strong for adequate preparedness, and his address in Detroit, the home of Henry Ford, among the most pronounced of the pacifists, is awaited with unusual interest.

Mr. Hughes' appearance and speech in Chicago, it is reported, will be the occasion of a great demonstration. The speech will be delivered in the Coliseum.

WILLIAM E. MASON SEEKS JOB

Former United States Senator Files Petition as Republican Candidate for Congressman at Large.

Springfield, Ill., July 29.—Secretary of State Lewis G. Stevenson today received petitions for places on the primary ballot from the following:

Lieutenant governor—Frederick De Lang of Chicago, Republican.

Congressman-at-large—William E. Mason of Chicago, Republican, former United States senator. Adelbert McPherson, Chicago, Republican.

W. J. CALHOUN IMPROVES.

Nurses at Presbyterian Hospital Say He Has Stood Heat Well.

A marked improvement was noted yesterday in the condition of William J. Calhoun, acording to physicians at the Presbyterian hospital, where he has been ill for nearly a month. Mr. Calhoun has not been much affected by the heat, his nurses say. His illness is due to a paralytic seizure folowing a patriotic address on July 4.

Georgia Nall

CONVICT-MAYOR PARDONED BY GOVERNOR OF GEORGIA.

Thomas E. Stripling, Who Fled Murder Charge and Lived Upright Life, Served Five Years.

Atlanta, Ga., July 29.—Thomas Edgar Stripling, who under an assumed name acted as chief of police of Danville, Va., while a fugitive from justice from Georgia on a murder charge, was pardoned tonight by Gov. Harris after serving five years of a life sentence in the state penitentiary.

Broken in health, he will join his family, which has lived near the prison farm at Milledgeville since he was sent there. His case attracted considerable attention about a year ago when his young daughter appealed to the governor for pardon.

Stripling shot Bill Cornett in Harris county, Georgia, nineteen years ago, claiming Cornett had insulted his wife and sister. While awaiting trial he escaped, was joined by his wife, and after a number of years went to Danville with his family. There he was elected chief of police and was considered an excellent official. He went under the name of R. E. Morris.

On the day when the municipal council was to reëlect him his identity was discovered and he was taken back to Georgia.

JAILED 2 DAYS FOR NAUGHT.

New Jersey Salesman Says Some One Will Pay for His Arrest.

Charles Heeth, an automobile dealer of Hackensack, N. J., was arraigned before Judge Rafferty in the South Chicago court yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct and discharged when William Scott, a conductor, the complainant, failed to appear.

Heeth was arrested Thursday night as he was returning from Hammond, Ind. According to the conductor, Heeth refused to pay the second fare upon entering the city.

As he left the courtroom Heeth remarked that some one was going to pay for having him locked up for two days in a cell in this hot weather.

EASTLAND MEMORIAL TODAY.

15,000 Expected to Attend Services Conducted by National Union at Riverview.

More than 15,000 people, it is expected, will pay tribute to the Eastland dead this afternoon at Riverview park picnic grounds, where memorial services will be held in connection with the National Union hospital benefit. More than sixty members of the National Union lost their lives in the catastrophe.

A program has been arranged that will start at 10 a. m. this morning and end late in the evening. More than 200 prizes have been donated.

Girls will sell candy and flowers. More than ninety councils in Cook county have united to make the affair a success.

Progressives to Have Blank Ballots.

As the Progressive party still legally exists, salmon colored ballots will be in the election polling places Sept. 13, despite the fact that there will be no printed names on them. Progressive voters must write in names of their choices if they do not desire to vote for other party candidates.

KEALING 'TIPPED' FOR G. O. P. CHIEF

Chicago Hears the Indiana Leader May Be Picked Western Manager.

Joseph B. Kealing of Indianapolis, according to a quiet tip in Chicago yesterday, is likely to be picked by National Chairman Willcox to direct the Republican national campaign from the Chicago headquarters in the Conway building.

Mr. Kealing was known during the preconvention campaign as the field marshal of the allied forces that came close to naming the Coliseum nominee up to the moment that Mr. Hughes swept down his last barrier. He was in immediate touch with the Republican state organizations all over the north and west, and those on the inside said that the Hughes management in the east would make a tenstrike if the announcement of Mr. Kealing by Chairman Willcox follows the notification ceremonies tomorrow night.

Important Confabs On.

Big conferences covering the Illinois situation are to be held today and tomorrow in New York. State Chairman Sterling and Speaker David E. Shanahan left for the east clad with full authority to discuss important matters with Senator Sherman and with some Illinois Republican congressmen.

That the conference may get to an important phase in straightening out the state ticket situation is considered certain. Complications that have arisen for the nominations below the governorship have developed some embarrassing situations to state leaders and to Senator Sherman, and there is a hint steps will be taken to reduce the field of candidates for some offices. The offices particularly concerned are attorney general and state auditor.

Hot Candidates Sanguine.

The fighting candidates for the Republican nomination for governor spent a hot day through their press bureaus discussing the gladsome receptions that had been their portion while traveling through the state with the thermometer at 100 plus.

John C. Ames in Smith headquarters says Hull hasn't made a dent and that the fight is between Lowden and Smith, with Smith gaining.

Roy O. West for Hull asserts the race is a two man affair between Lowden and Hull, with Smith eliminated.

The Lowden management said it is content to issue no statements so long as Col. Lowden's rivals are agreed he is the man they have to wallop.

Medill McCormick's Tour.

Medill McCormick is due to arrive in Chicago this morning after a two weeks' automobile campaign trip that has taken him through all counties of southern Illinois, winding up with Elizabethtown on the Ohio river last night. This week Mr. McCormick is to tour through northern and central Illinois, furthering his campaign for the Republican nomination for congressman at large.

The Harrison county convention to name an anti-Sullivan Democratic county slate will be held at the Briggs house tomorrow.

Society Girls to Europe.

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—Sailing today on the Lafayette for France, where they will enter war relief work, are Miss Maude E. Kahn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kahn, and Miss Marianne McKeever, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Chauncey McKeever.

LOS ANGELES MAYOR GIVEN 8 MONTHS TO LIVE; TO STICK

C. E. Sebastian Puts Affairs in Shape, but Says "They'll Have to Carry Me from Office on Cot."

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—Mayor Charles E. Sebastian began putting his affairs in order today to face his future which his attorney, Earl Rogers, said consists of "eight months to live," according to a group of physicians. The mayor was said to be suffering from Bright's disease in an advanced stage.

Sebastian and his friends debated last night the advisability of the mayor resigning to get complete rest. The mayor settled the matter by declaring:

"They may have to carry me out of my office on a cot, but I'll never quit."

Earl Rogers said the mayor's decision to "see things through" was occasioned by rumors of renewed attacks on him.

MACOMB JUDGE CALLED HERE

Dean Franklin Will Preside Over Marriage Court in County Building.

Dean Franklin, city judge of Macomb, has been called in by the judges of the Circuit court to conduct the marriage court in the county building, beginning Monday. In a recent election at Macomb Miss Josie Westfall was elected city judge, but was not confirmed on order of the Supreme court, which decided, by a vote of 4 to 3, that women cannot vote for city judge.

BEISSWANGER, NILES' OLD J. P., IS AT IT AGAIN

Henry Friend Arrested on Warrant Sworn Out for Son Milton.

Fred Beisswanger, justice of the peace, who gave Niles, Ill., distinction through his particular methods of "getting the coin," is again in his glory—meeting all motorists who look like ready money.

"Fred," as he is familiarly called by those who accompany him downstairs to the saloon under his office during frequent adjournments of "court," saved himself from serious difficulties with the law two years ago by resigning, but he reëstablished himself in power at the subsequent election. He was haled into court by former County Judge John E. Owens for what the jurist termed "gross irregularities." Perhaps when State's Attorney Hoyne reads the following tale he will dust off the old files and start the machinery of the law in motion again.

Case of Henry Friend.

At any rate, here's the story: On Sunday, July 16, Henry Friend, a State street merchant, accompanied by his wife and minor son, Milton, and two friends and their wives, crossed into Morton Grove from Evanston at the rate of speed designated on the sign boards. There was absolutely no interference with the trip—not even a suspicion or accusation that the speed laws were violated.

Yesterday, when an individual, who identified himself as "Harry Caunstany, constable for Justice Beisswanger," appeared at the Friend residence, Buena and Hazel avenues, with a state warrant, he demanded "the body of Milton Friend."

Conversation with the aforesaid gentleman of the law developed the fact that he took the number of the automobile, learned the name of its owner, and Beisswanger did the rest.

"My son is not home," said Mr. Friend.

He Wasn't Particular.

"Well, then, I'll arrest you," replied the constable, "and if you don't step lively I'll call fifty city police and a patrol wagon."

By furnishing Constable Caunstany with perhaps the best meal he ever ate and topping off the feast with a couple of cold bottles of beer, Mr. Friend prevailed upon the minion of the law to wait a while. Then constable and prisoner drove in the prisoner's automobile to the justice shop.

"Your son is accused of speeding, and he is a minor, and as you failed to produce him you must answer," said Justice Beisswanger, according to Mr. Friend.

"There was no speeding to begin with, and if there possibly had been, my son was to blame because he drove the car," pleaded Mr. Friend. I am guilty of no wrongful act."

"You are his father; you stand convicted of speeding and it will cost you $11.50," commanded the judge.

Tells Story to Friend.

Mr. Friend was on the point of asking who signed the complaint, where were the witnesses, why didn't they appear to press the charge, and a few other pertinent things, but decided his time was worth more than Beisswanger's loot. He told the story to a friend and that friend communicated with THE TRIBUNE.

Justice Beisswanger was "out of town" when the reporter called, but his son, Oscar Beisswanger, who manages his father's saloon, restaurant, and hotel supply house on the north side, said he was present at the "hearing" and could give full information.

"You see, it was this way," said Oscar. "Mr. Friend talked rough to father and the constable, and when father pointed out that the automobile was in the son's name, and convinced Mr. Friend that he was responsible because the son was only 19 years old, Mr. Friend pleaded guilty. The reason for the delay in serving the warrant was that father had so many other cases ahead of it."

More Enduring than Bronze.

Part of Beisswanger's fame is due to a matrimonial bureau, which he conducted. Then he was locked up a few times by the Chicago police for operating confidence games and for larceny, through a trick he had of selling an interest in various enterprises and then firing the investor.

Last September he again attained public mention when Jailer Will T. Davies discovered he had two life guests because they were unable to pay $100 fines inflicted by Beisswanger for alleged disorderly conduct.

SINGER SUES SON OF EX-ALD. KUNZ

Jilted Her After He Became Lawyer, She Says, and She Wants $15,000.

'SOCIETY GIRL' FOR HIM.

At the beginning of his career as a lawyer Medard A. Kunz, son of former Ald. Stanley Kunz, has become ensnared in a breach of promise suit, the præcipe of which was filed yesterday.

About seven months ago young Kunz was introduced to Sophie Dzielski, a cabaret singer, and fell violently in love with her, and she reciprocated according to the girl's lawyer, A. A. Worsley, who also asserts that Kunz proposed to Miss Dzielski and was accepted.

At that time Medard was a struggling law student, but the singer avers he promised that just as soon as he passed the bar examination which would qualify him to hang out his sign he would marry her.

But the law student no sooner became a full fledged lawyer than he decided, the lawyer says, to throw over the cabaret singer and to marry a woman of society. This remark is attributed to the young man:

"Why, Sophie, I can't marry you now. I'm a lawyer, and must marry some one equal to my station in life."

That was too much for Sophie, who claims she has been loyal to the alderman's son, and as a result she filed the præcipe for a breach of promise suit, in which she demands $15,000 damages. Miss Dzielski firmly believes her fiancé is infatuated with some woman of considerable social prominence.

As to the identity of the mysterious society belle, none would furish any light.

THREE BOMBS EXPLODED IN THE MENACE PRESSROOM.

Anti-Catholic Newspaper at Aurora, Mo., Damaged by Blast Followed by Fire.

Aurora, Mo., July 29.—The presses of the Menace, an anti-Catholic newspaper, were damaged early today by the explosion of three bombs.

No one was injured, although the night watchman was in the building at the time.

The bombs had been placed under the floor, which was badly damaged, and some loose paper was set on fire by the explosion. The firemen put out the blaze before it had time to spread.

No arrests have been made. Damage is estimated at about $1,000. The presses had just completed a run of this week's Menace when the bombs exploded.

PATTEN FOR HIGHWAY PLAN.

Writes Sheridan Road Improvement Association He Approves Chicago-Milwaukee Project.

James A. Patten has given his hearty approval of the plan to construct the Chicago-Milwaukee highway. In a letter to the Sheridan Road Improvement association Mr. Patten says:

"This matter, I believe, is of pressing necessity to north shore residents, and I hope it will go through and give us a road that we can all be proud of."

Harrison B. Riley and Hubert Burnham also indorsed the plan. These indorsements, John H. Hardin, vice president of the association, believes indicate that all opposition to the project in Evanston and elsewhere will soon be withdrawn.

LANDIS CALLS LOAN SHARKS TO EXPLAIN BANKRUPTCIES.

Judge Investigates Complaints of Bankrupts That Usurious Rates of Interest Wrecked Them.

Judge Landis yesterday subpœnaed twenty-one loan sharks to appear before him tomorrow and explain why they forced seven railroad, street railway, and department store employés into bankruptcy during the last week. The victims are being represented by Attorneys Callahan & Callahan.

All the bankrupts say they have been pushed against the financial wall by the usurious rates of interest charged on supposed temporary loans.

FRED ABLE TO WALK AGAIN.

Boy Is Recuperating at Summer Camp of Boys' Club at Winona, Ind.

Fred Bohringer is having the time of his life. He is a guest of the Chicago Boys' club at the summer camp in Winona, Ind., and after several years of almost complete helplessness he is said to be on the way to recovery. He was operated upon by a specialist and a crippled leg was straightened. A few weeks' rest was needed, and John Witter, superintendent of the summer camp, has placed Fred with the outing group. Sixty other boys are getting exercise and health in the Winona camp.

BOY KILLED BY AUTO TRUCK.

Falls from Coal Wagon and Is Fatally Crushed Under Wheels.

Michael Rizzio, 8 years old, was fatally injured yesterday when he fell off an auto truck of the Consumers' company, at the rear of 755 South State street. The wheels passed over his body. He was hurried to St. Luke's hospital, where he died shortly after his arrival.

WILSON INVADES P.O. DEPARTMENT FOR CAMPAIGNER

First Assistant Roper, with Political Data at Finger Tips, to Help McCormick.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—First Assistant Postmaster General Roper has resigned his office, at the request of President Wilson, to become executive assistant to Vance C. McCormick, chairman of the Democratic national committee, who is managing the president's campaign for reëlection.

Mr. Roper's resignation will be formally announced Monday.

Republican and northern Democratic leaders were amazed today when they heard of the intention of the president to use Roper in the campaign this year. They asserted that it was nothing more nor less than a prostitution of the postoffice service to his own political purposes.

As first assistant postmaster general Mr. Roper has had absolute charge over the 25,000 postoffices and their employés throughout the country.

He has had charge of the appointment of postmasters, has a record of their local political affiliations, together with lists of their backers for each office, and probably has more political information at his command than any other individual in the United States.

Knows Political Lineups.

Democratic senators and congressmen, throughout the Wilson administration, have complained bitterly at times because the postmaster general insisted upon most comprehensive detailed statements of local political situations before he would consent to naming a postmaster.

The congressmen and senators believed the postmaster general should have accepted their recommendations without question, inasmuch as the postmaster appointments would be exclusive patronage.

These statements were all filed with Mr. Roper, the first assistant postmaster general. Today, by referring to his files, Roper can tell the exact political lineup in any hamlet in the United States, so far as the Democratic party is concerned.

Those Democrats who approve the use of Roper in the campaign insist the president has made a master stroke in asking him to resign in order to become McCormick's assistant.

These who disapprove of his use say that the president has merely carted the postoffice department into politics through the back door instead of the front.

Asks Wilson to Change Mind.

One Democratic senator admitted today having urged the president's campaign leaders not to use Roper and to insist that the president change his mind with respect to appointing him.

"The mere fact that Roper has resigned," this senator said, "does not give him a clean bill of health. Roper is a southerner, from South Carolina, and has never had any experience in national politics. In the postoffice department he has stirred up all kinds of trouble. Do you think he would be wanted except for the information he has at his command? And do you think he will lock up that information when he resigns?"

GOSPEL AUTO TO MAKE TOUR.

Bible Mission Rescue Workers to Journey to Oak Park Today.

Memories of the old time circuit rider will be revived today when a band of workers from the Bible rescue mission at 626 West Madison street will journey to Oak Park for an open air service in Scoville place. You Will Like Olive Oil
Once You Taste MARDEN'S

If you don't care much for olive oil it is because the brand you are using has been made "neutral" in taste or perhaps blended into an artificial flavor. Make the acquaintance of the real olive flavor as you find it in Marden's and you will like olive oil. Marden's is the health food of epicures.

We import this special oil direct from Spain where the finest olives grow. Your dealer can get it for you if he hasn't it in stock and will present you with a copy of College Inn Salads, a collection of special recipes. Or if you prefer, write direct and we will see that you are supplied with both the oil and book.

WHY ON BORDER? MAJ. GEN. PARKER ANSWERS PLAINT

War Peril Not Past—Trained Troops and Officers' Reserve Being Created.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

Brownsville, Tex., July 29.—[Special.]—"What are we here for?" is the question that every militiaman from Brownsville, Tex., to San Diego, Cal., has been asking since he reached the border.

In today's issue of the Illinois Cavalryman, the newspaper issued by the Illinois regiment stationed here, Brig. Gen. James Parker undertakes to answer the question. The Illinois Cavalaryman has extended to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE permission to reproduce Gen. Parker's statement. The statement follows:

"The question now is being asked by many men of the state troops here in camp, 'What are we here for?' It is well that an answer be made to this question, and that it be kept in mind by all. The government and the people certainly appreciate the sacrifices that are being made by officers and men of the state troops in performing this service.

Says War Still Threatens.

"They have left their homes and families. They have left important positions, they have come to a hot and sometimes disagreeable climate.

"But they should feel that what they are doing is not being done in vain, that they are rendering to this country a wonderful service, that they should be thanked and are being thanked by the people for patriotic service done for the country.

"What is this service? In the first place, the country was and is still threatened by war. Conditions on the other side of the Rio Grande are worse than ever before. Villa is still at large. He is likely to make another raid. The temper of the American people becomes more and more impatient. The people are realizing that the prestige of the country is suffering. Unforeseen situations are constantly occurring and some of the situations may demand action.

Says Men Must Be Trained.

"It is therefore apparent that this may be of service as a fighting force. It is, therefore, apparent that it should become prepared in time. This can only be accomplished by long hours of drill each day and by enthusiastic work.

"Secondly, it is desired to exercise diplomatic pressure and the existence of a large armed force is necessary. It goes without saying that this armed force should be well trained and fit for fighting. It should be trained in drills of precision, close order drills, because these bring about discipline and prompt obedience to commands. It should be drilled in target practice so that when it goes into fire its fire will be formidable. A soldier who cannot shoot is not half a soldier.

Grow Inured to Hardships.

"It should be drilled in marching so that troops may be concentrated quickly at important points, that our army shall be able to pursue the enemy and defeat it. It should be trained in camping and all the various duties of the soldier in camp; sanitation, cooking and the care of arms and equipment, etc., in order that it may be always ready for duty and so that it may move in campaign without confusion.

"The very fact that the weather is hot or wet, that the camps are dusty or muddy, prepares the troops for the inevitable conditions of a campaign and for the hardships that they may have to undergo. It is well therefore that the troops should become hardened and accustomed to undesirable conditions such as these.

Creating Reserve of Officers.

"Thirdly, we are here because this is the greatest step toward preparedness the United States has ever taken. We are training men and especially officers for future wars. In case of any great war we will need an immense army of millions of fighting men and to train them we will need tens of thousands of officers and noncommissioned officers, as drill masters.

"The national guard is a school for officers of volunteers or of our conscript army. It is to the national guard largely that we must look for the men with military training who are to whip our millions of conscripts into shape. This concentration on the main border, therefore, is a great school of military training. We must perfect it, see that none of our time is wasted.

All Liable for Service.

"Every man of us must remember that, whether married or not, no matter what our home ties are, in a war with a first class power every American will be expected and compelled to do his duty and, if he has military knowledge, to place it at the service of the republic. It is easy to find men to work in factories or on railroads or on automobiles in time of war, but difficult to find men who will go on the firing line. This is the stuff that we are developing here.

"We hear much about military training camps for students, for business men, etc. It should be impressed on you all that this is far better than any such training camp, and it should be the aim of every officer to make the method of training quite as good or better than those exercised in the short period of training camps.

Will Be Graduate Soldiers.

"This is a training camp, but a training camp that will accomplish great results. Men who graduate from this training camp should be soldiers and not amateurs.

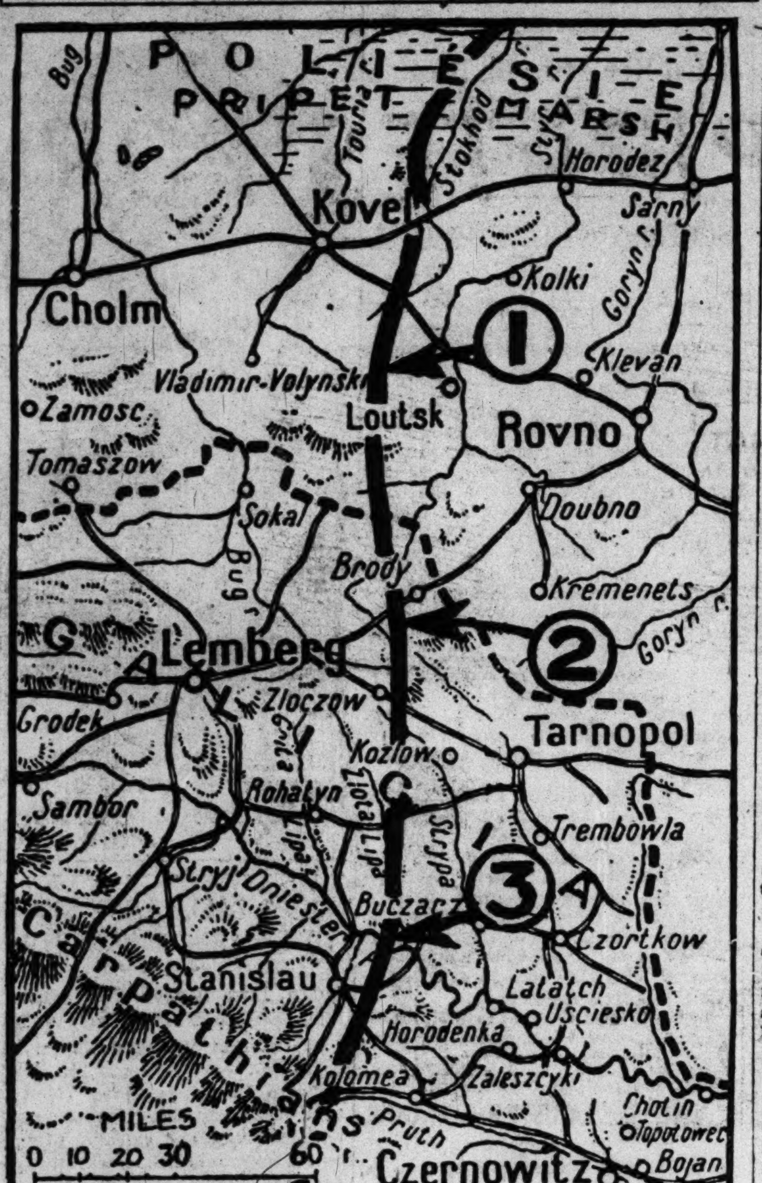
"It is not improbable that a period will be designated by the government when this shall cease, but until that time shall come it is our duty to take full advantage of the wonderful opportunity that we have here. It should be considered a special privilege to serve in this camp, to take part in this work of preparedness.

"It is true that some young men will allow themselves to become homesick, but these are the weak and should be shamed from expressing their dissatisfaction. Let us in this military training school cheerfully give what is best of us, remembering that we are working not for ourselves but for our country."

Van Buren Street Bridge Closed.

The Van Buren street bridge will be closed from Monday, July 31, until Aug. 9 to allow renewals of the foundation. The Van Buren street cars will run through the Van Buren street tunnel while the bridge is being repaired.

MAIN CAMPAIGN ON RUSSIAN FRONT



1—Petrograd reports a further Russian advance along the whole Kovel-Brody front, thus threatening envelopment of the German forces holding the important railroad centers of Kovel and Vladimir-Volynsk. In the fighting in this region the Russians report capturing 20,000 men.

2—Russian forces which captured Brody are continuing their advance along the railroad leading to Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, which is the chief objective of the southern Russian drive.

3—The Russians have renewed their campaign along the Dniester river, in southern Galicia, and have thrown the Austrians back toward Stanislau, an important rail center of the lines running from Hungary through the Carpathian mountains to Galicia.

CHICAGO TO AID IN ARMY RELIEF

Nine Big Hospitals Here Will Establish Red Cross Mobile Bases.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—Nine great Chicago hospitals have contributed to the establishment of the full list of twenty-five Red Cross mobile base hospitals under skilled surgeons and nurses.

The list was made public today by Col. Jefferson R. Kean, medical corps, U. S. A., director general of military relief of the American Red Cross. All have subscribed equipment, and the majority are largely represented by the personal services of their surgeons and nurses.

Col. Kean's list names not only the "mother" hospitals and their locations, but in most instances the directors and assistants of the base hospitals, each of which is organized at an initial cost of $25,000. He mentions also two field columns or ambulance companies.

Based on War's Lessons.

The organizing of these hospitals, which in war time would pass under the immediate authority of the war department and be transported to the base of military operations as they were needed, is considered a piece of war relief preparedness along scientific and constructive lines, and is based in part on the lessons of the European war.

The nucleus for the directing personnel of each base hospital is selected from the staff of a big existing hospital and when that personnel is transported, on the outbreak of war, to the base of military operations, they continue at their respective posts, working in the same teamlike fashion they employed in civil capacities.

Connecting the evacuation or transfer hospitals of the army with the base hospitals of the Red Cross are the field columns, two of which are being perfected at an expense of about $15,555 each.

Chicago Directs Four.

Four base hospitals are manned and directed from Chicago, as follows:

St. Joseph, St. Mary and Augustana hospitals (equipment subscribed)—Director, Dr. Albert J. Ochsner, also chief of surgical service; chief of laboratory service, Dr. Oscar Nadeau; chief nurse, Mrs. Julie Flekke.

SPIKES RIP DIVER'S CHEST.

A. V. Horsman Injured When He Leaps Off Winnetka Municipal Pier.

Alfred V. Horsman of Winnetka, connected with the Mans Engraving company, went down to the beach yesterday with his wife and children. Horsman is a good swimmer, and sought the water, diving into the lake from the local municipal pier. He came up with chest torn and arms ripped by spikes protruding from some sunken planks. The town of Winnetka will pay his hospital expenses.

In the Kovel-Rojitche region our troops continue to advance. The enemy is retreating behind the Stokhod river.

To the south of the Dniester the enemy was pursued by our troops in the direction of Stanislau and fled to positions previously prepared by him.

Great Number of Prisoners.

Details regarding the booty captured are still so incomplete that it is only possible to give them in a very approximate manner. It, however, has been ascertained that the troops under Gen. Brussiloff during July 28 and 29 captured two generals, more than 650 officers, and 32,000 men, including a considerable number of Germans. About 100 guns, including twenty-nine heavy howitzers, have been captured. This includes twenty-one guns taken by Gen. Letchitzky's troops.

During the three days' battle fought by Gen. Sakharoff's troops 216 officers, 13,569 men, and 9 guns were captured. However, it is just possible that some of these were included in the number above given.

The total number of captures made by Gen. Sakharoff's men from July 16 to 28 are 940 officers, 39,152 men, and 49 guns, of which 17 are howitzers.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, July 29.—The German war office today issued the following statement:

Army group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—The engagements on the front of Skrobova-Vygoda [to the east of Gorodische] have now been decided completely in favor of the Germans.

Army group of Gen. von Linsingen—The Russians extended their attacks yesterday to points in the Stokhod sector and on the front to the nothwest of Sokul. The attacks were repulsed. The enemy's losses were heavy. Minor advances at other places on the Stokhod front also failed.

Northwest of Lutsk the enemy after several abortive attacks succeeded in entering our lines near Tristyn, which caused us to give up the lines which we occupied beyond the River Stokhod. West of Lutsk a Russian attack was stopped by our counter attacks. Near Zvinitcze, east of Gorochov, the enemy was flatly repulsed.

Army group of Gen. Count von Bothmer—Repeated Russian attacks in the district northeast and southeast of Moasterzyska broke down with great enemy losses.

ARMY BILL SENT TO CONFERENCE BY THE HOUSE

Gardner Resolution Demanding Data on Mobilization Adopted Also.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—The house today sent the army bill to conference, following an ineffectual attempt by Representative Buchanan of Illinois, who is under indictment in New York, to prevent such action.

Immediately thereafter it adopted the resolution introduced by Representative Gardner requesting the secretary of war to inform congress concerning the guard mobilization.

The Information Asked.

The information sought includes:

First—How many troops of the national guard are now in the service of the United States, in compliance with the president's order of June 18, 1916?

Second—What is the prescribed war strength for the organizations called into the service of the United States by the above order?

Third—Have any organizations been accepted into the service of the United States where strength fell short of the minimum prescribed peace strength? If so, was the minimum requirement waived by the president?

Inefficiency Target.

Mr. Gardner said the purpose of his resolution was to show how utterly inefficient the national guard system of defense is and the urgent need for universal military training.

Also, in speaking on the army appropriation bill, the Massachusetts congressman asserted it was inadequate because the Hay-Harmon bill prevented it from being made adequate.

Representative Buchanan, who succeeded earlier in the week in delaying the conference on the naval bill, was bumpd off the track today by Minority Leader Mann.

Confesses Ignorance.

When Buchanan announced his objection Mann asked him for reasons. The anti-defense member confessed he had no intimate knowledge of the details of the measure, but he just wanted to let the "people know what an outrage it is."

BAKER ANSWERS CHARGES ON GUARD TRANSPORTATION.

Secretary Says Day Coaches Were Furnished Troops Only When Speed Necessitated.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—In response to house resolutions of inquiry, Secretary Baker today made a report on the transportation of national guardsmen to the border. The resolutions asked for information on charges that the guardsmen had been transported in day coaches, that their trains had been unreasonably sidetracked, and that they were insufficiently fed and cared for.

Secretary Baker says the guardsmen in some instances were transported in day coaches, but that no cars without lights were used and that troop trains were not sidetracked unreasonably. The report says day coaches were used only in cases where owing to the urgency of the situation and the large number of troops being moved at one time it was not practicable to delay.

Regarding rations, the secretary reports that where cooking equipment was not placed on trains the men were furnished with money to buy hot coffee, the same as troops of the regular army are allowed under similar conditions. No reason existed for troops seeking food from civilians, Secretary Baker declares, and drinking water was plentiful.

Acting Quartermaster General Sharpe reported that to have moved all the troops in Pullman or tourist cars would have required 3,000 cars. The Pullman company made available for the troops 80 per cent of all tourist cars it owns.

RED CROSS GETS $95 MORE.

Yesterday's subscriptions to the Chicago Red Cross fund brought the total to $246,858. R. F. Conway company gave $50; the Plaza Hotel company, $25; the Midland Chemical company, $25; B. Heller & Co. and the London Savannah Naval Stores company each gave $10.

waive his rank I would show him the kind of insect I was, but he wouldn't."

Many of the men exhibited unfit clothing, and both regiments agreed that they had received far better food since they had been getting rations from the Third regiment than they had with their own.

Ill, Forced to Walk Home.

One case of appalling indifference to the men's suffering was told me, and I investigated and found it true. Robert Hocking of Company E, First infantry, fell to the ground at retreat two weeks ago and was taken to the base hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis. He was discharged last Wednesday and was refused any vehicle in which to return to his tent, two miles distant.

Hocking started to walk, and had gone perhaps half the distance when the stitches in his operation wound opened. He made the remainder of the distance to camp in short stages, and fell while still many yards from his tent. He had no cot, and it was necessary to borrow one from a member of the Eighth regiment.

The medical corps of the Third regiment treated him until Friday, when Judge Horner of the Probate court, Chicago, visited camp and saw him. Judge Horner took the boy to the St. Anthony hotel and called a physician, who advised that he be sent to a hospital. I saw Hocking at one of the local hospitals, and he told me of his experience uncomplainingly and without rancor. He said that until he is discharged he doesn't wish to make charges.

"But when I'm a civilian again I will tell a story that ought to sicken the public with the inefficiency and indifference of militia management."

Hocking expects to be able to start for home by Tuesday evening.

Some Kindnesses, Too.

Many instances of individual kindness on the part of officers were also told me, which seemed to indicate that the men were trying to be fair. When I asked if all kits, cots, and blankets were taken away, how it came that a small quantity of the equipment was in camp, there was an outburst of "My sergeant got me that blanket," "My lieutenant fixed me up," etc.

Private Clarence E. Patrick of the machine gun company, First Illinois, said that Capt. Jimmy Melville had given him his own blanket and mess kit when he learned that the "insect squad" was to be denuded.

ILLINOIS SOLDIERS, ON HIKE, WIN PRAISE OF FUNSTON.

Two Regiments of Second Brigade Do 14½ Miles by Noon Without Loss of a Man.

San Antonio, Tex., July 29.—[Special.]—Without the loss of a man and in fine discipline, the Third and Fourth regiments of the Second Illinois brigade made Luxcello at noon today on the march to Landa's park at New Braunfels. The distance covered was fourteen and a half miles, three miles in excess of the opening march of the First brigade. Brig. Gen. Henry R. Hill, who directed the march with his staff, expressed gratification, but no surprise at the performance of his command.

"I was confident we wouldn't have any trouble," he said quietly. Gen. Funston and Maj. Conklin, who represented him on the march, complimented the brigade highly on its clean cut, soldierly work. Tomorrow the command will reach Landa's park and pitch camp beside the cool river.

Seventy men of the two regiments were sent back to camp soon after hiking nine miles to act as guard and police detail. They made their eighteen miles by 11 o'clock and without turning a feather. Confidence in the Illinois militia was restored by the fine work of the two regiments, and officers at Gen. Funston's headquarters praised the men and officers freely.

Suicide Not Intended.

Miss Clara Rooman, 19 years old, of 346 West Fifty-eighth street was acquitted yesterday of a charge of disorderly conduct. She was found with a bottle of carbolic acid in her hand Thursday night at West Fifty-seventh street and Princeton avenue by Michael Murphy of 5417 South Fifth avenue.

U. S. MUST DRAFT STATE GUARD FOR FOREIGN SERVICE

Can't Send Them Into Mexico as Classified at Present; Governors' Hands Tied.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Moot questions about the status of state troops called into the federal service for the Mexican emergency are decided in an exhaustive opinion given Secretary Baker today by Brig. Gen. Crowder, judge advocate general of the army.

Gen. Crowder holds that the state soldiers are not subject to duty outside of the United States unless and until they are formally drafted by order of the president; that they are under control of the federal government and not of their respective state governors, and that they are entitled to the same pensions and privileges as regulars.

Men Have Not Been Drafted.

While congress by joint resolution has conferred upon the president authority to draft the militia and national guard, in his discretion, the general points out that the president has not exercised that authority.

In the meantime, he says, the status of the state troops "is that of militia called into the service of the United tSates for one of the purposes specified in the constitution, that is, to protect the United States from invasion."

Three Classes of Troops.

There are three classes of troops now in federal service, according to the opinion. They are, first, the "organized militia" of Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico, summoned by the president in his first call for state troops under the Dick law of 1903; second, the national guard, automatically placed in federal service under the new national defense act, the Hay-Chamberlain bill; and, third, the regular troops.

Militia which have not qualified under the new law have status identical with those of Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico.

REPORT TURKS HOLDING UP U. S. ARMENIAN SUPPLIES.

Condition of Refugees Said to Be Most Pitiable—Moslem Atrocities Increase in Violence.

ATHENS, via London, July 30, 2:10 a. m.—It is learned in semi-official Greek circles that the Turkish government is holding up the distribution of American supplies intended for the relief of Armenians. The condition of the Armenian refugees is said to be most pitiable. The total number of civilians massacred up to this time is put at 800,000, according to estimates made here.

MORE TURK ATROCITIES.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Turkish atrocities against the Armenians are continuing with increased violence, according to private advices received here today from authoritative sources in Turkey.

The renewal of the oppression is due to resentment over the Russian occupation of most of Armenia, it is believed.

The state department is considering sending a new note to Turkey on the subject.

BRITISH FOIL GERMAN DASH TO BREAK LINE

Violent Counter Attacks in Somme Region Repelled with Heavy Losses to Kaiser.

LONDON, July 29.—The importance attached by the Germans to the possession of Delville wood is shown by the desperate character of their constant counter attacks on this wood since it was captured by the British.

These counter attacks, according to the British reports, have been repulsed on every occasion with heavy German losses.

In the neighborhood of Pozieres also the British and Germans continue in the closest grips, and the severest hand to hand fighting is going on incessantly. The British, however, maintain their advance toward the remaining portion of the rising ground between Pozieres and Bapaume, still in the hands of the Germans.

Many German infantry units withdrawn from the Meuse area have been recognized in the forces opposing the progress of the British. This is the probable reason why the fighting around Verdun, as shown by the French reports, has developed into almost purely artillery engagements.

British War Report.

The British report on western front operations follows:

Last night the enemy made two more desperate efforts to recapture Delville wood, but he again was repulsed on each occasion with heavy loss.

A hand to hand struggle north and northeast of Pozieres and in the neighborhood of Highwood continues without intermission and we have made progress in all three places despite violent opposition by the enemy.

Since yesterday the artillery fire of both sides has increased in intensity.

There is abundant evidence to show that the losses inflicted by us on the enemy in the last few days have been extremely severe, particularly in Delville wood, where two or three regiments appear to have been annihilated.

French War Report.

PARIS, July 29.—The war office today gave out the following statement on western front activities:

On the Somme front two strong enemy detachments which attempted to reach our lines west of Vermandovillers were repulsed by rifle fire.

On the left bank of the Meuse (Verdun) a German attack upon our positions on Hill 304 broke down under our fire. On the right bank two German attacks during the night against a redoubt in the ravine south of Fleury involved serious losses to the enemy.

German War Report.

BERLIN, July 29, by wireless to Sayville.—The text of the German official statement covering western front operations given out at army headquarters today says:

In the Somme district there was lively artillery fighting. In the Pozieres sector strong English attacks failed. North of the river Somme attempts made by the enemy to attack were suppressed by our fire.

In the Meuse district there was no infantry activity.

British fire directed on French Comines caused losses among the civilian population and did material but no military damage.

GERMANY CALLS BRITAIN'S RELIEF STAND HYPOCRISY

Brands Grey's Reply to Wilson as Further Effort Towards Starving the Fatherland.

BERLIN, July 29.—By Wireless to Sayville.—At the German foreign office today the following official statement regarding Great Britain's reply to President Wilson's appeal for the feeding of the population of occupied territories was given out:

"Viscount Grey [British secretary for foreign affairs] answered the American president's appeal to all the belligerent nations to establish an understanding with regard to relief work in Poland, and issued a declaration which is no more nor less than an attempt to include the territories occupied by Germany and Austria-Hungary into the system for the starvation of Germany which has been proclaimed by the British government contrary to all international law.

"Viscount Grey tries to make the German government responsible for the consequences which this incredible plan has for the inhabitants of the occupied territories. This is British hypocrisy, which in this case is especially transparent."

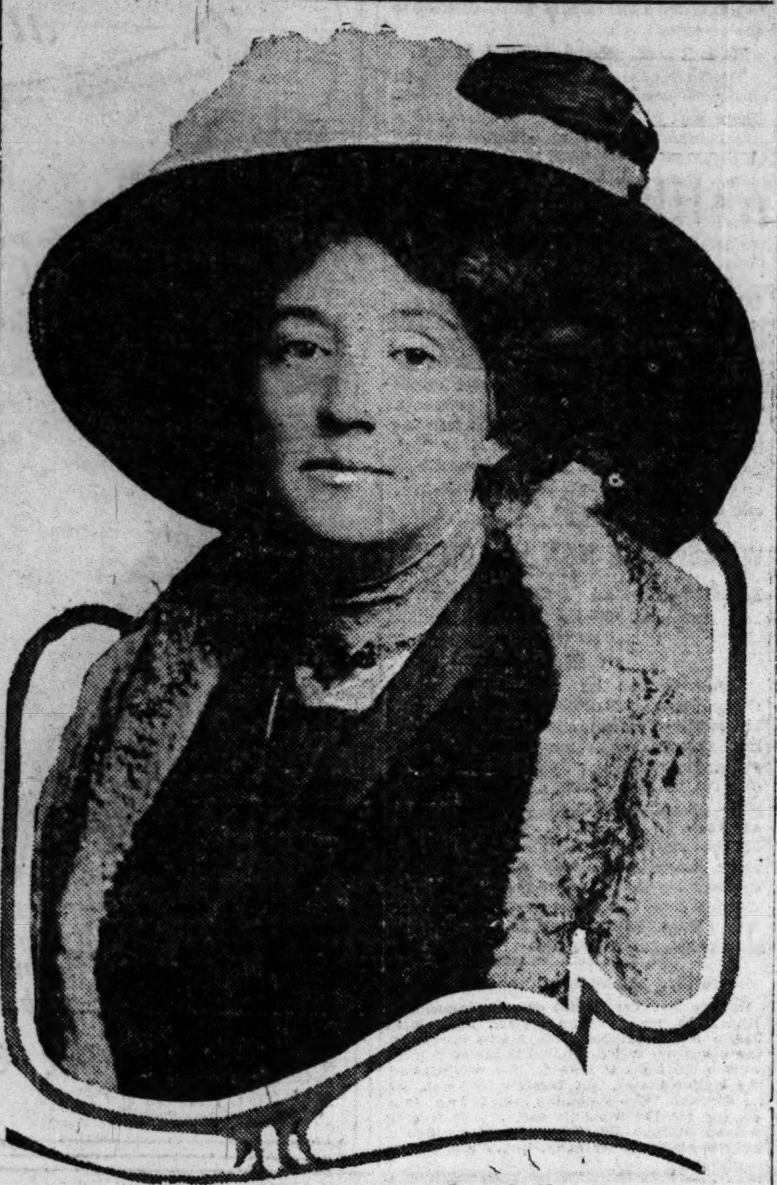
Baroness Arrested as Alien Claims American Citizenship



Baroness Bettina Von Hutten

A dispatch from London on July 27 told of the arrest of Baroness von Hutten because she had violated a war time regulation prohibiting an "alien enemy" from traveling more than five miles from home without a permit.

The arrest was made on the ground of her supposed German citizenship. She maintained that she was American born and had divorced her German husband eight years ago, and that she believed she had regained full rights of her American citizenship. The court adjourned her case.

The baroness formerly was Miss Betty Riddle of Philadelphia.

AUSTRIANS RAID 4 ITALIAN PORTS

Bomb Towns Along Adriatic, Kill Five Persons and Maim Many More.

ROME, July 29.—Austrian aeroplanes made attacks yesterday on Bari, Mola di Bari, Molfetta, and Otranto, seaports on the Adriatic. Two persons were wounded at Bari and five killed and twenty wounded at Molfetta. There was some slight damage to buildings at Mola di Bari.

The aeroplanes flew high, but according to official reports some of them were struck by the fire of the Italian artillery.

Zeppelins in English Raid.

LONDON, July 29.—Three Zeppelin dirigible balloons participated in the raid early this morning on the east coast of England, it was officially announced this afternoon. There were no casualties.

Machines Crash in Air.

PARIS, July 29.—The war office tonight gave out the following report on aerial operations on the western front:

On the morning of July 27 a French aeroplane piloted by Quartermaster De Terline attacked a German machine which was flying over Chalons. The French pilot had just opened fire when the machine gun jammed. The enemy was in full flight. Two of our machines saw De Terline swoop down upon his adversary at full speed, crash into him and fall with him to the ground. The French pilot and two German airmen fell within our lines. De Terline had already brought down two enemy machines and had just received the military cross.

34 Battles in One Day.

In the region of Amiens our pursuing aeroplanes fought thirty-four battles in the course of which five enemy machines were forced to land in a damaged condition. A sixth German aeroplane was brought down between Chalons and Roye.

BULGARS REPORT REPULSE OF SERBS ALL ALONG FRONT.

Counter Attacks Result in Capture of Enemy Trenches on Macedonian Line, Sofia States.

SOFIA, July 29.—The repulse of attacks on the Bulgarian lines along the Macedonian front was announced today by the war office, which states that counter attacks resulted in the capture by the Bulgarians of hostile trenches. The statement says:

On July 27 along the entire Macedonian front there was weak cannonading and some patrol engagements which resulted favorably to the Bulgarians. On the 25th an enemy battalion provided with machine guns and supported by a battery of mountain artillery and a battery of howitzers attacked our advanced detachments on Rahovo-Shorsko front. All the attacks were repulsed with enemy losses. Our troops subsequently carried out counter attacks and captured enemy trenches.

APPAM, GERMAN PRIZE, RESTORED TO THE BRITISH

U. S. Court at Norfolk Takes Ship from Crew Which Captured It.

Norfolk, Va., July 29.—Federal Judge Waddell today decided that the captured British liner Appam should be restored to its former British owners. The decision is against the German prize crew which captured the vessel and brought it here.

The case will be carried to the Supreme court by the German prize crew.

The court held the German government lost all legal claim to the Appam and its cargo as prizes of war when Lieut. Berg and his prize crew on Feb. 1 last brought them into the neutral waters of Hampton roads with the intention of "laying up" the vessel indefinitely.

Treaty Does Not Apply.

Judge Waddell's decision held that the Prussian-American treaty of 1799, renewed in 1828, does not apply or control in the case so as to guarantee the prize crew asylum in United States waters; that the award of the German prize court in declaring the Appam a prize while the case was in litigation in the United States courts has no effect on the jurisdiction of the court, and that the jurisdiction of the United States courts in the case is established by a long line of precedents, including several by the United States Supreme court.

Violates U. S. Neutrality.

"The court's conclusion," the decision says, "is that the manner of bringing the Appam into the waters of the United States as well as its presence in these waters, constitutes a violation of the neutrality of the United States; that it came in without bidding or permission; that it is here in violation of the law; that it is unable to leave for lack of a crew, which it cannot provide or augment without further violation of neutrality; further, that in its present condition it is without a lawful right to be and remain in these waters; that it is between its captors and owners to all practical intents and purposes, must be treated as abandoned and stranded upon our shores; and that its owners are entitled to restitution of their property, which this court should award, irrespective of the prize court proceedings of the court of the imperial governor of the German empire; and it will be so ordered."

The decision affects the cargo as well as the vessel.

The Appam is valued at $1,000,000.

What to Do with Crew.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The federal court's decision holding for the British owners in the Appam case confronts the United States government with deciding what to do with Lieut. Berg and his prize crew, which brought in the ship after a thrilling capture.

Generally speaking, Lieut. Berg and his men are regarded as part of Germany's naval forces, and if that view were carried out to its conclusion they would have to be interned for the war with the crews of the two other German raiders, Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Kron Prinz Wilhelm at the Norfolk navy yard.

BERLIN TO LIFT LID ON WAR DISCUSSION, BELIEF.

BERLIN, via London, July 29.—There are indications that more freedom in the discussion of the war aims will be granted in the immediate future.

The "German national committee" will begin a great speaking campaign on Tuesday, with a list of speakers including many of the most prominent men in Germany.

At the same time "the independent committee for obtaining an honorable peace" will open its activties, and "the committee on the guiding principles for the way to a lasting peace" will convene in Munich.

Declare, However, Reports of Caucasus Success Are Exaggerated.

ADVANCE IS COSTLY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 26, via Berlin and London, July 29.—[Delayed.]—An official statement given out today by the war office reads:

Owing to Russian attacks in the direction of Baiburt and Mamakhatun, our positions in the center of the southern bank of the Tchoruk river, our troops are maintaining in successive lines the execution of counter attacks and are retiring in order. Our troops on the left wing north of the Tchoruk in the littoral region also retired voluntarily on our order, following the movement against the center.

Consequently the places of Baiburt, Gumushkhaneh, and Erzingan fell into the enemy's hands. The advance, which the Russians were able to accomplish only with bloody losses, cannot change our general situation on this front.

Russ Exaggerate Reports.

The exaggerated Russian official reports about our retreat are without foundation. The Russians are representing our movement as a flight, but except for two guns damaged by the enemy's fire, we left nothing. We removed all of the artillery and other materials, which proves the order with which the retreat was executed. During the operation in several counter attacks in many sectors we took a great number of prisoners.

The loss of Erzingan is regretable, but as it is an open town it will not influence our general operations.

On the right wing of the sectors of Mush and Bitlis the situation is unchanged. Activity developed from time to time by the enemy was stopped by our counter movements. Russian forces, which succeeded in reaching the sector of Rivandouza, were chased back by us in several successful battles.

Turks in Persia Advance.

The left wing of the three armies on the front from southern Persia to the Black sea was curved back a little.

This is mentioned by the Russians as a big success,, but our army on the right wing continually advances in southern Persia.

The army in the center dominates completely the sector of Azerbaijan and western regions.

The next operations, which will take place shortly, will prove how very premature the Russians have been in spreading this news of alleged great successes and how much they have deceived themselves in their reports.

Russian War Report.

PETROGRAD, July 29.—The war office today gave out the following report on operations in the Caucasus:

A native division of cavalry took Ezerzany. Up to Friday our forces captured 2,400 prisoners, 55 guns, and other booty. The advance toward Siva and Kharput continues. At Mosul a Turkish attack was repulsed and the enemy fled in disorder.

3 KILLED, 5 HURT, AS AUTO IS STRUCK BY INTERURBAN.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 29.—An automobile party en route from Wilmington, Del., to Hamilton, Ont., was run down by an interurban car on the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto line this evening. Three women were killed instantly. Three children and two men injured were removed to the hospital.

ENGLAND TALKS REPRISALS FOR FRYATT'S DEATH

Demand for Retaliation Grows When It Is Learned Kaiser Gave Execution O. K.

LONDON, July 29.—England is talking reprisals tonight as a result of the execution of Capt. Fryatt of the Brussels, convicted, according to the view held here, of "self-defense" against a submarine.

While newspapers editorially held the allies could not enter into a "competition in savagery," nevertheless feeling ran high that there should be some retaliation against Germany.

That feeling was increased when it became known that the kaiser himself and his entire council had approved the sentence imposed by the Bruges court martial against the British sea captain.

Urges Action by U. S.

Sir Edward Grey communicated a request to American Ambassador Page here for full information through the mediation of American Ambassador Gerard in Berlin, as to the circumstances of the court martial. Sir Edward in his communication said:

"A most serious condition of affairs has arisen, if the German government in fact has perpetrated such a crime."

Ambassador Page handed to the foreign office today a brief report from Ambassador Gerard. It declared the American ambassador in Berlin had brought Fryatt's case to the attention of the imperial foreign office and had requested a postponement of the accused sea captain's trial, fixed that day at Bruges.

Unable to Delay Case.

The foreign office, Gerard said, agreed to the postponement if possible, but subsequently found it was unable to acquiesce because witnesses from the U-33, the German submarine which Fryatt attacked and attempted to ram, could no longer be detained on shore as witnesses.

The Gerard was informed that Maj. Neumann and an attorney from civil life were appointed to defend Capt. Fryatt.

Berlin Defends Execution.

BERLIN, July 29.—The execution at Bruges on July 27 of Capt. Charles Fryatt of the British steamship Brussels after trial by court martial for attempting to ram a German submarine denotes a new phase in the controversy over the sea rights of merchantmen.

The German government prize regulations issued before the beginning of the war adopted the principle that merchantmen were not entitled to commit acts of war, and it threatened to treat as pirates those attempting to do so.

The execution of Capt. Fryatt, German officials contend, is in accord with that principle.

It is hoped in official circles here that this case will lead to a definite clearing up of the question of merchantmen acting at intermittent times as war vessels.

BARS UPON PARALYSIS.

OTTAWA, Ont.—The Canadian government has placed a quarantine on children under 16 years of age coming from New York City and vicinity, as a bar against the introduction of infantile paralysis into the dominion.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The state department of health today instructed its medical officers not to permit children under 16 years of age to travel on excursion trains to New York from points in Pennsylvania because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis.

NEW YORK.—The epidemic of infantile paralysis set a new high mortality record today, forty-four children dying of the disease during the 24-hour period ending at 10 o'clock this morning.

AUSTRIANS FAIL IN EFFORT TO RETAKE MOUNTAIN PEAK.

Rome Reports Repulse of Teuton Surprise Attack on Monte Cimone Artillery Is More Active.

ROME, July 29.—Austro-Hungarian attempts to surprise the Italian positions 7,000 feet above sea level on Monte Cimone were repulsed. The Italian official statement, issued today, follows:

In the Astico valley on the night of July 27 the enemy again attempted to surprise our position on Monte Cimone, but was promptly repulsed. Yesterday the enemy's artillery was active against the villages in the Asiago basin and against the Sperstrigno and Sugana valley line, causing some fires.

In the Trevignola valley, notwithstanding the bad weather, we made fresh progress on Monte Colbriccon, towards Ceraman valley and repulsed two counter attacks. On the Isonzo front there were artillery duels, the enemy shelling the towns and villages to the west of Gorizia.

On the Carso one of our squadrons bombarded the enemy's camps and parks in the Oppacchiasella region.

SOMME BATTLE GREATEST FIGHT OF ALL HISTORY

1,500,000 Men with 10,000 Cannon—German Wall Holds Up.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE ARMY OF THE SOMME, by courier to Berlin, via Amsterdam and London, July 29.—With brief lulls like the short intervals between the waves of the sea, the battle rages on. It is now well in its fourth week.

There is no sign that the French and English have become convinced that the objective and goal they have set for themselves are impossible of attainment. With the force and thunder of a thousand steam hammers they continue with undiminished power. There is as yet no evidence of a lack of steam behind them, no indication of a faltering will.

There is no sign of weakness in the German wall of iron and blood, cemented as it is by a spirit of courage and determination to hold or die, and there is steam and punch enough behind that wall to swing herculean sledge hammer blows in regular frightful effect.

1,500,000 Men Engaged.

After twenty centuries of so-called civilization, a human epic to which only a Homer could do justice is being acted between the Somme and the Ancre. From a million and a quarter to a million and a half men, between 7,000 and 10,000 cannon, ranging from the 3-inch field pieces up to the giant thirty-eight centimeters, wage the mortal combat from north of the Ancre to south of the Somme.

It is not only the greatest battle of the world war; it is the greatest in the history of the world. For numbers, for Spartan heroism, for bravery and endurance, for desperate charges and counter charges in the face of certain death, for fierceness in hand to hand fighting, there is nothing comparable in the annals of history.

All Big Battles in One.

The battle of the Somme is of super-Napoleonic proportions. It is Thermopylae, Marathon, the Teutoburger forest, Hastings, Joan d'Arc at Orleans, Saratoga, Waterloo, Gettysburg, Sedan, and Mukden rolled into one. From the steady roll and rumble, the thunder, the vivid flashes and smoke clouds one might think the gods of the ancient world were battling.

If the German estimate of the allies' losses, about a quarter of a million, is somewhere near right, then the losses on all sides must be well over 300,000. Waterloo with 62,000, Gettysburg with 53,000, seem almost like skirmishes in comparison.

And still the battle rages unabated, such fighting as never was before. The "bloody angle" at Spottsylvania was but a nose bleed in comparison. There is a Shiloh "hornet's nest" in many nooks and corners of the zigzag trenches, and the peach orchard at Gettysburg a hundred times worse is being restaged here daily in a score of places.

Every Kind of Weapon Used.

Between the Ancre and the Somme there is every sort of fighting, with every variety of weapons, from stone age clubs and picks and shovels, axes, catapults like those of medieval times, but throwing terrible mines instead of rocks, to the steel of the pre-gunpowder era and to the machine guns and high explosives of this modern day.

With these weapons is all the elemental savagery that goes with them. There are ferocious hand to hand encounters with no quarter given or taken. Semi-civilized Senegal Negroes are considered "animals" and seldom get quarter, but once captured, they are safe and well treated. I have seen them as prisoners again on this trip. The Hindus from India, the Senegal Negroes, the Turcos, Algerians, South Africans, Australians, New Zealanders, and Canadians, together with the English, Irish, Scotch, and French, are here battling with the German army.

Praises British Valor.

There has been a "last charge" for many a battalion and regiment on both sides. The historic last charge of Napoleon's Old Guard to certain death at Waterloo has lived again and again in the charges of Gen Foch's Frenchmen at Estrees, Bolloy, Barleux, La Maisonette, and Biachez. The spirit and the courage of annihilation of the Wars of the Roses animate the English. There is nothing in British history to compare with the fierce valor of the British assaults against the German lines.

It is impossible to give an adequate picture of the great battle and the indescribably desperate character, fierceness, ferociousness, and, at times, savagery of its fighting. Thermopylae has been repeated again by the Germans. The number of "last stands" on both sides would fill columns of heroic verse.

"Give Back My Legions."

With unprecedented slaughter the battle rages on. If long continued, England, France, and Germany may well come to the despairing cry of Augustus Cæsar, "Give me back my legions."

My friend, Capt. X., writes:

"We are of the fullest confidence as always, and our incomparable boys are fighting with bravery and heroism that cannot be expressed in words. They have withstood a fortnight of the heaviest caliber of gunfire, and of gas, and every other sort of attacks.

"There are no trenches left, but only craters, and then the colonial blacks and yellows, the French and the English—yes, that is more than even an American may imagine. No one can conceive it who has not been in it. This sort of bitter fighting cannot possibly go on much longer. It means extermination on both sides."

All Believe in Righteousness.

Ghastly and savage as is the slaughter, one cannot avoid a feeling of awe when men fight as these men are fighting, when men die as these men are dying between the Ancre and the Somme, each feeling, as he does, that he is fighting and dying for the highest human principles of right, justice, and the future security of the fatherland.

More than ever this impressed itself upon me as the line of ambulances unloaded their wrecked humanity into the Red Cross cars, and three long hospital trains rolled away from behind the front.

POPE PRAYS FOR PEACE ON SECOND WAR ANNIVERSARY

[Copyright: 1916: By United Press.]

NEW YORK, July 29.—The United Press today received the following message from Pope Benedict, through the agency of Cardinal Gasparri:

ROME.—To the United Press Association, New York, U. S. A.: I have presented your telegram to the holy father. His holiness is grateful for your respect and confidence in the holy see.

He prays that the Lord of Mercies, moved by the prayers of innocent children imploring peace on this second anniversary of the terrible conflict, shall deign to end speedily this awful carnage. CARDINAL GASPARRI.

The above translation of the message transmitted by the papal secretary of state was made by Mgr. Lavalle of St. Patrick's cathedral, who, on behalf of Cardinal Farley, added:

"His eminence, Cardinal Farley, is not at home, but his whole heart reechoes the sentiment of the holy father.

"By the cardinal's direction all the priests are praying for peace every day at the altar. They are constantly urging to the same pious practice all the people, and especially the innocent children, so touchingly alluded to in the papal telegram."

BRONX CAR STRIKE SPREADS; MOTORMAN KILLS CHILD.

Employes of Third Avenue Line Vote for Walkout—Police Powerless to Prevent Rioting.

New York, July 29.—After many street demonstrations tonight the strike of motormen and conductors, which for several days has paralyzed surface car traffic in the Bronx and adjoining portions of Westchester county, spread to the lines of the Third Avenue railway in Manhattan.

Cars were stoned and there were scenes of disorder that the police apparently were unable to control for several hours. A temporary suspension of service was ordered, but later an attempt was made to run cars with uniformed police guards on board.

At a massmeeting attended by several hundred employés of the Third Avenue railway it was decided to strike in sympathy for the men now out in the Bronx and Westchester county.

Pauline Cohen, 4 years old, was killed today by a car in the Bronx operated by strikebreakers. The motorman fled, but was caught after a chase of several blocks, and a policeman was forced to draw his revolver to protect him from a mob. The motorman explained that he saw the little girl, but was unaccustomed to the type of car he was operating and could not apply the brakes in time to save her.

Confesses to Bank Robbery.

Kansas City, Mo., July 29.—In a confession to the police today, Ralph Evans admitted he was one of the two bandits that took $1,481 from the State bank at Linwood, Kas., July 21.

PAPER VICTORY FOR PRESIDENT ON BLACKLIST

Assured by Britain Neutral Trade Will Not Be Injured; Curb on English Capital.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The British embassy today officially announced that assurances given the state department by Ambassador Spring-Rice regarding the scope of the blacklist against certain American firms might be considered a preliminary reply to this government's note cabled to London Thursday night.

Text of British Pledge.

The text of the assurance given the state department follows:

"There is no idea of blacklisting a neutral firm merely because it continues to do business with a firm that is blacklisted, but if a neutral firm habitually and systematically acted as a cover for a blacklisted firm and so caused indirect trading between British firms and blacklisted firms, the case would be different.

"Regarding payment to blacklisted firms, our action does not affect payment to neutrals, and we habitually grant licenses to British firms to pay current debts to blacklisted firms, unless it is clear beyond doubt that such payment would be passed on to or create a credit for enemies in enemy territory."

Money for the Germans.

The embassy has definite knowledge that large sums of money or the equivalent in credit has been obtained for the German government by blacklisted firms, it was said today.

No statement as to the alleged amount was obtainable, as it was said such action would result in the disclosure of the secrets of neutrals and firms not under suspicion.

DEFEAT OF SOUTH WAS BEST FOR NATION, TILLMAN SAYS.

Senator from South Carolina Flays Slavery in Speech on Arlington Cemetery Measure.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—"I never believed it possible that I could do it, but slowly and by degrees, I have come to think that it was best for all concerned that the south was defeated," said Senator Tillman of South Carolina today, urging passage of a bill dealing with Arlington National cemetery.

"Slavery," he continued, "was a curse which had to be destroyed ere the south and the world could advance. It was a curse for which the south was no more responsible than the north. Both sections were responsible—and both paid four long, bloody years of penance for their joint sin. It had to go, and while it went in the worst possible way and its going gave birth to an apparently unsolvable problem still I, who was born in and of the old south, am glad it is gone never to return.

"I am glad, also, that the idea of nationality has supplanted that of confederation, despite the danger involved. And so, I can find it in my heart to want to make the amphitheatre at Arlington truly national in its scope."

THE DAY IN CONGRESS

SENATE.

HOUSE.

Met at noon.

Army appropriation bill, as amended by the senate, was sent to conference. Representative Gardner declared it inadequate.

Speeches were made by North Carolina members in tribute to late Senator Zebulon Vance, whose statue was recently unveiled at the capitol.

Adjourned at 4:30 p. m. until noon Wednesday.

U. S. SENATE URGES MERCY FOR ALL IRISH CAPTIVES.

Adopts Clemency Resolution Despite British Opposition to American Interference.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—The senate today adopted a resolution by Senator Pittman expressing the hope that the British government would exercise clemency in treating Irish political prisoners.

The resolution is intended to bring about clemency in the case of Sir Roger Casement.

Administration leaders opposed the resolution. Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman of the foreign relations committee, told the senate Great Britain had informed the United States it would resent any interference in behalf of Casement.

The president is requested to inform the British government of the action of the senate.

American Ambassador Page at London cabled the state department that Great Britain insists upon excluding from England and Ireland Eugene Hughes Kelly of New York, treasurer of the Irish relief fund, his assistant, Joseph Smith, and Mrs. Kelly. They will leave England Monday on the American liner Philadelphia.

HASTINGS SEES FLAW IN WILSON COMMERCE PLAN

Thinks Business Men Better Trade Boosters in Orient than Tariff Board.

Samuel Hastings, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, gave out an interview yesterday following the receipt of the letter from President Wilson agreeing to appoint a commission to visit foreign countries in the interests of American business, carefully pointing out where the president fell short and did not reach the heart of the suggestion.

It was the appointment of an informal commission of prominent business men to visit such countries as Mexico, Japan, and China, whenever there is misunderstanding and good relations are threatened and talk the justice of the American viewpoint from across the table with the business men, press, and political leaders of the country visited, that the Illinois men had in mind. In replying President Wilson spoke of using the provisions in the tariff commission act to send commissioners abroad to gather facts for American business men.

Hastings Gives His Views.

Here is the way President Hastings went about setting the president right:

"I appreciate very much the position which President Wilson has taken in regard to extending the trade of American manufacturers to foreign countries. There is no question a tariff commission will aid materially in extending our business and in furnishing facts to American manufacturers. The manufacturers of Illinois are in sympathy with the president's action to make this country prepare for the business competition which will follow the war.

"I do not believe that a tariff commission will take the broad view of the situation which the board of directors of the Illinois Manufacturers' association had in mind when the telegram was drafted to the president.

How Tariff Board Would Work.

"A tariff commission will enter foreign countries bent on increasing our business. There will be a formality attached to a government commission which would not be attached to a commission of business men. There are other questions besides purely business problems which might be considered by business men of this country and other countries talking across the table.

"We are especially eager to have something done in the orient in the way of extending our trade. We believe that now is the proper time for a commission of business and financial men to visit China, Japan, and even Mexico. The orient countries are in need of our products. The European countries will be after this business when the war is over. It is vitally necessary that we make some arrangement at this time for holding permanently our business in the far east."

WOMEN SEE MAN HIT ON "L"

Laborer Hurled from Tracks by Express Train in Passengers' View.

Many women on the Argyle street station of the Northwestern "L" saw an express train strike a laborer and hurl him from the temporary structure yesterday morning. John Gora, 45 years old, the victim, struck against the pavement and was seriously hurt. Gora was at work on the track. The motorman of the express train blew the whistle as a warning. Gora, witnesses said, seemed to be dazed and staggered toward a small emergency platform, but was struck before he reached it. He was taken to a hospital.

Jessie H. MacKaye Coming Back.

Having lost her partial enfranchisement in Illinois by marrying an eastern man, Mrs. Jessie Hardy MacKaye, an active worker in the campaign which resulted in giving Illinois women the right to vote for the president of the United States, left Washington yesterday for Chicago. She is coming back to be a state worker for the woman's party. The federal woman suffrage amendment, popularly known as the Susan B. Anthony, is the aim of the campaign.

Beans for Hot Weather

Don't fuss over a hot stove getting a heavy meat dinner.

Dyer's Beans are more easily digested than meat, more nourishing than meat, and your family will welcome them as a delicious treat.

Dyer's Pork and Beans are different from any other brand, because Soja Beans are blended with Navy Beans, and they are as much better as they are different. The deliciously spiced tomato sauce adds a piquant flavor that will make you want more.

Dyer's Pork and Beans With Tomato Sauce

If you are interested in economy, then you should certainly get the Dyer habit, because Dyer's Pork and Beans are about the cheapest of all substantial foods.

Your Neighbor's Car

Suppose He Buys a Hudson Super-Six

One thing we can't forget in buying cars. That is pride of ownership. The car is a pleasure vehicle. And it spoils the fun to be hopelessly outrivaled in about the same-class car.

The Hudson Super-Six has proved itself supreme. With this patented motor—certified a stock motor—it has done what no other stock car ever did.

It has made faster speed. It has done better hill-climbing. It has shown quicker pick-up. It has gone 1819 miles in 24 hours, breaking the best former stock car record by 52 percent.

It has beaten race cars by the dozen—cars of a very costly type. It has shown much more power than this size motor ever before developed. It has proved matchless endurance.

Suppose your neighbor gets this car. And you, while paying as much or more, get something less efficient. How will you feel when the two cars meet?

What These Things Signify

You do not care for reckless speed. Such power is rarely needed. But the Super-Six has the capacity. You know it to be the master of the road. It will do what you want without taxing half its ability. And that means economy.

It will cover more ground than lesser cars, without going any faster. This because of its quick get-away when you slow down or stop.

Its greatest supremacy—that of endurance—means years of extra service. How would you feel to have a like-class car excel yours in these respects?

Means 80% More Efficiency

The Super-Six motor—a Hudson invention—adds 80% to motor efficiency. That is, from a small, light motor it gets 76 horsepower. The same size of motor heretofore yielded us 42 h. p.

This result comes through ending vibration, the cause of motor friction. It gives such smoothness as you never knew before. And it means a long-lived motor.

It comes in a car, evolved under Howard E. Coffin, which has long stood for the acme in fine engineering. And it comes in the handsomest, best-equipped model that Hudson has ever designed.

If your neighbor gets it, and you don't, it may mean to you years of regret. In looks and performance, in prestige and endurance, he will have the advantage of you. Your Hudson dealer can prove these things beyond any possible question. And you should know them before you buy any high-grade car.

Any Super-Six owner—there are now more than 10,000—can tell you what it means to own one.

TWO UNDER PEACE BONDS IN ROW OVER 'RUGGLES'

Evanston's Famed Fracas Over Bulldog Results in $500 "Be Good" Surety.

The Neverman-St. Claire-Kline-Payne row over Ruggles was aired before Police Magistrate John F. Boyer in Evanston yesterday and resulted in two of the warring quartet being put under peace bonds.

Mrs. Irene Neverman, 1633 Orrington avenue, wife of E. A. Neverman, an Evanston druggist, and her maid, Miss Stella St. Claire, were defendants on counter charges of disorderly conduct with R. R. Kline, 1631 Orrington avenue, and his sister, Mrs. Jennie Payne.

Kline caused the arrest of Mrs. Neverman and her maid and Mrs. Neverman retaliated by causing the arrest of Mr. Kline and Mrs. Payne.

Two Under Peace Bonds.

Kline and Miss St. Claire were made to sign a $500 bond to keep the peace for six months. Mrs. Everman and Mrs. Payne were discharged.

Mrs. Everman said she saw Mr. Kline strike the maid in the face with his fist.

"The maid was much enraged, so I ran in and got the revolver and stood on the front porch and held it behind me to make sure the maid couldn't get it," she said.

All Over a Bulldog.

"I took Mrs. Neverman's twenty pound bulldog out on the lawn between her home and the Kline home Monday morning," Miss St. Claire testified. "I had a five foot stick in my hand. Mrs. Payne was at an open window sewing. She made some slurring remarks to me.

"I said a few words to her and then walked towards Mr. Kline, who was mowing the lawn. He immediately attacked me and blackened one of my eyes."

Mrs. Payne Explained.

Mrs. Payne explained:

"I just looked at the maid and she shouted: 'Who are you looking at?' I said: 'At you.' Then she began threatening Mr. Kline. He hit her accidentally while trying to take the stick away from her."

Mr. Kline testified:

"The maid threatened me and raised the stick at me. Then I seized it. I accidentally blackened her eye."

NOW, JUST HOLD ON A BIT!

Find Out All About Annie Before Passing Critical Views on Her.

Annie Von Elfinhorst, it seems, is not everything she ought to be. Don't get it wrong. J. R. Morris of Deerfield, near Lake Forest, paid a big price for her in Dusseldorf, Germany, where, for two years she was a valued member of the police department. Still, don't get it wrong. Romer, on the other hand, is a 3 year old police dog, but is untrained. Yesterday Romer and Annie went for a stroll. And as smart as Annie is, Romer left her flat on the prairie and came home. Annie is the smartest police dog in America. Mr. Morris is offering a reward for her.

RIVERVIEW PARK IN SUIT.

Fireworks Company Asks Resort Be Enjoined from Using Its Name on Display.

The Riverview Park company and the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks company were made defendants in a suit for an injunction and an accounting which was filed in the United States District court yesterday by Henry J. Pain, head of the Pain Fireworks company. According to the bill the fireworks company and the amusement park have been exhibiting a fireworks display, advertising it as one of the Pain productions, and the bill prays that the defendants be enjoined from using that name, and that they be compelled to give an accounting of all profits made while the display has been on exhibition.

MRS. COUNTISS WILL COMMAND WOMAN'S CAMP

Miss Lolita Armour Will Serve as Adjutant, with Rank of Colonel.

Twenty-five committeewomen of the third National Service school, to be held at Lake Geneva, Wis., motored up to the lake to look over the camp site yesterday. They were the guests of Mrs. Frederick Countiss, who has just been announced as commandant, with the rank of colonel. Mrs. George McKinlock will be vice commandant and will live at the camp.

Miss Lolita Armour will be adjutant, with the rank of colonel, while Mrs. S. B. Chapin, as inspector, will be a lieutenant colonel. She will have four aids, ranking as captains, but they have not yet been chosen. The commandant will also have four aids, ranking as lieutenant colonel. Dr. Halsey is to be resident physician. John J. Mitchell will give the address of welcome on Aug. 15.

Success Seems Assured.

This National Service school promises to be as great a success as the schools held previously at Chevy Chase, Md., and at the Presidio at San Francisco, the former with 1,000 students, the latter with twice as many. During the month of September a fourth school will be held at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

Miss Elizabeth E. Poe, one of the originators of the National Service school idea and general secretary of the women's section of the Navy league, says:

"The wildfire sweep of the national service idea among the women of the central west during the last few weeks is encouraging, and refutes the popular idea in the east that this section of the country is not fully awake to the necessity of national preparedness of all kinds. One of the most important parts a woman can take is personal preparation for service. To that end these schools were organized."

Give Broad Training.

The national service idea is to train women to nurse the sick and wounded, to make surgical dressings, and to be of use as signalers, and thus release able bodied men for service at the front.

PARK PRESIDENT RECEIVES CY DE VRY'S ANSWER.

Special Meeting of Lincoln Commissioners Will Be Held This Week to Consider Terms.

Timothy J. O'Byrne, president of the Lincoln park board, yesterday received Cy De Vry's answer to the board's offer of $500 raise to keep Lincoln park's famous animal trainer in Chicago.

Mr. De Vry declined the offer and repeated his previous counter proposition—to stay for $5,650, a fifty-fifty compromise on the board's offer and the offer of the Selig movies.

"Mr. De Vry's latest proposition seems reasonable to me, but I will not act until it has been presented to the Lincoln park board," Mr. O'Byrne said. "A special meeting will be held next week to take it up."

INVENTOR SUED FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Thomas Jansen Wants Him Restrained from Disposing of Patents.

In a bill for divorce against Thomas Jansen filed yesterday, charging drunkenness and cruelty, Mrs. Anna J. Jansen, 7142 Evans avenue, asks for an injunction to restrain her hanband from disposing of their property and interests in several of his inventions. In her bill she alleges he is the owner of the rights in a patented photographing machine and also that he has patented a savings bank from which he will realize $10,000.

COAL MAN'S DIVORCE SUIT SORT OF "FAMILY AFFAIR."

Wife of Thomas D. Haskett Gets Decree on Ground Husband Was Too Friendly with Other Woman.

The decree of separation granted to Mrs. Lulu Haskett as a result of her divorce proceedings against her husband, Thomas D. Haskett, a wealthy coal man, was decidedly a "family affair." Mr. Haskett, whom his wife charged with being "too friendly with other women," is president of the Power Coal company at 345 South Dearborn street.

All details of the case were kept secret. The alimony settlement was made out of court. The witnesses for Mrs. Haskett were two coal men, who appeared at the hearing before Judge Oscar E. Heard One of them was Ross F. Marine, secretary of the Power Coal company. The other was John F. Balmes. Marine testified that in September, 1915, he went to French Lick, Ind., with Haskett and that Haskett passed much of his time in the room of a woman who was not his wife.

Mrs. Haskett, who resides at 850 Ainslie street, was granted permission to resume her maiden name, Lulu Barton. She testified that four years ago a woman called her husband up at their home after he had returned from a "business trip" to New Orleans. At the time, she added, Haskett was confused and went into a neighbor's flat and used a telephone there. Mr. and Mrs. Haskett were married Nov. 16, 1907, and separated Dec. 27, 1915.

Long Walk, He Says, Has Effected Cure of Rheumatism.

Hiking as a cure for rheumatism is prescribed by Merle B. Van Houten, who is walking from Los Angeles to New York. He reached Chicago yesterday without having suffered a twinge of pain for hundreds of miles.

Van Houten, who bears a message from the Los Angeles mayor to the New York executive, covered sixty-five miles in twenty-one hours in Nevada—enough to cure any one of rheumatism forever, he says.

WOMAN KILLS HERSELF AT PSYCHOPATHIC HOSPITAL

Dementia Præcox Victim Beats Her Head Against Bed—Case Aggravated by Heat.

Miss Mary Kurs, 25 years old, of 645 West Sixteenth street committed suicide yesterday in the Psychopathic hospital by beating her head against the bars of her bed. She had dementia præcox.

At 8:15 a. m. a nurse, Miss Mae Murry, took the young woman's temperature. When the nurse returned ten minutes later she heard the girl moaning.

Dr. Karl A. Meyer, head physician of the county hospital, said Miss Kurs had been restless because of the heat.

The weather was blamed by Dr. George Leininger, head of the Dunning hospital for the insane, for the escape of six patients last Sunday.

"In the week sixteen patients have died, their deaths being traceable to the heat," Dr. Leininger said. "I decided to try to make it as comfortable as possible for the patients and I allowed many of them to have the freedom of the grounds Sunday. Six escaped.

FEAR RIOT IN SOUTH CHICAGO RESTAURANT HELP STRIKE.

Hungry Factory People Find Eating Houses Tied Up by Walkout of Waitresses and Cooks.

Cooks, waiters, and waitresses in twenty-one out of twenty-two South Chicago restaurants went out on strike at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The only lunchroom that signed up the agreement with the newly organized local—394 of the International Cooks, Waiters and Waitresses' union—was a small affair and plenty of trouble was anticipated when the 10,000 workers in the steel mills and the South Chicago factories began to seek their Saturday night food supply.

The strikers want a $10 wage for the waitresses instead of $7; one day's rest in seven for all employés, and better conditions within the restaurants.

BISHOP'S ANNUAL FUR SALE
The Fur Event of the Year begins Tomorrow

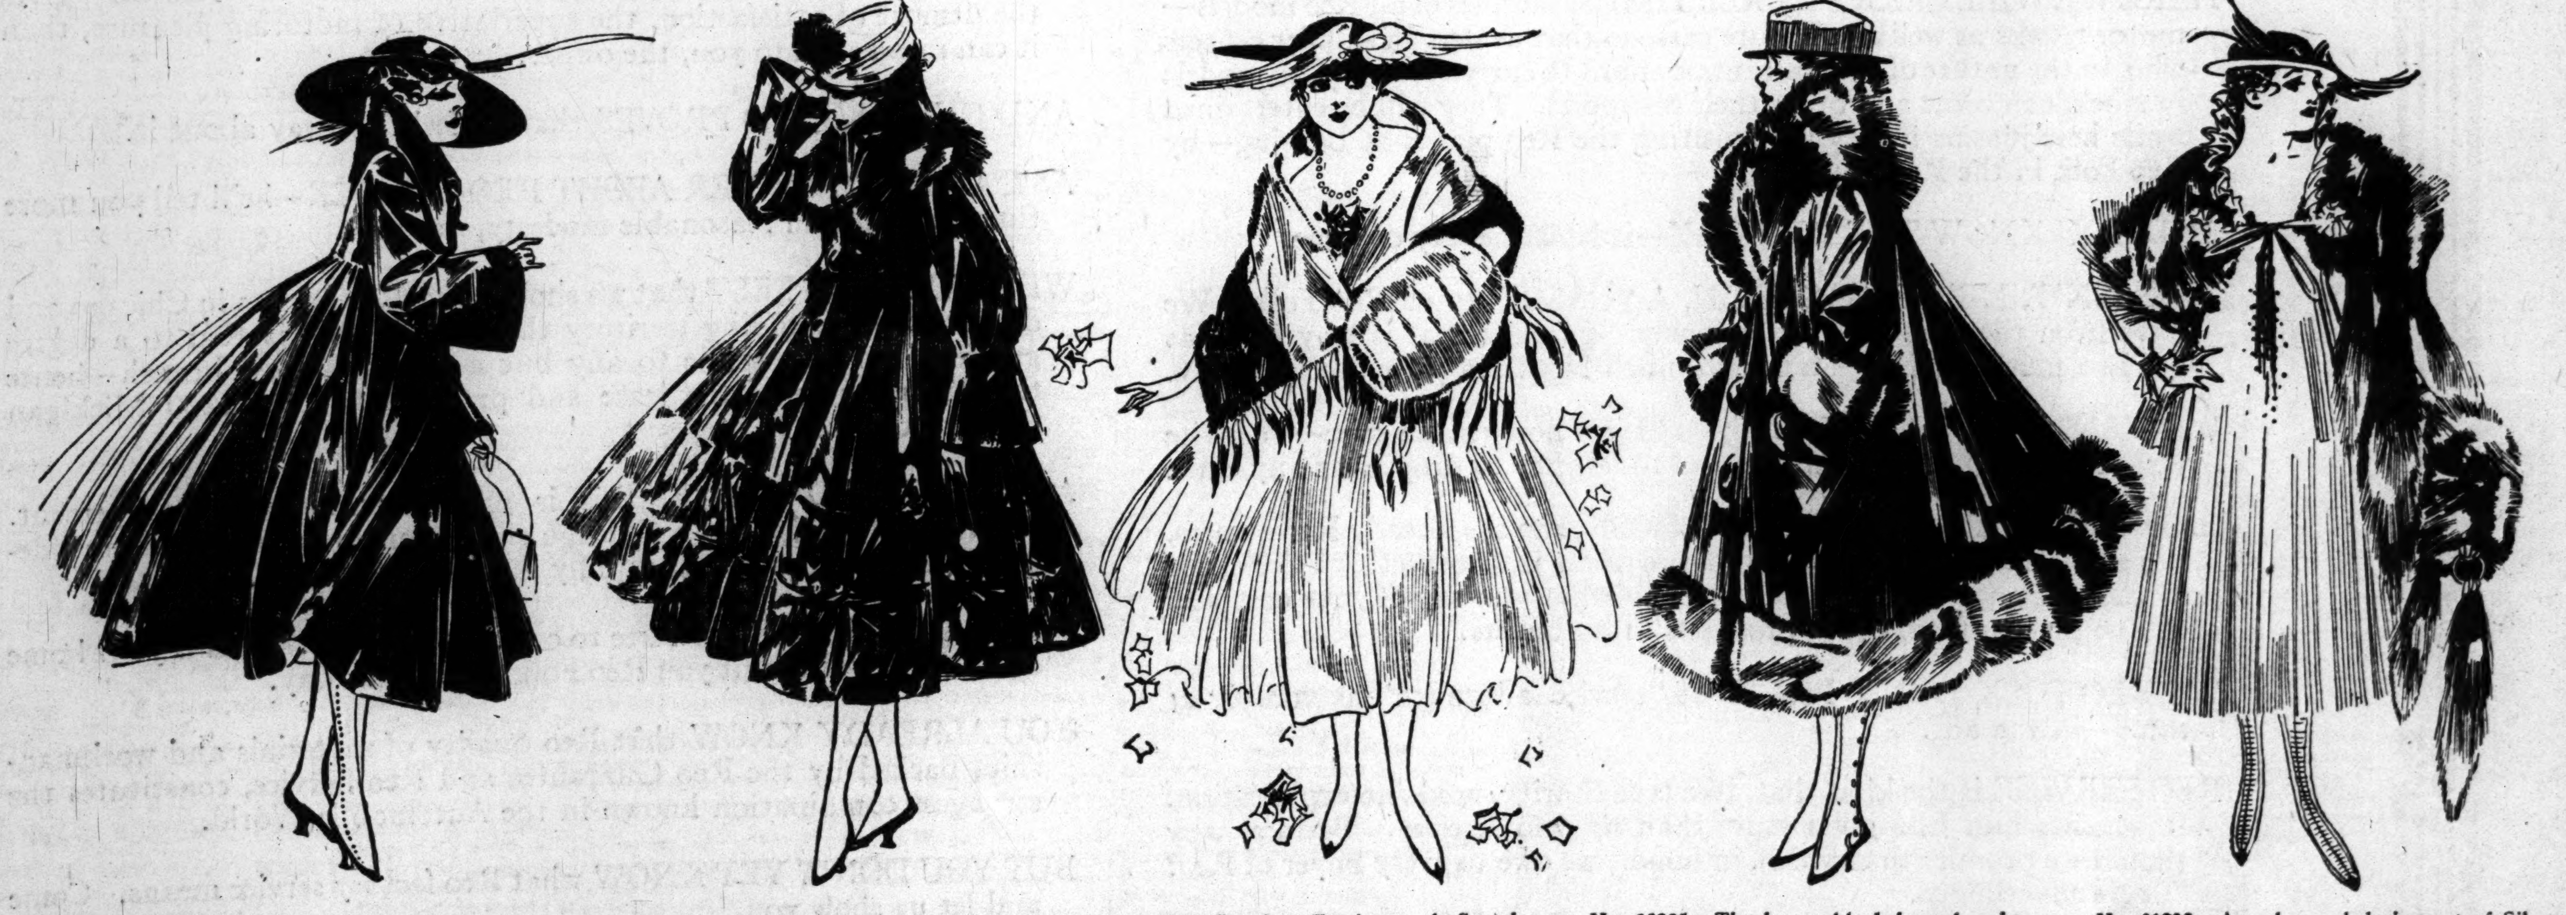
Bishop's Annual Fur Sale has become a National Event. Each year its popularity spreads. Last year we sold Furs from Maine to Mexico. Women who know Furs and Fur values have learned to wait for this remarkable occasion. For weeks past we've been asked repeatedly "When will your Fur Sale begin?"

We are ready NOW for the biggest sale of our fifty odd years of merchandising. We have bought heavily of the finest Furs obtainable, and to make this sale the greatest success of our history we're quoting prices that will surprise the most careful buyer.

No woman who expects to buy Furs the coming winter—though it be only a tiny scarf—can afford to overlook this remarkable opportunity to save. Why wait until October or November and pay considerably more than now? And, remember, that Bishop, the old reliable Furrier, guarantees these styles to be absolutely what Fashion has decreed for Winter 1916-1917.

We show below a pen picture of five of the most approved styles for the coming season. They are exact copies, line for line, of the actual garments. Beneath the picture is an accurate description of each. This is to prove to you the surety of our styles and the genuineness of our values. These five are no exceptions. There are hundreds and hundreds of other values just as remarkable as these.

All we could say in 40 newspaper ads wouldn't begin to picture the real beauty and charm of the 1916 Furs or to convince you of the unusual values offered, so we most cordially urge you to come and see for yourself why Bishop's Annual Fur Sale has become a National Event.



No. 32420. A big, handsome, 50-inch Hudson Seal Coat (Seal Dyed Muskrat). Shows the youthful, stunning, high-waisted effect, the full skirt hanging in gathers, extending under the arms. Newest Ramona collar. Wide flaring cuffs to be used as muff. Very full, 144-inch sweep. Lining of heavy, exquisite brocade. Price $500.

No. 32371. One of our most attractive Hudson Seal Coats (Seal Dyed Muskrat). The body of the garment with just a slight trace of fitting accentuates the luxury of the very full flare. 48 inches in length. Sleeves gathered to form flare cuffs. Finished with deep reverse border and lined with heavy dark brocade. Price $325.

No. 31993. Russian Ermine and Scotch Mole Wrap—the most clever of all summer fur fashions. To be worn in a number of ways, but particularly popular as sketched. White and taupe crepe has been used as lining. Ornamented with genuine Ermine tails. Price, $150.

No. 32051. This season's newest half flat style Muff of real Russian Ermine. Ornamented with tails. Price, $100.

No. 32265. The heavy black lynx forming the huge collar, cuffs and deep border lend a rich tone to this beautiful 45-inch Hudson Seal Coat (Seal Dyed Muskrat.) The garment hangs full from the shoulder, with fullness gathered in at the pockets on either side. Lining of gray brocade. Price $450.

No. 31802. An advanced design set of Silver Pointed Fox. Flat French head ornaments of chiffon velvet, steel and black jet. Dainty chiffon velvet ruffle at neck. The ends of the muff are of Ermine. Flat French head, fancy wrist ring and lining of white chiffon. A very smart, moderately priced set at $150.

Our staff is most competent in remodeling and redesigning, and we guarantee that any furs transformed in this shop will be absolutely correct in style for Fall and Winter.

REO

The Reo Folk Establish a Home of Their Own in Chicago

A Factory Branch Replaces the Sales Agency—At the Old Stand, Temporarily

THIS IS TO ANNOUNCE to all Reo Folk—all Reo dealers and owners in Chicago and adjacent territory, that we have now a factory branch in Chicago.

ON AUGUST FIRST WE TAKE OVER the premises and lease of the Chicago distributors and will hereafter conduct it as a branch.

1218-1220 MICHIGAN BOULEVARD is the address. This is a temporary arrangement however. In the near future we will have a home that will be more in keeping with what might be termed the Social Position of Reo—a place better suited to the needs of the already large and ever increasing Reo family.

THIS MOVE BECAME NECESSARY because of the importance of Chicago as a Reo distributing center. Not only does this territory absorb ten per cent of the factory product, but it is the center of a large distributing force—dealers who want and who need and who deserve a place quickly accessible, where they may obtain service such as only the factory can give.

HERE WE WILL CARRY AT ALL TIMES, samples of all Reo models—motor trucks as well as pleasure cars, so that dealers in smaller centers who, in the nature of things, cannot afford to carry all eight Reo models in stock, can come and bring their prospects. They will be entertained while here just as if they were visiting the Reo plants at Lansing—by Reo Folk in the Reo way.

AND YOU KNOW THE REO WAY—it isn't the way of some.

THIS ISN'T, NEVER HAS BEEN, A "GAME" to us Reo Folk. We have from the first taken it seriously. Perhaps that is why Reo has gone so much farther—stands so much higher in your esteem today.

WE WANT YOU TO FEEL that you have a home in Chicago—we invite you to call and get acquainted and to feel free to drop in at any time.

AND WE INVITE ESPECIALLY THOSE who are already Reo owners. We are more deeply interested in you than in prospective buyers, for in the last analysis it is you, who, by what you say of your cars and of Reo service, transform "prospects" into buyers.

WE REO FOLK DON'T PRATE of "service afterward" as volubly as some—in the ads.

REO SERVICE is the kind that, like true charity, needs no exploitation. It benefits him who gives more than he who receives. Besides, why should we promise that which, in honor, we owe to every buyer of Reo? 'Twere superfluous.

THAT WORD "SERVICE" is the biggest word in the language—and sorry to tell, the most misused and abused.

TO US REO FOLK it is not merely a catch phrase or a selling slogan. It is a very real thing—no less than a Reo promise—a sacred obligation assumed, even though not spoken.

REO SERVICE IS BUILT into the car—that's better than much service "afterward." That's why Reo owners need so little of the latter kind of service.

REO QUALITY IS SUCH TOO it costs us little to give the utmost that any owner, reasonable or unreasonable, can desire.

"WRITE YOUR OWN GUARANTEE, WE'LL SIGN IT"—we say to a buyer—for there's nothing you could want or ask us to do that we are not more anxious to do.

IT MEANS MORE TO US that your Reo—that every Reo car—gives the utmost of satisfaction, the superlative of motoring pleasure, than it can mean even to you, the owner.

AND OUR RECORD PROVES that we feel that way about it.

ASK ANY REO OWNER ABOUT REO SERVICE—he'll tell you more than we could, in reasonable modesty, say here.

WE HAVE LONG FELT that we should give Reo owners in Chicago and dealers in surrounding territory that service that is Reo to a degree greater than is possible to any but a direct factory branch—hence this taking over of the lease and premises at 1218-1220 Michigan Boulevard.

AS INDICATED ABOVE, this is only a temporary arrangement. Later on we will have a Chicago show-room that will be more adequate to the needs of our rapidly increasing business.

COME AND SEE US—feel free to come at any time. This is your home and we Reo Folk want you Reo Folk to feel that way.

YOU ALREADY KNOW that Reo quality of materials and workmanship, backed by the Reo Guarantee and Reo Service, constitutes the strongest combination known in the Automobile World.

BUT YOU DON'T YET KNOW what Reo factory service means. Come and let us show you.

PROBLEM: WHERE WILL U. S. OBTAIN SHIPS AFTER WAR

Delivery of Freight to Foreign Nations When Peace Comes Furnishes Quandary.

FEDERAL BILL BEING PUSHED.

This is the eighth of a series of articles by Mr. Hyde in answer to the question, "After the War—What?"

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Since the war began one of the big cities of South America came into the market for an enormous amount of iron piping and other materials for the installation of a complete new sewerage system.

Bids were invited both in the United States and England, the contracts aggregating several million dollars. American manufacturers were able to quote a lower price than their English competitors. But England got the contracts.

When the matter of price had been settled there remained the important question of delivering the goods to South America. The only available ships were owned in Great Britain. They were asked for freight rates. For some reason—possibly not unconnected with fostering the export trade of England—they quoted rates more than twice as high for carrying the freight from American ports as from English. That proved the decisive factor. The United States lost the job.

Where'll Ships Come From?

Suppose, when peace comes, the United States is still able to sell a vast volume of goods to foreign countries. Where are we going to get the ships to distribute and deliver our freight? It may be taken as certain that all the nations now at war will see to it that their own people are given the advantage in ocean freight rates.

It may even be that for a period after the war the merchant fleets of the great powers will be kept—as they are now—under the control and direction of their respective governments.

When the war began nearly half of the merchant shipping of the world was under the British flag—an aggregate of nearly 22,000,000 tons. For the last year about 60 per cent of this tonnage has been withdrawn entirely from trade and kept in the service of the government for the transportation of men, munitions, and other war supplies. Included in these withdrawals are 500 big ships devoted by Great Britain to the exclusive use of its allies, France, Russia, and Italy.

Up to Jan. 1 of this year the losses in British merchant ships through the work of enemy submarines were about made good by the building of new vessels and the taking over of interned enemy ships. But within recent months the destruction of merchant ships has been much larger. It is semi-officially estimated that the loss since March 1 has amounted to more than 500,000 tons. At the end of the war, it is considered certain, the British merchant fleet will be much smaller than when it began.

Practically all of these British vessels are likely to be needed when peace comes to convey food supplies and manufactured goods in the British interest.

Huge Fortunes Made.

All the German merchant fleet has either been destroyed or interned in neutral ports. It is not considered likely that its tonnage will be as large after the war as it was in 1914.

Meanwhile ocean freight rates have gone up to a point many times higher than was ever reached before. For instance, just before the war began the freight from the Argentine to English ports on wheat was less than $3 a ton. It rose during the first eighteen months of war to the astounding figure of $44 a ton. All over the world there was a correspondingly enormous rise.

One of the great romances of the war—yet to the written—is the story of the stupendous fortunes made almost overnight by fortunate ship owners. Almost any ship could pay for itself and leave a good profit on a single voyage. An old and small steamer that sold at auction just before the war for less than $90,000 was eagerly bought a year later for $500,000.

All Shipyards Busy.

One result of this great boom in shipping was the immediate placing of orders which filled all the ship yards of the United States with contracts. There are now under construction in the United States ocean going vessels to the aggregate of more than 1,000,000 tons. Among them are about 200 ocean freighters of more than 1,000 tons each.

So far as these ships are being built for American owners they represent an addition to our merchant marine. But during the early months of the war, at least, it is known that many contracts for ships were placed by citizens of Norway, Sweden, and Holland. To what extent the ships now building will come under foreign ownership is uncertain.

Shortly after the war began the Pacific Steamship company, a United States concern, sold its fleet, which had been running from San Francisco to the orient, to Japanese interests. It gave as a reason the impossibility of making a profit under the so-called La Follette seaman's law.

Within the month, however, the Pacific Steamship company has decided to reënter the field. It has bought three liners, the Ecuador, Venezuela, and Colombia from the Royal Dutch West India Mail company for $1,100,000 each and will start a regular service to Japan, China, and the orient generally in August. The company also announces plans to greatly enlarge its fleet on the Pacific.

Sensational Drop in Rates.

It is also true that many large American corporations, with increasing export trade, have bought or built considerable fleets of their own, while a number of shipping companies have also been organized to take advantage of the high ocean freight rates which have prevailed until recently. Since the early spring of this year there has been a sensational drop in such rates. In February, 1916, for instance, the rate on wheat from New York to Liverpool was about $18 a ton. By the middle of June it had dropped to $7 a ton.

English authorities agree that after the war it will never be possible to build ships so cheaply in Great Britain as in the past. Workmen have become accustomed to higher wages and both ashore and afloat they will refuse to accept any considerable reduction.

This should result in making it more easily possible for American shipowners operating under the United States shipping and seaman's laws to make a profit. It may result in bringing the more than 1,000,000 tons of merchant shipping, now owned by Americans but operating under foreign registry, under the United States flag.

Push Government Bill.

An indication that capitalists take this view is the attempt of the newly organized foreign trade corporation in New York to buy a controlling interest in the International Mercantile Marine, which owns several of the largest lines of British steamers.

As a further attempt to provide sufficient shipping to handle American export trade after the war, the administration at Washington is pushing hard for the passage by congress of the bill appropriating $50,000,000 for the purchase of ships to be owned by the national government.

HORSE COMMITS SUICIDE; JUMPS FROM BACK PORCH.

Neighbors Watch Animal Climb Stairs, then Leap Over Railing—Firemen Summoned.

An unidentified horse committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the second story porch in the rear of Michael Ryan's house at 3854 West Harrison street. In the view of a dezon persons the horse entered the back yard from the alley about 2 o'clock and went straight to the porch steps. The amazed neighbors made no move to stop the animal, but watched it until it ascended to the second story porch.

Occupants of the building heard the clatter and noise made by the horse's hoofs and came out on the porch. A woman screamed and the animal leaped over the railing to the ground.

The fire department was called to extract the animal from the yard. The owner could not be found.

FIRE NEAR; AUDIENCE CALM.

Colonial Theater Crowd Undisturbed by Blaze but Few Doors Away.

A large audience in the Colonial theater last night watched THE TRIBUNE pictures of "The German Side of the War" while fire apparatus filled the street outside. Scarcely anybody in the theater knew that a blaze had started in a building a few doors away.

The fire occurred in the Delaware building at the northwest corner of Dearborn and Randolph streets. There was a small explosion near the second floor that started a fire which went up the elevator shaft. Several business offices in the building were damaged. Crossed wires are believed to have been the cause.

DANCING AT STORE PICNIC.

Rothschild Employes' Social Club Goes to Glenwood Park on Aug. 6.

Miss Mabel White and Alex Sokolec will be the chief attractions at the second annual excursion and picnic given by Rothschild Employés' Social club on Aug. 6 at Glenwood park. The two will dance modern dances as well as foreign ones. Besides the dancing there will be games for both men and women.

Trains will leave the Aurora and Elgin station every half hour from 8:30 until noon.

TRIANGLE WIFE PRAYS FOR GIRL SHOT BY HUSBAND

Mrs. Edgar Foster, Who Lived for a Year in Dual Family Home, Renounces Self.

HOPES SLAYER IS FREED.

Mrs. Jennie Foster, a wronged wife, did the last act of renunciation yesterday. She had had five years of forgiving and this final sacrifice didn't matter much.

So she took her two children, Myrtle and Clarence, respectively 15 and 10 years old, and hastened to the County hospital for a visit to the "other woman"—the woman who had taken away husband and father. Now she was only "poor Bertha Kubivitch," and Mrs. Foster stood at her bedside and cried.

Winds Up Illicit Affair.

Edgar Foster, the husband, had made a bad mess of things in the morning. He had shot six bullets into Bertha, had killed their small son, Raymond, and then had been found by the police with the dead child in his arms and Bertha wounded on the floor in the rear flat at 4411 Wallace street just before noon.

Mrs. Jennie Foster, the lawful wife, and her two children lived in the four rooms in the front of the same flat. She had thus lived for a year, observing with sorrow the fondness of her husband for Bertha. The climax of the triangle of discord came with the shooting yesterday.

Story of Mrs. Foster.

The "wronged wife" in the afternoon told this story to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE:

"I feel so peaceful about the dead baby now. I know God has a way to save these two souls—Bertha and my husband. I am praying that she may live. I would gladly die to save her and my husband, who has done this awful thing. He is the most harmless of men. I cannot understand—it's not in his nature to kill. I believe he bought the revolver and intended killing himself. For I heard him shout to Bertha that he was leaving for good, and she answered, 'Who cares?'

Happy Five Years Ago.

"Five years ago, we were happy in a good home in Grand Rapids. Bertha Kubivitch, with her gypsy beauty, lived in that town, too. Then one night at the place where she and my husband worked both sinned, I learned later.

"Up there my husband's friend George had done us a service and I was grateful. So, when my husband told me that George's girl was in town and he wished me to entertain her I did so gladly. The girl was Bertha. She remained in my home, and I found to my sorrow years afterward that she was my husband's girl instead of George's even then. She saw my good home and perhaps envied me.

"My husband was brought up strictly as to morals, being a Methodist minister's son. I never doubted his loyalty to me.

Believes Girl's Sad Story.

"When Bertha came to my house some months later with her pitiful tale I believed her. She said she had become Mrs. Brown and was also soon to become a mother. Her worthless husband had left her and she was penniless. I took her into my house, paid her doctor's bills, and gave her my best hats and gowns to wear. The baby seemed to be my own and the children were so fond of the child.

"The baby was toddling about when my husband and Bertha came to me saying that they were ashamed that they were so false to me. They told me Raymond was their child I refused to believe them, but mercy how I cried!

They Swear to Be True.

"As they had promised to be square with me, I left them in my home with my children and came to Chicago for work. My husband gave me a farm in Michigan after that—deeded it to me and our two children. This angered Bertha, and she often told my husband he had done nothing for her and her child.

"Well, my Myrtle wrote me that Bertha pulled her hair, so I went home. Bertha left us to hunt work. We kept the baby. My husband loved the child. It was Bertha's hold on him.

"After a year or so, when we had settled in Chicago, Bertha followed us. We had a cheap flat and there was another in the rear. So Bertha came to live there with my husband and the baby.

"I treated her as my sister. I told every one she was my sister-in-law, the wife of my husband's older brother.

Bertha Goes to Church.

"She went to church and tried to be nice. The baby had two clean dresses every day.

"Then I told them I would get a divorce and they could marry and give the baby a name—a real name. I had refused to do this before. Only last night I wrote down the data and fixed up the papers for the divorce.

"Bertha would say to me sometimes, 'I'm not going to marry that old man.' My husband is 53 years old. He is fifteen years older than I and much older than Bertha. She often said she would be happy to go off and marry and let my husband alone—if it was not for the baby.

"Lately he has grown jealous. Last night she said she was going to a party.

Girl Late; Foster Angry.

"At midnight my husband was excited, as Bertha had not returned home, and he was in a terrible state of mind the rest of the night until morning.

"If Bertha had gone on to work as usual she would have escaped his wrath. But she came home when he was so desperate—then he shot her. A stray bullet killed the baby; he never could have harmed the child. He loved all his children and could not be apart from them, even after he had deserted me for Bertha."

After Bertha Kubivitch was shot, she asked a neighbor to call a doctor and a priest and send for her mother.

When the police escorted Edgar Foster to Bertha's bedside yesterday, she identified him without a moment's hesitation as the man who shot her. He tried to persuade her to say that he hadn't done the shooting. The woman lapsed into unconsciousness.

Mrs. Jennie Foster, the "wronged wife," will have to undertake the great sacrifice of the expense of the dead baby's funeral—although she earns but $6 a week and must care for her two own children.

"It will take me a year to do it," she said, "but I can't let the baby be buried in the potter's field."

CINDERELLA'S SLIPPER

"Have a try at the slipper" is a new game the girls are playing at the municipal pier auditorium. Some small footed Cinderella who had just time enough to slip home last Friday night without her mamma catching her out late skipped away from the concert in such a hurry that she failed to notice that her dainty white pump, size 3, had slipped from her left foot. It was carried gingerly to the superintendent's office, and was yesterday tried on by numbers of girls. However none could lay claim to it, for it fitted none.

SIX MORE CHICAGOANS ARE WINNERS OF INDIAN LANDS.

Drawing for Colville Reservation in Washington Ends with Total of 5,500 Names.

Spokane, Wash., July 29.—[Special.]—Drawing of names for the Colville reservation lands was finished today with a total of 5,500. There is a chance that many of those winning today may get good tracts through the failure of those holding higher numbers to exercise their rights or lapse in payments. Among winners today were the following Chicagoans:

5310—Urey Jacobs, 3710 Wabash avenue.

4878—James Vales, 2841 South Harding avenue.

HIS RESPECTS TO WINNETKA.

Health Commissioner Schneider Vents His Wrath Over Health Laxity of Rich.

Dr. Carl O. Schneider, health commissioner of Winnetka, has apparently become disgusted with the ways of the rich and said some things apropos.

In court yesterday he stated that the health ordinances are enforced for the poor, but the rich do as they please. And moreover, he believes that a little "pitiless publicity" for Edward S. Rogers, wealthy lawyer of Winnetka, would not be one bit amiss.

Mr. Rogers has two children, who contracted chickenpox a few weeks ago. Instead of reporting the case, as the Winnetka ordinance requires, he called in a Chicago physician. The visiting school nurse heard of his silence and several letters passed between them.

Finally summons for his appearance at court was issued, with $5 and costs as a result. Mr. Rogers did not appear himself.

FORGE LAST LINK ON HINDERLITER

Viscera Is Sent to State University Toxicologists for Poison Tests.

Olney, Ill., July 29.—[Special.]—"If we haven't got a case now, we never will have."

This was the statement of State's Attorney H. G. Morris of Richland county this evening as he closed down his desk for a good Sunday rest after one of the most strenuous weeks he has spent since he has been in office.

He said he believes he now has in his possession all of the main bits of evidence necessary to fasten the guilt of the strange air bubble murder of 17 year old Elizabeth Radcliffe upon Roy Hinderliter, the Wabash county farmer boy.

Look After Weak Places.

"We are about through investigating," he announced. "All we have to do now is to fill up the cracks."

One of the cracks in the evidence to be filled is the possibility that some drug or poison may have been at least one of the agents of death.

To eliminate this possibility the state will send the stomach of the girl to the state toxicologists at the University of Illinois at Urbana to be analyzed.

It was planned to send this sealed immediately after the autopsy, but when it was learned that an analysis would prove more extensively than at first supposed, it was decided to call a meeting of the board of county supervisors on Monday at which a special fund will be set aside for this purpose.

The articles found near the old water oak, where the girl is supposed to have died before the boy started on his wild ride for the sanitarium with her body across his knees, also were taken from the state's attorneys office by Dr. Frank Weber, and these, too, probably will be sent to the laboratories for the chemists to determine the nature of the stains upon them.

New Girl Witness.

It became known definitely today that Miss Fannie Inyart, daughter of Elijah Inyart, who lives south of the Village of Sumner, in Bonpas township, will be one of state's witnesses.

Miss Inyart is the girl to whom Roy Hinderliter is supposed to have been engaged, and it was because of this engagement the state will argue, that he turned in his desperation to use the "air bubble" operation upon Miss Radcliffe.

Inyart has told the state's attorney it was his impression the boy was to marry his daughter. Elizabeth's three chums, Ola Hobson, Carrie Cope, and Mary Walker, the three girls who were nearly always to be found together with their beaux, also probably will be witnesses for the state.

Judge R. B. Witcher, the boy's counsel, announced he will visit the jail tomorrow and hold his first extended talk with Roy, and that he probably will issue a statement for the boy giving his answer to some of the charges which the prosecution plans to bring up against him.

SADDLE AND CYCLE HEAD WILLING TO MEET BOYS.

Bertram M. Winston Says Conference Can Be Arranged on Right of Public to Use Beach.

President Bertram M. Winston of the Saddle and Cycle club said last night he would arrange a meeting between representatives of the club and of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic if the boys wanted one.

Aat their own meeting last night the boys drafted a petition asking Mayor Thompson, State's Attorney Hoyne, and Attorney General Lucey to determine the exact rights which boys have at the various beaches in the city.

During the meeting Supervisor Jack Robbins stated that he had received a telephone call from Lester Steers, who said he was a representative of the Saddle and Cycle club, and asked Mr. Robbins to appoint a committee of five boys to meet the executive on Tuesday next. It was unanimously agreed to take advantage of Mr. Steers' offer.

Later a TRIBUNE reported spoke to Mr. Winston, who said there was no one named Steers in the club, but if the boys had any grievances Mr. Winston said he would arrange a meeting with them.

The boys were aroused to action by the death of 15 year old William Ulrey from lockjaw contracted through wounds inflicted by a pair of gardeners' shears. The tool was thrown at him as he was crossing the club's grounds after he had been swimming.

DENIES MRS. BLAINE IS ILL.

California Doctor Says Chicago Woman Is Returning Home to Rest from Overwork.

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 29.—[Special.]—Dr. Benjamin Bakwell, who has been attending Mrs. Emmons Blaine, sister of Cyrus H. McCormick, returned today from San Francisco, where he accompanied her on her way to Chicago. She is not ill, Dr. Bakwell said, but suffered somewhat from overwork and wished to be home to rest. She will arrive in Chicago tomorrow. The rest of the party, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Miss Foote, and Cyrus Bentley, will remain here a few days.

LIGHTNING KILLS GOLFER.

Tulsa, Okla., July 29.—[Special.]—John E. Harrington, a widely known oil man of Tulsa, was struck by lightning and killed this afternoon while playing golf at the country club.

Husband Considers Happiness of Wife Who Eloped, First

David S. Gardner Shows Letter Mrs. Gardner Wrote His Nephew.

WINS HIS DIVORCE

David S. Gardner of 5401 University avenue was granted a decree of divorce from Lydia M. Gardner by Judge Heard in the Circuit court yesterday. Gardner testified his wife left him Nov. 14, 1915, and went to Reno, Nev., with his nephew, who had been employed by him in the manufacture of novelties. The name of the nephew was not brought out.

"Before my nephew left me, he robbed me of every cent he could, because he had a power of attorney," said Gardner.

Letter in Evidence.

A letter written to his nephew by Mrs. Gardner after she had left her husband was offered in evidence and read, as follows:

My Dear Boy:

You will see by the stationery I am using where I am stopping, and, sweetheart, the very same room in which we were so happy. I was to have left Friday night about an hour before D. S. G. showed up. Mrs. Welden told him everything.

He blurted it out that you were his nephew, etc. He asked me if it was so. Of course, the evidence was very plain. I told him yes.

He's Acting Big.

He is acting very big in this matter, precious. Said he would write to you he didn't expect you to return the money. He had no ill feelings toward you if you could make me happy. He wanted you to have me—said he wanted my happiness above everything. He isn't going to tell your people everything and everything will be kept very quiet.

You will be honest with me, sweetheart. Do you love me enough to want me with you? You probably can do without me better than I can without you. I have been so sick at heart, sweetheart, sometimes I think I will jump in the river and end it all. You will write to me, dear, won't you? I've got to have something of you, a part of you, even if it is just your letter.

All my love and kisses to my sweetheart.. From his LIEBCHEN.

CY DE VRY RIGHT ON JOB AT ZOO IN LINCOLN PARK.

Only an Old Cow Buffalo Has Succumbed to the Heat Thus Far, He Announces.

Cy De Vry sat in his shirtsleeves yesterday, smoked his cigar, mildly cursed the heat, and wondered if this would be the last hot spell he should see in Chicago.

"I don't know how things stand now," he said. "I suppose most of the board is out of town now, and they won't consider raising their offer for a time yet.—The elephant, lady? You'll find him right down this walk a ways.—I wouldn't do anything about leaving for California until Col. Selig arrives in town anyway—That's the bird house, sir, just the other side of the monkey house."

Mr. De Vry says that it is not so much the heat as the flies which come with the heat that bothers the animals. Only an old cow buffalo which had been at the zoo thirty-five years, and that "ought to have died years ago," has succumbed.

Timothy J. O'Byrne, president of the Lincoln park board, yesterday received De Vry's answer declining the board's offer of $500 raise. Mr. De Vry repeated his previous counter proposition—to stay for $5,650.

"Mr. De Vry's latest proposition seems reasonable to me, but I will not act until it has been presented to the Lincoln park board," Mr. O'Byrne said. "A special meeting will be held next week to take it up."

HERE'S HOW MUCH BEER CITY DRANK IN FOUR DAYS.

100,000 Barrels Consumed and 1,000,000 Bottles Delivered for Sunday, Pat O'Malley Calculates.

One hundred thousand barrels of beer were consumed in Chicago in the last four days. And 1,000,000 bottles of the amber fluid were delivered yesterday and last night to families to tide them over a "closed" Sunday.

These figures were given out by Pat O'Malley, First ward saloonkeeper, who has a penchant for statistics of this kind.

"Never before in the history of Chicago," said O'Malley, "has there been so much beer consumed in a like period, I gather from talks with brewery agents today.

"The average sale in Chicago's 7,000 saloons is two barrels a day; in the last four days it has jumped to four barrels.

"All kinds of vehicles, including moving vans, were pressed into service to make deliveries. Three big superdreadnaught vans passed my place tonight."

"How much of it did you drink?" O'Malley was asked.

"One o'clock," he answered dryly.

LANDIS KNOWS WHERE TO GO

There Are Several Places Where It's Cool, but He Prefers Ball Game.

Federal Judge Landis announced yesterday the discovery of two places where it is cool.

One is a spot directly in front of an electric fan. The other is at the depth of 5 feet 9 inches in Lake Michigan.

But, drat it all, the electric fan supply is exhausted, and Judge Landis is just 5 feet 8 inches tall. Therefore he went out to the ball game and hollered.

NURSE REVEALS LOVEMAKING OF ROBERT E. SPOOR

Declares Movie Concern Official Jilted Her on Day Set for Their Wedding.

DENIES SHE WILL SUE HIM.

Robert E. Spoor, connected with the Essanay Motion Picture company in the capacity of mechanical superintendent, and also a brother of George A. Spoor, one of the owners, is not going to be married.

This simple statement caused Miss Letitia Burnett to swoon in her home in Waukegan yesterday. But before she swooned she made public some of Mr. Spoor's letters. Miss Burnett declared she would not sue Spoor for breach of promise.

She Loves Robert.

"I love Robert too much for that," she told the reporters to whom she gave out the information about the blow to her love.

Spoor also is a resident of Waukegan, but he has not made any statement beyond the suggestion that he did not care to be "staged" in a matrimonial venture.

Miss Burnett is said to have come into Spoor's life when he visited the Waukegan hospital, with which she was connected. She is 27 and Spoor is 42. Spoor is a bachelor and more or less confirmed in this regard. Also he is a Mason and a member of no special church, whereas Miss Burnett is a Mormon. According to Miss Burnett they had compromised on a Presbyterian minister, but according to the tone of Spoor's letters all the arrangements were without his consent and the announcement was made without his knowledge. Thus he refused to be rushed.

Excerpts from Letters.

Spoor's letters, written in a tone of great sincerety and respect, contain such allusions as these:

"Your zeal for motherhood, to me, is the most beautiful vision that I ever saw. You would and will make a wonderful mother and I surely hope a father will appear who is worthy of such a blessing. As far as I am concerned I did not, nor do not, feel that in justice to you, myself and my duty, that I could agree to this for various reasons. . . I have learned to love you beyond words to explain, and if fate is such that I cannot marry you, I don't think I will ever think of marriage again.

"To my mind it is a great injustice to ask you to wait. . . consequently I cannot do otherwise than unconditionally release you from any obligations to me that you may feel you are under."

She Goes Right Ahead.

Evidently Miss Burnett went ahead with the arrangements for the wedding and invited Frank Huff, a former suitor, to be best man, for Spoor's next letter was more to the point.

"My Dear Miss Burnett," reads this verbal castigation, "at this moment I have not recovered from the shock caused by your extraordinary letter of yesterday. . . . I found when I arrived in Waukegan that it was common gossip that I was to be married last night. I also found that Frank Huff seemed to be the man that most of the information came from, and also that he went to Chicago, or intended to be the best man. . . .

"I at least should have been consulted. . . . I have plainly told you that when I was ready to get married I would tell you. . . . You are aware of my feelings toward this one Frank Huff and still it is planned to have him 'as a surprise' at my wedding.

Doesn't Yearn to Wed.

"That alone would have stopped it, everything else being satisfactory. . . . You must have presumed I would do anything to get married, and nothing is further from the fact—marriage holds no attractive allurements for me and I assure you that any one who thinks they can will and ceide for R. E. Spoor will find they are greatly mistaken. . . .

"This action on your part has changed matters entirely, and after passing a miserable night and considering the matter I have decided not to get married under any circumstances—this is final and positive and will not admit of any argument. . . . In any explanation to your friends you may, in any way you desire, blame me."

Explains His Rights.

There was another letter in which Spoor explained that he thought he ought to have the privilege of knowing when he was going to be married. He agreed that the time might be set by the woman so long as it suited him. Then came the final letter to Miss Burnett:

"My conscience tells me I have acted honorably and fair. . . . I am trying every possible means to forget it and other than notifying the newspapers that the report of my marriage is false there will not be any more publicity, so far as I am concerned, unless it is on account of this man Huff. Some time in the future, if you desire, I will see you alone personally and talk things over, but at the present time I refuse to see or talk to any one. Respectfully,
"R. E. SPOOR."

The change from "My Dear Letty" to "My Dear Miss Burnett" and from the signature "Bob" to "R. E. Spoor" seemed too much like "So Long Letty" that Miss Burnett retired to her room and refused to be seen. Her physician said she swooned and is now quite indisposed.

K. of C. Body Ends Meetings.

The National Commission on Religious Prejudices of the Knights of Columbus held a final meeting at the Blackstone yesterday for the purpose of concluding its report, which will be read before the supreme convention at Davenport, Iowa, August 2, 3 and 4.

PAINTS BRITAIN WINNING FRUITS OF PREPARATION

Sir Gilbert Parker Shows How England Has United in Last Year of War.

LONDON, July 29.—The Right Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., M. P., whose services to the British cause have been notable in the field of publicity in the United States, has made the following statement to the Associated Press on the European war:

"You ask me to make a statement upon the two years of war in which England, with her allies, France, Russia, Italy, Belgium, Portugal, Serbia, and Montenegro, has been engaged.

"Three months ago the task would have been far more difficult than it is today. Since then Great Britain and France have moved forward on their fronts and with tremendous effect—but of that later.

"Also during that time Russia has moved heavily upon the troops of the central empire, and in the southeastern corner of the Russian front has driven in, league upon league, the Austrian troops, has captured sector upon sector, city upon city in the region where Austria was dominant, and has made prisoners of 300,000 men.

Successes in Asia Minor

"Over in Asia Minor the field of conquest has been enlarged and developed. Erzerum and Erzingan have been captured and other centers of Turkish authority have been taken.

"The renowned von Hindenburg up in the Riga district has been driven back mile after mile and Russian prowess has proved itself beyond question. Russian generals like Brussiloff and Grand Duke Nicholas have established Russian positions, weakened at the beginning of the war through lack of munitions.

"Looking back, one is forced to wonder how Germany was stayed in her march of conquest. According to every rule she should have been in Paris at the time she herself appointed, early in the autumn of 1914. She came near it. What stopped her?

"She had left out of her calculations the strategical skill which belongs by nature to the French army, the new French army from behind Paris, and 'the contemptible' little British army.'

Germany Stopped by Allies.

"It is a remarkable thing that on the Western front the only gains of Germany were achieved in the first few weeks of the war. Those gains were of immense strategical value to her. They included the mining and industrial districts of France and nearly the whole of Belgium from which she has steadily drawn practical support and advantage and supplies.

"The wonder is, not that the allies have done so well, but that, with all her preparations and her perfect armament, Germany and her obedient colleagues, Austria and Turkey and Bulgaria, have done so badly.

"Apparently at the beginning of the war everything was in their hands, everything except one—the British navy. If Germany could have mastered it as she mastered Belgium and a goodly portion of France, the war long since would have been over. France would have been a third rate power under practical German control, Russia would have been driven back into her steppes and plains, once more the slave of German influence and control. The British empire as we know it would have become a thing of the past.

Germany Swept from Seas.

"What the British navy did was to sweep German merchant commerce from the seas, prevent Germany from trading with the rest of the world, except by crooked methods, bottle up her fleet to uselessness, drive her south Atlantic fleet to the bottom of the sea, and throttle and choke German export to an extent that great cities like Hamburg have lost the hum of their activity.

Outside the Baltic sea there is no stir of German commerce, save in a freakish enterprise like that of the Deutschland.

"Those, however, who count the work of the Deutschland as extraordinary should remember that it is not original since a considerable number of British submarines have crossed the Atlantic during the last year safely and surely. It is not strange that the Deutschland accomplished its feat. It will be strange, however, if that feat is repeated by many sister submarines.

British Power Still Absolute.

"German foreign commerce cannot be rehabilitated by the activities of submarines. Since the battle of Jutland it can be safely and surely said that the seas are still controlled overwhelmingly by the British fleet. The German fleet came out and then fled to cover again after a stiff fight.

"But let us now take the field of battle on the western front. For a whole year or more critics in the United States whose only idea of warfare was that of constant action, have continuously asked why was it Great Britain, which had recruited between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 men should be doing nothing on the western front.

"They complained that France was left alone at Verdun and elsewhere. They did not realize that France knew she had at her disposal at any moment the British troops which were holding their own line of front and steadily extending it.

Britain Lacked Supplies.

"They did not remember that at the beginning of the war Great Britain was armed on a basis of a mere handful of men; that all the machinery of equipment was upon a basis of the handful, and that having men—a million or two millions—she still could not equip them because she had not factories or munitions except upon the scale of the handful.

"Men had to be recruited, fed, uniformed, equipped; artillery had to be developed and extended beyond all experience of the past. Rifles had to be supplied.

"The one reason why there was such delay in making a move on the western front by the British was lack of equipment. The push forward at Loos was not final and effective because there were not sufficient munitions.

"But what is the condition of affairs today? There are enough munitions because big men have given their brains and skill to the task of organization, because the manual workers of England have roused themselves to a complete sense of duty; because they have given up trades union regulations for the period of the war; because, without murmuring, they have thrown up their holidays; because hundreds and thousands of women have joined the munitions works or have entered into fields of occupation formerly monopolized by men.

"All England, in every corner of it, is alive to the terrible significance of the world fight and has given its best blood, mind, strength, and craft to the nation's cause.

"In spite of criticism and complaint, England would not and did not move on the western front until she was ready, though she was willing to help at Verdun if needed, and said so.

Wait for Combined Move.

"She was not ready until she could dominate, as she has done, the German artillery by a greater weight of metal; until, making a move forward over the whole of her line, with France moving forward on the whole of her line, they both could make good their successes, mile by mile, and steadily and surely diminish the capacity of resistance upon the part of Germany. This they have done.

"What is the position today? Every one of the allies has moved forward, and at the same time, and every one has succeeded, as she has moved. Italy, like Russia, France, and England elsewhere, has succeeded in her field against Austria.

"Germany cannot put forward her men to help Austria. Austria is harassed by Italy and by Russia. Germany is harassed and hammered by England, Russia, France, and Belgium.

Germany in Ring of Foes.

"There is no rest for Germany anywhere. She cannot shift her troops from front to front, as she did in the early days of the war, smashing one enemy here and then whisking her troops over to smash another enemy there.

"Mistakes? The allies no doubt have made mistakes, but England has made no such mistakes as have been made by Germany, all of whose plans have gone awry. England was expected to, and promised to, furnish 150,000 men for the protection of Belgium in case of an European war—and that was all.

"She has, in fact, provided an army and navy personnel of nearly 5,000,000 men and has trebled the personnel of her fleet. Could any other nation in the world furnish over 4,000,000 men on a voluntary basis as Great Britain has done?

Organized in Civil Fields.

"Americans should understand that it is not alone in the field of battle that Great Britain has proved its capacity for organization.

"It has proved it in the civil field; it has nationalized the railways of the country and has protected the regular divdends; it secured the sugar crop of the world at the beginning of the war, through which sugar is cheaper today in Great Britain than it is in the United States, and at the same time has got out of it revenue of nearly $34,000,000.

"It rescued the British people from being crushed by meat trusts by seizing all ships which could carry chilled meats, and, having the ships, it could get its meat on fair terms, and has done so—50,000 tons a month for Great Britain and France and 10,000 tons for Italy.

Supplies Munitions to Allies.

"It has also supplied France with steel, boots, shoes, and uniforms. It has made coal a public military service, and by act of parliament has fixed the profit of the coal mines, and it supplies the British, French and Italian navies with coal.

"It has organized the purchase of wheat by a small committee, which also buys and ships wheat and oats, fodder, etc., for Italy. It has bought up the fish supply of Norway, and lately bought up, against German intrigue, the great bulk of food exports of Holland.

"It has put on a 5 shilling income tax, which has been paid without protest by the mass of the British people.

"It has drawn upon its financial resources until it has loaned its allies and its overseas dominions £450,000,000, and it has taken as high as 80 per cent of the war profits of the great manufacturing firms.

Shell Production Leaps.

"The organization is not ornate and spectacular, but there never was a time when all the people of the country were so occupied in national things, when so many have given themselves up, without pay or reward, to doing national work.

"Its power of organization is proved most thoroughly by the work of the ministry of munitions, which, while under the indefatigable Mr. Lloyd-George, increased the three government munition factories before the war to 4,000 establishments with 2,000,000 workers, arranged canteens for 500,000 people, and erected twenty national workshops.

"As for manufacture—in a fortnight as many heavy shells can be made as were made in the first year of the war. Great Britain has shown her ancient skill for organization in a new and successful light."

Second Year of War Sees Foes Self-Indicted, Berlin Says; Holds Allies Proved Champions of "Might Before Right"

BERLIN, July 29.—Reviewing the political events of the second year of the war, the German foreign office has given to the Associated Press the following statement:

"Unlike the military situation, it is not easy to review briefly the developments in the confused paths of political events, but an attempt will be made in the following statement to trace the leading ideas connected with the political problems of the second year of the war.

"The world war was caused by Russia's aggressive policy, supported by France's policy of revenge. But it was rendered possible solely by the fact that England subordinated to its economic antagonism to Germany all its other interests.

Cite "Double Standard."

"Whereas Germany's enemies regard it quite in order that they demand territorial aggrandizements at the cost of others—like Russia, who wants Constantinople and Galicia; like France, who desires Alsace-Lorraine and the left bank of the Rhine, and like Italy, who seeks Austrian territory—they grudge Germany that it strive to develop itself economically in peaceable competition, and they pronounce this an unpardonable sin against the world's order of things.

"They are unwilling that Germany should become great and strong, because the other powers want to be the economic masters of the world. Territorial and economic aggrandizement has united Germany's foes in a war of destruction against us.

Foes Admit Desires.

"The second war year whose end is now approaching has brought these true aims of our opponents into clearer light. In Russia this is openly admitted, they having an understanding with England, and want Constantinople as their war goal. In France there is a war mad cry for Alsace-Lorraine.

"In England, too, the mask has been dropped. It is only admitted that Belgium was only a pretext to justify England's participation in the war, which was undertaken only from self-interest.

"Germany must be destroyed. Germany shall never more raise her head economically nor militarily. In this way is the goal of our enemy more clearly enunciated during the second year of the war.

"It is equally clear that the talk of a struggle of democracy against militarism is only a catchword used by our enemies to create sentiment and to cloak outwardly their real purpose of destruction. Assuredly there can be no talk of a struggle for the maintenance of democratic principles when one side sets out to destroy the enemy completely, including the civilian population.

"And is England really the land of democracy she pretends to be? Has not the entire development of England during the war shown that England is drawing further than ever away from democracy?

"Moreover, if England had really resorted to war in defense of the rights of the smaller nations, as she fondly announces to the world, she could without damage to her position have answered otherwise than with the threat of destroying Germany.

Destroy Germany, Cry.

"Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's remarks made in the course of the year outlined German aims with sufficient clearness. England, therefore, wants a war of destruction, a war to the knife, which, according to the plans of our enemies, shall continue even after the cannon is silenced; for their former talk about the permanent peace that they wished to establish has been drowned under the shout that Germany's enemies are raising over the Paris economic conference.

"It is not enough that the world must be shaken by a protracted, bloody war. The world must not even thereafter enjoy a settled peace if the will of the entente powers prevails, for the decisions of the economic conference do not signify an economic peace, but a permanent economic warfare which never will permit the world to come to rest upon the basis of peaceful competition.

Empty Words of Entente.

"This shows at the same time that the great words of the entente powers about fighting for the rights of smaller nations and international order are empty sounds, for when Germany's enemies seek to control neutral trade they simply ignore the rights of other countries and base not on the principle of right but upon pure might precisely what they allegedly want to abolish.

"The second year of the war, therefore, shows that our enemies are precisely what they all along wrongly reproached Germany with being, namely, disturbers of the peace—Russia, through her unbridled passion for extending her borders; England, through being uncontrollable for dominating alone the economic world, and France, through her passion for revenge.

"The second year of the war further proved that it is our enemies who follow the principle of might before right. They show this in the more and more reckless violations of the generally recognized principles of international law by the entente powers, not only in the struggle against the central powers, but still more in their treatment of neutrals.

U. S. Trade Damaged.

"The American citizen knows what damage has been inflicted on his trade—brought by the illegal blockade, through violations of the postal convention, and other measures of England like that of blacklisting firms. In spite of his own power he has borne hitherto many humiliations with surprising patience, and perhaps in silent admiration for foreign power.

"Neutral states, yielding to might, had to submit to many illegal measures of the entente powers contrary to their own interests. But it is not enough. With the throttling of neutral trade our enemies try also to place political fetters upon neutral countries. Portugal, as England's vassal, even permitted itself to be dragged into the war at the beginning of the year. Other states, like Holland, on the other hand, by energetic precautions against England's maneuvers, have been able to preserve their neutrality.

Violations to Increase.

"One observes, therefore, in the second war year, increasing violations of the rights of neutrals in the interests of England and her allies. These violations will also continue through the third war year, and even increase, unless all signs prove false.

"Whether on the neutral side any factors are to be thrown into the scale against this, Germany is continuing with tenacity the struggle which will also in the long run prove advantageous to the neutrals, as shown by their experiences with England; for the ultimate goal of Germany's struggle is the freedom of the seas. Germany's sea power, which undoubtedly is quite unpleasant to our enemies, is a counter weight to England's arbitrary domination of the seas, and it will be to the advantage of the whole world.

"Every human power requires a counter weight if it is not sooner or later to degenerate into arrogance or encroachments. Probably many persons have seen this most clearly during the second war year.

Germany Yielded to U. S.

"Germany proved in the last year, contrary to England's example, that in attaining its end it seeks so far as possible to avoid violating the just rights of neutrals. It even went far toward meeting the wishes of the United States in its conduct of submarine warfare in spite of the fact that the enemy was trying to subdue Germany through [illegible] upon its peaceable populations.

"Out of regard for the interests of neutrals, Germany relinquished for the present one of its most effective weapons against the enemy, although it was compelled to wage a life and death struggle.

"At the opening of the third year of the war Germany is able to look back to its splendid military successes, on water and on land, which are not without political importance.

"Germany and its allies remained firmly united during the last year in bonds of friendship and common interests. Bulgaria, as the fourth member, entered the alliance in October, 1915, after having satisfactorily arranged matters with Turkey. Through the accession of Bulgaria, which resulted in the subjugation of Serbia, the way was opened for the central powers from Berlin to Constantinople and to Bagdad, an event of far reaching importance.

Community of Interests.

"The alliance of the central powers rests upon a community of political and economic interests. It is an intrinsic necessity for all four states and it guarantees to them among themselves the greatest advantages without in any way threatening the interests of the others.

"Building upon what she already has achieved, Germany treads the threshold of the third year of the war with unshaken confidence. But the goal has not yet been reached, for the enemy has not yet come to see the impossibility of subjugating Germany."

ROUMANIA DROPS PARLEYS WITH TURKEY ON SUPPLIES.

LONDON, July 29.—All the negotiations between Roumania and Turkey with regard to the exchange of supplies have been broken off, says a dispatch from Bucharest to Reuter's Telegram company.

New Roumanian Military Head.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 29, via London.—A dispatch from Bucharest to the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin says that Gen. Zottu, chief of the Roumanian general staff, has been superseded by Gen. Iliesou, a friend of Premier Bratiano.

Forget the iceman and his sloppy trail across your kitchen floor. Forget your waiting and your worry when hot days make him late. Forget your doubts about the safety of the stuff he brings—the visible dirt, the invisible unwholesomeness. Forget all your ice-box troubles—clogged pipes—hot soda baths—mussy overflows—cross-flavored milk, cream, butter—lost tickets—mislaid window cards—skipped deliveries. Satisfaction

Scripps-Booth owners are primarily persons of judgment and good taste, those to whom pride-value is a basis of buying and who, in their big car purchasing, are accustomed to acquire only those motor cars which are the apex of present-day construction.

These owners are finding the handiness of the light-weight Scripps-Booth cars a new satisfaction and are placing them in their garages as companions to the best of the world's cars.

You will notice them in use by this class of purchaser about Newport, Fifth Avenue and Sheridan Road, for individual journeys and for social usage.

Scripps-Booth owners are your greatest convincement of its value.

TITANIC BATTLE IN WILDERNESS ON RUSS FRONT

Bennett Describes Struggle Among Rivers and Swamps, Lines Ever Swaying.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

WITH GEN. VON LINSENGEN'S TROOPS IN THE STOCHOD MARSHES, Russia, July 25, via courier to Berlin and Copenhagen, July 29.—I have reached so advanced a point on this crucial line of the German defense in Volhynia that I am able to estimate pretty accurately how the forces of Gen. von Linsengen are holding against the Russian surge. On a twenty-five kilometer front are points where the Germans daily throw twenty tons of shells. The present activities began early in June. Nobody dares say how long they will continue, but nobody seems apprehensive. It has rained a downpour and the heat is oppressive. The high points of the situation are these:

The Russian advance up from Lutzk toward Kovel has been halted.

Germans Fight Against Odds.

The spirit of the German troops is not only dogged, it is brilliant. Point after point they are standing one against four and fighting and building under conditions that would dishearten most armies, even if they had everything their own way. The men in the trenches are sleeping on three inches of straw laid over ground that not only does not carry off the rain but oozes spring water.

All the rivers running from this region toward the Black sea are rising. The Pripet is swollen. The Dniester rose three and one-half meters in eight days. Mornings and evenings it is still and clear. Between whiles there are torrents of rain. Liberal allowances of rum and tea prevent sickness. It is the weather, in fact, that is diluting the tremendous Russian offensive. Not a highway in the whole Stochod region will bear the heavy guns.

Russians Meet Great Losses.

The Russians have been working in great masses and their losses have been proportionate. The official Russian list from Kieff gives 75,300 dead soldiers and officers, bringing the total loss to 324,000 fallen since the offensive began. The general tells me he wholly has destroyed one Siberian corps and has put half of another corps out of the combat.

The fighting, desperate at first, now has become mathematical with the result that the German losses are inconsiderable. Reports I studied showed, for example, the losses of one division running one dead and two wounded for one day and five dead and seven wounded for another. Chance shots cause most of the casualties.

Gen. Russer's men came into this region at a most critical hour and literally from out of their trains into the thick of battle. These troops were the first to encounter the Russians coming from Lutzk.

Germans Battle for Time.

The Russians apparently tried for a touchdown at Kovel. They plunged between Kovel and Lutzk and there was fighting step by step through swamp and woodland. In the face of the fierce Russian attack the Germans withdrew day or night until they passed the Stochod river. Always they were sparring for time until fresh troops could arrive and they won time.

The Russians tried the old mounted massed attack business at Linewka. Commenting on it Gen. Russer said: "No other nation in the world would have done it. They were all destroyed by our shrapnel, but since then they have not tried it again. They are not stupid; once they discover their mistake, they never repeat it."

On the Kovel-Lutzk highway a Belgian armored motor car, disguised for reconnaissance purposes and driven by Belgians speaking excellent German, opened fire right into the Germans with machine guns and then escaped.

Swamps Halt Russian Drive.

The Stochod is only waist deep in most of this great bend of swamp and woodland. Hence the Russians easily can cross it, but once over they must cross swampy meadows through which an advance is almost hopeless. It is possible for an occasional man to get through, but not masses, because troops can neither entrench owing to ground and water, nor obtain shelter by throwing themselves down.

The general said: "Owing to the lay of the land here the few kilometers we fell back from Lutzk to the Stochod don't matter. The important thing is that the Russians shall not get farther. Our early losses correspond with the heaviness of the work we had to do."

"The strain was great, then?" I asked.

"It was bitter," Gen. Russer replied. "But the Russians also are men, and get tired. Had they pressed me hard and steadily at the pace they began, and continued their massed attacks, they might have carried us off our feet.

Germans Quickly Reinforced.

"When a Russian division attacks and is badly mauled it is drawn back for repairs, and one almost never has to deal with it again. When I am built in positions and have 100 men at an important point I can rest quiet in the knowledge that they can take care of 1,000 Russians. They are strong, well developed fellows, and good human material, but the nerve of my men is lacking in them. We have our own communications to the capital, and if I lose 200 men at any point I can telegraph Germany and in three days 200 fresh men arrive."

These days, when he is sparring for time in the marshes and contesting every yard of meadow, the general directed the battle from horseback, a fact worth mention for its novelty. In time of such absolute mathematical fighting high commanders generally do their battle planning in a villa or barn several kilometers behind the firing line.

Campaign Explained to Writers.

When two American, a Greek, and a Roumanian, and an Argentinian correspondents entered his headquarters today Gen. Von Linsingen said when he reached the Americans:

"I don't have to be told from what country you come; I know American countenances every time."

The American countenance in question happened at the moment to be chiefly remarkable for dirt. He said:

"Throughout these Stockhod operations the object of the Russians has been to gain the important strategic railway point of Kovel, a town of thirty thousand inhabitants in peace times, with railway lines running to Brest-Litowsk on the northwest, to Cholm and Lublin on the west, to Lemberg on the southwest, and to Rowno and Kieff on the southeast. Hence the importance of the place cannot be exaggerated.

"In the region east and south of Kovel, the Russians threw divisions in the proportion of four against one and proclaimed a 'parade march' to Brest-Litowsk."

German Line Is Resilient.

It did not come off. What did happen is illustrated by the rubber band smile on everybody's lips. This German line must be considered as a gigantic rubber band that can be stretched or moved back and forth as needed. The Germans present no wall here as on the Somme, but a flexible, resilient line that is now here, now there, twenty kilometers back one week, fifteen kilometers forward a fortnight later. It bulges and bends, but does not snap.

That these observations are not founded on hearsay nor on map talks back in headquarters may be indicated by the fact that at the instant most of the notes on which this cablegram is based were made I was at a bulge which carried the German line one kilometer deep into the Russian position.

Russian Snipers In Trees.

Twelve hundred feet away Russian sharpshooters were sitting in trees, in a badly shattered switchhouse. Eight hundred meters away another detachment was known to be sitting, and the Germans occasionally threw them a mine as a greeting. In a wood 1,200 meters away some Russian and German patrols were annoying each other. I could easily signal the Russian sharpshooters sitting in the trees in the fort of Bohuszowka—so easily that a captain said:

"Mind about turning the pages of that notebook, for the Russians have good eyes and the sharpshooter wants no better mark."

The dead are lying so close that when the wind blows this way the soldiers wear gas masks. A cross standing before the trenches will be cut tonight. It cannot be done now.

Among the warnings borne in on us half a dozen times today are: "Don't stand still; don't point; don't mark battery positions on your maps, and don't take the number of commands."

Just as we reached an exposed point on the turf trenches the village of Bohuszowka burst into flames and despite himself and every one halted to watch the spectacle. Finally the officer said:

"I would like to stay here as long you like, but in your own interest I suggest moving on. After all, it is not your first duty to get killed."

Two spruce young lieutenants, loathing the mud through which we were plunging, leaped from the trenches and walked deliberately along the parapet. An old major called sharply, saying:

"My boys, that has no purpose."

Dash Down Perilous Road.

At first they pretended not to hear, but finally came in with poor grace. It was a mad thing to do, but the fact remains that it had a good effect on the men—and on me.

At the instant we got within range of the Russian artillery the cry of "Keep apart!" rang out, and a sentry emphasizing the command with decisive gestures forthwith all the autos separated 300 meters and scurried down the exposed highway, each side of which was lined with Russian shell reminders.

PENSION FOR GRANDDAD

Chicago's Oldest Employe Who Retired July 1, and His Grandson.

John Agnew and grandson Edward Agnew

First payments from the Chicago municipal pension fund, which was established five years ago, were made yesterday to sixty-five retired city employés. Check No. 1, for $38.50, went to John Agnew, who resigned July 1 after having devoted sixty-four years to the city service.

He is 85 years old and the father of Charles Agnew, secretary to First Deputy Schuettler. Mr. Agnew entered the city service as a member of the volunteer fire department. Recently he has been a building inspector.

A majority of the pension checks were given out in the council chamber of the city hall, where the occasion was celebrated by various speakers, including Mayor Thompson.

"Chicago has established the first municipal pension fund of its kind in any of the large American cities," the mayor said, "and today sees the first concrete working of it. I do not know of anything that tends more strongly to increase efficiency and satisfaction among a body of people than a pension plan. It assures the employé that faithful service will be rewarded when the time comes for him to step out."

The sixty-five retired employés will receive $38.50 each month. Grdaually the amount will be increased to a maximum of $50. Every employé under civil service contributes $2 a month to the fund. The city contributes a like amount. At the end of twenty years' service city employés who are 55 years old are entitled to retire on a pension.

OBITUARY.

DR. EDWARD F. BUECKING died yesterday at the Hotel Warner, Thirty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue, in his 58th year. He was a practising physican in Chicago for the last thirty-five years, his practice being confined almost exclusively to the west side of the city, where he was well known. He was born in Hannibal, Mo., and graduated from the Louisville, Ky., Medical college in 1877, coming to Chicago a year later. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alona Watkins Buecking, and one daughter, Mrs. Vera Ryall, and one son, Harry W. Buecking.

JAMES A. SMITH, died at his home in Chatsworth, Ill., yesterday. At one time he was one of the best known Democratic politicians of Illinois, being a member of the Thirty-sixth general assembly from that district, and one of the famous 101 Palmer men. For thirty-four years he was publisher of the Chatsworth Plain Dealer and for four years was mayor of the city and also served in other public positions.

HENRY WOLCOTT'S PROGENY MEET IN CHICAGO AUG. 8.

Invitations Sent to Twelfth Annual Family Reunion from Headquarters in Indianapolis.

Invitations and programs for the twelfth annual reunion of the society of the descendants of Henry Wolcott, to be held in Chicago Aug. 8, 9 and 10, have been issued by Eben H. Wolcott of Indianapolis, president of the society. Officers of the organization live in twenty or more states.

The headquarters for the reunion will be at the Hotel Sherman, where the registration will begin on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 8. The business sessions of the society will start on Wednesday, when Mayor Thompson is scheduled to deliver an address of welcome, to which President Wolcott will respond.

The election of officers will be held on Thursday morning. A banquet in the evening will close the affair.

A STATEMENT BY MR. MACK.

"My two brothers and myself were in the vehicle business together in 1892, and in 1901 we made OUR FIRST GASOLENE - PROPELLED MOTOR CAR, the first application of the four-cylinder motor to vehicles of the truck type. If I am correctly informed, the first two trucks we made are in use today in Colorado for the transportation of ore.

"In 1904 we built 30 of these big cars. They were then used as sight-seeing autos, but their possibilities as commercial vehicles developed very rapidly, and by 1908 over 1,200 Mack Trucks were in operation all over the country.

"In that year we were occupying nine buildings; our factory site in Allentown, Pa., occupied 22 acres; we found ourselves doing a business of over $4,000,000 per annum, and our yearly output approximated 1,200 trucks per year.

"In the early days our invested capital was about $2,000. When we incorporated, our capital stock was $35,000. This was increased from time to time to meet our demands, until in 1910 our capital stock was $1,000,000. When we sold out one of our stockholders realized $47,000 on an original investment of $2,000.

"In 1911 the Mack Brothers' Motor Car Company was sold to the International Motor Company at a valuation of $3,125,000. Thus, from the original $2,000 of 1892, grew, with additions, earnings, stock dividends, &c., to over three millions in values.

"In the six months ending August 1, 1911, Mack Brothers' Motor Car Co. made a net profit of OVER A QUARTER OF A MILLION on its capitalization of $1,000,000. Dividends declared at that rate would have, therefore, amounted TO OVER 50% PER YEAR.

"THESE EXTRAORDINARY PROFITS COMPARE FAVORABLY WITH THE EARNINGS OF THE OTHER SUCCESSFUL MOTOR MANUFACTURING CONCERNS IN THE COUNTRY. Therefore I believe that my estimate of the probable profits of METROPOLITAN MOTORS, Inc., is based on REASON AND EXPERIENCE."

HOW $100 GROWS TO $16,500

$100 worth of Hupp Motor Car Company stock returned to the original investor from 1908 to 1915 $10,816. Since that date the capital of the Company has increased to $6,500,000, and it is now stated that an original investment of $100 has grown to $16,500.

This is not an isolated instance by any means. Investments of $100 in such Companies as Chandler, Reo, Chalmers, Paige Detroit, Federal Motor Truck and Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck are said to have returned to the original investors comfortable fortunes.

ENORMOUS PROFIT IN MOTOR TRUCKS.

The margin of profit in the manufacture of Motor Trucks is very much larger than the profit in passenger cars. The White Motor Co. in 1915 is said to have made an actual profit of $1,070 per car and earned 54.3% on its capital in 1915, or over $8,640,000. Profits for this year are now estimated in excess of $10,000,000.

The Federal Motor Truck Co. pays dividends to its shareholders at the rate of 40%. Gramm Bernstein Company earned over 50% on its total capital in the last six months of 1915, or equal to 100% for the year. It is reported that Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co. has earned 12% a month, or equal to 144% per year.

The Packard Automobile Co., manufacturers of the well-known Packard Motor Truck, recently declared a dividend of 50% upon the capital stock. The White Motor Co. should earn this year over 60% upon the capital stock. Had you bought Paige Detroit a few months ago your money would have been doubled by now.

What Hupp, Ford and others have done for the popular priced passenger car industry I believe W. C. Mack will do for the popular priced motor truck industry. Large volume and popular prices have made millions for the shareholders in the passenger automobile industry.

My entire attention is focused on the motor security market. I believe that I am in a better position to give you facts and information regarding automobile securities than any other broker or banker in the United States.

I have consistently advised my clients to buy or sell certain active motor stocks, and my study of the market has enabled my clients to realize handsome profits. I do not offer advice unless it is based on my best judgment. Don't forget that Reo went up 30 points in a short time. Willys-Overland advanced over $100 a share and General Motors advanced 67 points in one week.

Regardless of the merits of other automobile securities, I advise the purchase of Metropolitan to-day. I urge all clients and readers to act immediately, as the price will probably advance again very soon.

DON'T ENVY; EMULATE!!

When you hear of a TREMENDOUS PROFIT being made by some acquaintance or friend who was "lucky" (luck is only another name for sagacity), don't ENVY HIM HIS "LUCK!" You will almost invariably find out that he was "in" at the beginning, at the very inception, of the enterprise which enriched him. EMULATE HIM! GO AND DO LIKEWISE!

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

AMBITIOUS NATIONALITY.

Internationalism is a theory that competition between nations can be excluded or controlled. If it be permitted to continue for the purpose of enriching life it can be made beneficent competition. It cannot remain a competition expressed in force or seeking egotistic grandeur.

National pride seeks an assurance of superiority. The strength of the Roman legion was the pride of the Roman citizen. Superiority is determined by contest and contrast and by imperial growth, destructive of internationalism. The romanticism of the nation, the egotism of the individual, demand bigness, development, strength, and consciousness of strength.

On the fringe of the war Roumania, although timid and doubtful, offers an illustration of the great push of nationalistic ambition. The war brought it dangers and it brought opportunities. If Roumania went in by one door it might come upon astonishingly profitable prospects; if it went in by another it might come upon astonishing disaster.

Among the Roumanian statesmen is an ardent patriot, Take Jonesco. If one formed an opinion of Jonesco merely from his speeches to the Roumanian parliament one would get a suggestion of Demosthenes, of Caesar, of William the Conqueror, of Frederick the Great of Prussia, of Peter and Catherine of Russia, of Patric Henry of the colonies, of Garibaldi, and Cavour.

When Jonesco makes a speech to the Roumanian parliament in these days it burns like a fire in the prairies. It is evangelistic. Its purpose is to arouse the Roumanian nation to a sense of its needs and of its opportunities It pulsates and throbs with a nationalism which has for its ambition the achievement of nationalistic grandeur. Jonesco proudly asserts that no sacrifice any living Roumanian could make, no physical tortures he might endure on the battlefield, nothing his family might suffer, were he and his family to be tormented and obliterated, would be too great if out of these sufferings were to come in another generation a great Roumanian nation of which the citizens would feel in every living day the impulse of a great nation.

The world is changing, Jonesco thinks. Values are in flux. Maps are being redrawn. Powers are changing hands. Coalitions and combinations of people are dissolving. Empires are dying. The world is going through torment and fire and will have come out anew.

Out of Hungary Roumania can carve its bit. With what it might be given by Russia and what it might win from Austria-Hungary Roumania would arise as a first class eastern power. The Roumanian citizen might walk the earth as proudly as any Frenchman or German. He might have in his consciousness the emotion of a Roman citizen. He belonged to no mean nation. To give the future Roumanian the potency of this emotion Jonesco would send thousands and hundreds of thousands of now living Roumanians to death. With his conception of nationalism the sacrifice not only would be worth while. It is demanded, and when he talks to the Roumanian parliament he asks that the sacrifice be made and the profit taken.

In internationalism many men believe that life would lose purpose, color, savor, interest, and cease to be worth while. They ask for a development of humanity by sections, for the emphasis of things which belong peculiarly to certain peoples, for the cultivation of devotion to symbols and traditions peculiar to the people devoted to them.

This is nationalism and many people think life would be a desert of sand if it were not enriched by the desires of certain peoples to have their distinctive existence, their ambitions, their lore and traditions, their music, literature, and art.

Many people who detest nationalistic ambitions concede that there must be nationalistic distinctions. They think that a nation may be unambitious but distinctive. They think that Denmark, thrust back upon intensive life and getting its gratification out of the excellence of the internal and domestic institutions which it erects, is a rational nation, whereas Roumania, filled by the Jonesco idea of national grandiloquence and wanting to strut in purple in the sight of Europe, is an irrational nation.

The nationalism of Jonesco is a menace to Europe and to the world. It seeks opportunity to achieve distinction and greatness. It is Lady Macbeth. It wants its moment in the purple. It wants the consciousness of greatness and bigness. If one generation cannot have it the ambition of that generation is to bequeath greatness to another. It is romantic. It is not rational as is the Danish effort to make a Dane proud of his nationality because Denmark within its small boundaries is an excellent nation.

But people who try to analyze human motives will be cautious in arriving at opinion as to the motive that will insist upon controlling. Force rules the universe. It cannot be contained internally if it be real force. It will expand. Jonesco's desire for expansion may be the real law of nationality. Denmark's ambition for intensive, internal development may be the spinster recompense for thwarted life.

PANDEMONIUM IN CHICAGO.

The Friend of the People receives frequent complaints of unnecessary noises made by steam railways, manufacturing plants, etc., which it passes on to Alderman Nance, chairman of the council antinoise committee. It often happens that the alderman is able to persuade the offending parties to mitigate or even stop the annoying sounds. But one such complaint concerning the appalling shrieks which street cars sometimes make in grinding around curves in the line was sent to the public service department. The head of that bureau makes a long answer in which he denies the noise is made, as asserted, by a cheaper brake shoe than the company formerly used, and he adds that the greasing of the curves was abandoned because it was undesirable to spread grease along street surfaces. He remarks further that it is two years since he has received a complaint of this character.

The absence of complaints of this kind does not indicate that abuses do not exist. The American public is long suffering. It does not like to kick, and Herbert Spencer long ago observed that we in the United States stand more imposition than any other people on earth. The fact remains that the surface and elevated lines make an infernal din and it is not to the credit of their engineers that this has not been lessened. We know that the tall buildings in the loop multiply these noises, but the din is not confined to the downtown district by any means, as the unfortunates who try to sleep within sound of any car line can testify.

In no other city with which we are acquainted do street cars or elevated trains make such a terrifying pandemonium as in Chicago. The effect of this nerve-wrecking sound upon the health of the people is incalculable. The city authorities apparently cannot, and the corporations will not, do anything to mitigate the offense.

SUPPORT THE SENATE ARMY AND NAVY APPROPRIATIONS.

The two great defense appropriation measures, for the army and the navy, are now at their final critical stage. Both have passed the house in most unsatisfactory and inadequate form; both have been very substantially increased by the senate; both now go to conference for final review.

In these conferences the house conferees, it must be expected, will fight for reduction. The house is the stronghold of the opposition to adequate defense legislation. Its representatives in both conferences are likely to do what they can to bring the bills down from the high standard set by the senate.

The press and the people of the nation should act at once vigorously to support the senate conferees and to save adequate measures from small minded and shortsighted compromises.

The naval bill lays down a program which ought to put our navy back in its proper second rank by 1923.

The army bill provides for absolutely necessary equipment and military supplies, necessary increases in reserves of artillery and munitions, and provision for our neglected air service.

Both bills total a very large increase in appropriations for defense, but that has been made necessary by our previous neglect. It would not be economy, it would be criminal waste, to cut them down.

OUR NAVAL DEFENSE.

Shortly before his death the distinguished British naval historian and expert, Fred T. Jane, wrote a significant article on American naval defense for the Military Historian and Economist. It contains some warnings which are especially timely now while we are impressed with the striking increase of our naval program voted by the senate. The layman thinks of naval preparedness in terms of big ships. The professional thinks of it first in terms of policy and of organization. We might have the largest navy counted in capital ships and yet not be a naval power of first rank. Our ships might be the most numerous, our men the most courageous, our guns the longest ranged and the best directed, and yet we might be wiped off the sea by bad strategy and poor organization.

It is of the first importance that correct naval policy and sound strategical ideas should control our naval preparation and the disposition of our fleet in peace and war. If the expert is constantly to be overruled by politicians who know nothing of the principles of successful war or of naval and military history and practical technique no fleet of big ships will save us from disaster in war. That is our habit and our danger, and Jane points it out with friendly candor.

For example, he recalls how in the Spanish-American war many seaboard cities demanded a local defense ship, not knowing that it was worthless and only meant the certain destruction of our real naval defense, which can be only the victorious action of our fleet against the fleet of the enemy.

Even to a layman the fatal folly of allowing a separation of our fleet so that it could be destroyed piecemeal ought to be apparent, yet in stress of danger there always has been political pressure for local defense and is sure to be interference with strategic plans because of panic. The weakness of the expert and the strength of the politician in our country is deplorably plain, and because of it Jane says that "in Europe, for all the United States navy is the third [now lower] strongest numerically in the world, we are somewhat prone to laugh at it." And he adds: "It is far too apt to be a 'line of defense' for the politicians. Till war comes that is a useful line—but given war, what then?"

Jane further points out the tremendous difficulty of our naval conditions owing to our enormous coast lines. This makes local defense even more than usually impossible and also calls for a well developed system of reconnaissance. We need fast ships and air service, whereas now, lacking them, our fleet is a blind Samson.

It is to be observed that present leadership in the house is thoroughly infected with the lay fallacy of a passive defense. The naval bill which passed the house provided for fifty small submarines for coast defense and no large fleet submarines. This is typical of the fatal theory that we can afford to wait for an enemy force to choose its point of assault and then defend ourselves at some point on our own coast line. This is even more impracticable, as Jane has said, for the United States, with its thousands of miles of coast lines, than for other nations which have a comparatively short and single littoral. Our naval defense must be a strategical offense. That is, we must have a fighting fleet with an unusually large complement of fast cruisers, destroyers, and hydroaeroplanes to discover the position and course of an approaching enemy in time to concentrate and strike it.

Finally, Jane asserts that with our two distant coast lines we must have two permanent fleets, one for the Atlantic and one for the Pacific. The Panama canal, he declares, does not save us from this, for it does not sufficiently shorten our route from one coast to the other, and furthermore may be blocked or destroyed. In consideration of the rapid development of the war plane and Zeppelin the problem of protecting the canal from injury is greatly increased.

Until we have two fleets, then, he declares our navy is "a more or less illusory line of defense."

TWENTY MINUTES OF EXERCISE.

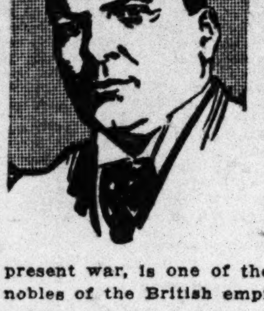
[From the New York World.]

The Welsh law providing for compulsory physical training for school children, regarding the operation of which State Commissioner Finley has just issued instructions to local school authorities, requires an average of twenty minutes' exercise each day of school.

No doubt to pacifist mothers and indolent pupils this requirement of the school course will seem a hardship. To children of an older growth it will seem a blessing in the disguise of a task, and they will count the children of today fortunate in having it imposed on them. Twenty minutes of regular exercise daily will mean a whole lot to them in health and vigor.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]



THE Duke of Buccleuch, who made so savage an attack in the house of lords the other day upon Lord Haldane, intimating that before favoring parliament and the public with his views about other matters it would be well for him to clear himself of all the charges brought against him, of pronounced leanings toward Germany, both prior to and since the outbreak of the present war, is one of the greatest of the great nobles of the British empire.

It may safely be asserted that there is none who, by reason of his lineage, his wealth, by the rôle of his house in history, and by the extent of his territorial possessions, occupies a higher place.

The voicing in the national legislature, therefore, of the murmurs that are to be heard on every side in England against Lord Haldane, calling him to account for his responsibilities in the military unpreparedness of Great Britain in 1914, although fully cognizant of the danger menacing his native land, cannot therefore be disposed of lightly.

The duke represents in the matter not alone most of the members of his order but likewise the vast mass of his fellow countrymen, and the fact that, like his father before him, he is conservative in his ideas, with a keen sense of his moral and material obligations, level headed, and foreign to impulse, lends additional emphasis to his protests against Lord Haldane.

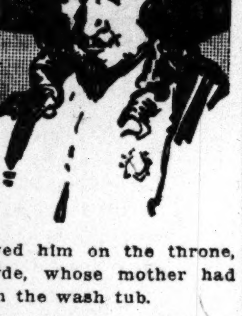
The Duke of Buccleuch, besides being duke of that ilk, is also Duke of Queensberry, and in Scotland, where medieval feudalism has survived by the will of the people to a degree greater than anywhere else in Europe, he exercises a degree of power and influence difficult for free born Americans to understand.

Not a little of this power comes to him through his chieftainship of the great clan of Scott, which, in the eyes of some of the people of the northern kingdom of Great Britain, is even of greater account than his two dukedoms and his near a score of other Scottish and English peerages.

There are some who hold that the duke is even entitled to sovereign honors. For he is descended from the first and only Duke of Monmouth. The latter was the son of Charles II. by his union with Lucy Walters, who, according to a number of historians, was lawfully married to the "Merrie Monarch."

The Duke of Monmouth was brought up as a Protestant, and when his uncle, James II., succeeded to the crown and attempted to reëstablish the Roman Catholic religion, Monmouth (who was likewise Duke of Buccleuch, having married Anne Scott, Countess of Buccleuch in her own right and heiress of all the estates of the earldom of Buccleuch) raised the standard of revolt and gathered around him the Protestant malcontents with the object of ousting his uncle from the throne.

His insurrection was crushed, and he himself met death on the scaffold, as guilty of high treason and rebellion, his dukedom of Monmouth being forfeited. His widow, however, was left in possession of the dukedom of Buccleuch, and with the earldom of that ilk, which she had inherited, and being predeceased by her eldest son, she was succeeded by his boy, her grandson, as second Duke of Buccleuch. From this second duke the present and seventh duke is descended in a direct male line.



Now, if the Duke of Monmouth was the legitimated instead of the natural son of Charles II.—that is to say, if his parents were lawfully married—he undoubtedly possessed rights to the crown prior and superior to those of his uncle, James II. For at the time there were no statutes in existence preventing a marriage of the sovereign, or of the princes of the blood, with persons of nonroyal rank.

Indeed, James II.'s own first wife, mother of Queen Mary and of Queen Anne, who followed him on the throne, was the Lady Anne Hyde, whose mother had graduated, it is said, from the wash tub.

It is asserted that until sixty or seventy years ago a document was preserved in the archives of the dukes of Buccleuch affirming under the hand and seal of Charles II. that he had been lawfully married to Lucy Walters on a given date, and that Monmouth was therefore his legitimate son.

The grandfather of the present duke, as a loyal subject of Queen Victoria, is said to have decided that this document ought to be turned over to her; and it is added that this was done, and that the prince consort, in her presence and in that of the duke, consigned the paper to the flames.

Of course, even if the document had remained in existence it would not really have affected the rights of Queen Victoria or of King George to the throne of Great Britain. For their successive possession thereof is based on the act of settlement, passed by parliament over two centuries ago, which by a narrow majority of one vote, cast by Sir Hugh Owen, vested the thrones of Great Britain and Ireland in the Hanoverian descendants of James I., barring therefrom the less remote descendants of his son, Charles I., now represented by Queen Marie Therese of Bavaria and by her son, the crown prince of that south German kingdom.

Still, at the same time it was a very loyal thing for the fifth Duke of Buccleuch to do, to surrender this document proving under the hand and seal of Charles II. that he was descended in a straight line from a legitimate instead of from an illegitimate son of a British monarch, and that the bend sinister by which his armorial bearings—namely: those of Charles II.—are debruised has been unjustly placed there.

For there is no doubt that enemies of the present dynasty might have taken advantage of the existence of the document to create doubts in the minds of ignorant persons as to the rights of Queen Victoria, Edward VII., and George V. to the crown.

The present Duke of Buccleuch, who is also eighth Duke of Queensberry, was formerly in the royal navy and was serving as a lieutenant on a man of war on the Australian station as Lord John Scott when summoned home through the death of his elder brother, the Earl of Dalkeith, who, while out deer stalking, fatally wounded himself through the accidental discharge of his gun and died alone, while his gillie, a boy, had run off to obtain assistance.

The duke married some years later Lady Margaret Bridgeman, daughter of Lord and Lady Bradford and one of the prettiest debutantes of her season, by whom he had seven children.

SOME INSECTS ANNOYING IN HOT WEATHER.

CHIGGERS, jiggers, harvest mites, red bugs. The troubles of country babies are multiplied in hot weather by red bug bites. A baby with a dozen hard red patches, each larger than a pea, is not a happy individual. The bites both itch and pain.

Men at work in the harvest fields are also much annoyed by red bug bites. Children become infested in playing on lawns and going into pastures.

Red bugs belong to the same class as the ticks and spiders. This insect is not to be confused with a species of tropical flea, which bores under the skin and is known by some as a chigoe, chigre, or chigger.

In the fall the insects bore a short distance into the ground and there hibernate. In the spring they crawl out and lay their eggs in the grass near the ground. The young hatch and crawl up the stems of plants ready to catch on to any host that chances along. They get on the ankles and wrists and travel toward the trunk until they find satisfactory biting places.

The biting insect bores deep into the skin, gorging with blood, and causes itching, pain, and inflammation. The bites are not liable to become infected, but they may be infected through scratching.

Various methods of fending against red bugs are in use. One suggestion is that bands of sulphur powder or of napthalene powder be worn around the wrists and ankles. Another that sulphur be dusted in the socks.

The insects can be picked off with the point of a needle if it be attempted before the insect has bored too deeply. Some mothers in the country, after giving the children their daily bath, go over them with a magnifying glass and needle, removing red bugs.

A plan in general use, and one that I know to be efficacious, is to grease the bites with salted butter. The mites are killed by the butter and salt. Within a few hours after salted butter is applied the itching stops and the hard, red lumps disappear within a week.

MOSQUITOES. Mosquitoes transmit two important diseases—yellow fever and malaria. Yellow fever mosquitoes are not widely distributed over the country. What is of more importance, yellow fever mosquitoes are not infected with yellow fever now in any part of the world, except in a strip of coast line less than 100 miles in width, extending from Guiana on the northeast to Peru on the southwest. And only in a small section of this zone are the mosquitoes actually infected. Some of the malarial mosquitoes are infected with malaria in a considerable, though lessening portion of the United States.

Outside these two groups, mosquitoes are only harmful in that they annoy. Occasionally a baby is made sick by the irritation from mosquito bites.

Mosquitoes hibernate in houses and caves. It is possible that certain varieties can hibernate in the ground. The female lays her eggs in water. These hatch into larva or wigglers. Wigglers pass through a pupa stage before they become adult mosquitoes. Only females suck blood. Mosquitoes live from one to six months, according to the season of the year and their activities.

Where mosquito breeding cannot be prevented people should remain behind screens, if possible. A poorly screened house is worse than one that is unscreened, since the mosquitoes that gain entrance remain in the house and bite repeatedly.

Screening should be finer than twelve meshes to the inch. Generally, fourteen mesh is fine enough. A purchaser should insist upon getting the mesh he wants, even counting for himself to be certain that he is not imposed on. Most of the screening that I have seen on homes is twelve mesh.

A hungry mosquito is apt to find out a hole in the screen or a crack between the screen and the frame. All such holes and cracks should be mended.

In the absence of metal screens mosquito netting or bar will do. Health authorities and men in charge of railroad crews have found that a cabin or a bridge train living car can be made mosquito proof with netting at little cost. Campers sleeping in tents or in the open air can be comfortable under mosquito netting if they will take enough pains. As ordinarily used, mosquito bars serve as mosquito traps and make matters worse. The netting must be free from holes. It must be so arranged that mosquitoes cannot get in around the edges or bite through the mesh. On some ships they have mosquito bars built like a torpedo. Wooden hoops hold the bar away from the body of the sleeper. After the person gets into bed he pulls the bar together at the top with a puckering string.

Mosquitoes can be prevented from biting by anointing the head, hands and feet with oil of citronella, one ounce; spirits of camphor, one ounce; oil of cedar, one-half ounce; or, castor oil, one ounce; alcohol, one ounce; oil of lavender, one ounce.

A gentleman from South Carolina binds around his ankles and wrists (and forehead at times) bands holding some gum camphor. Some oil of citronella or lavender can be dropped on this camphor if it is preferred.

FLEAS—Fleas are responsible for the spread of plague, but plague is of small consequence in this country. San Francisco and New Orleans, the only two points in this country where there has been any plague during this century, are now practically free. Therefore, fleas are dreaded because of the annoyance they cause rather than the disease they spread.

Fleas breed all the year round, though they are more abundant in warm weather than in cold, except where flea infested animals get into the house in the cold weather. The female flea lays her eggs in dirt and dust. In a few days the larvæ hatch. Flea larvæ live on organic refuse in ordinary room dust. Ordinary room sweepings contain food enough for flea larvæ. After a few days the flea larva spins a cocoon in which it spends its pupa stage. The pupa graduates into the flea.

Fleas cannot breed in rooms where the floors are kept clean. A vacuum cleaner will eradicate them. Soap and water and a scrubbing brush are equally efficacious on hard floors. The trash and dirt must be cleaned out of basements and cellars if such are the breeding places.

Crude powdered naphthalene is an excellent repellent. A room can be cleared of fleas by placing a rug on the floor, sprinkling the rug with naphthalene powder and closing the room for a day. At the end of that time the powder can be swept up and used in another room. Use does not destroy the efficacy of naphthalene powder.

The powder can be used on the hair of dogs and cats. Perhaps a better powder would be the louse powder used in the trenches in Europe. It is known as the N. C. M. powder, and consists of crude powdered napthalene, ninety-six parts; carbolic acid, two parts; magnesium citrate, two parts; or the N. C. I. powder, consisting of napthalene, ninety-six parts; carbolic acid, two parts, and iodoform, two parts. This powder can be dusted in the underclothing as a repellent.

TICKS.—Members of the tick family are responsible for the spread of many diseases, but the ordinary woodtick or small brown tick is not among the disease producers. Ticks pass through their egg, larva and pupa stage in the grass near the soil or in part in the soil. The young ticks climb up some plant, stand on their hind legs and wave the forelegs whenever a likely host approaches. They attach themselves by the forelegs to the host and crawl to some choice biting place. They burrow their heads into the skin. Even the small brown tick can be seen and picked off. When tick bites are well greased with salted butter the ticks are killed.

TREATMENT BY LEECHES.

I. A. K. writes: "In discussing the present epidemic of infantile paralysis with my sister the other day she recalled a similar instance, about thirty-five years ago, in Austria. It affected small children, bringing about a high fever, and leaving the child in a semi-unconscious condition. The majority of patients died, several were left dumb, and a few recovered. My sister was one of the fortunate ones, escaping perfectly healthy. Several physicians tried the experiment of applying leeches to the patient's neck, at about the base of the brain at the back, with great success. The leeches drew out a certain amount of blood from the subject, after which recovery was rapid in a large number of cases. Leeches are used for a great many causes in Europe, and quite a number of foreigners still use them here, but I have never heard of an instance where they were prescribed by a physician here. Would it not be worth while to experiment with such a simple old remedy? Perhaps it would be effective. There is all to gain and nothing to lose."

REPLY.

My guess is that the epidemic referred to was one of meningitis and not infantile paralysis. It is not probable that leeches would be of service in either meningitis or paralysis, but they would do no harm and any one can try the method. Some drug stores carry leeches in stock. The treatment by leeches is used occasionally for some diseases. It is the best treatment for a black eye.

PERNICIOUS ANEMIA.

Mrs. A. B. writes: "I have pernicious anemia and am told that by having the spleen removed this condition may be overcome. [1] What are my chances for living? If the spleen makes white corpuscles which eat the red ones and take care of disease germs [2] wouldn't my condition be almost as bad without white corpuscles as a lack of red ones? My skin is sallow, my tongue clean, and sometimes extremely red. I have a white diarrhœa much of the time or else constipation. I droop like a dying chicken when I get a little weary and after eating. [3] Why is this? [4] What should I eat? Am careful not to overeat and avoid fruit and starchy food."

REPLY.

1. Removal of the spleen as a means of curing pernicious anæmia is on trial. It has seemed of service in some cases. The operation is a severe one. Whether or not you should run the risk in order to gain a chance for recovery is for you to decide upon the advice of the physicians and surgeons who have seen you.
2. The spleen is not the only source of white blood cells.
3. Diarrhea and great weakness are symptoms in pernicious anæmia. The weakness is a result of the poor blood. The diarrhea is supposed to represent the effort of the intestines to throw off some poison.
4. Eat whatever agrees with you. Are you taking arsenic? Are your teeth in good condition?

ALTITUDE AND THE HEART.

K. E. W. writes: "I am 22 years old and am planning a trip to the Rocky mountains. The altitude is from 5,000 to 14,000 feet. I have for several years been treated for my heart, which I probably strained years ago. It is called a murmur of the heart because one valve to the heart does not work right. Is a trip of this sort injurious to me?"

REPLY.

I think you had better get the advice of your physician on the question. An elevation of 14,000 feet throws some extra strain on the heart. In addition you will probably climb some. If your heart muscle is in good condition it will probably stand the extra strain of the leak and the altitude without trouble. If the muscle is equal to the strain and you exercise judiciously your trip will do your heart good.

PIGEONS IN BASEMENT.

Reader writes: "A man insists on keeping chickens and pigeons in his basement, although the doctor says the air is bad and will give his children throat trouble. The children are sick a good part of the time and the stench in the house, especially in damp weather, is vile. The health department has been called up and says that a man is within the law in keeping them. What do they mean when they print notices in the paper to rid your home of dirt and animals in order to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis? Kindly tell where to apply for advice as to getting rid of them. The basement also is full of rats and mice attracted by the grain which is kept stored in the basement."

REPLY.

It is difficult to keep a house in sanitary condition if pigeons and chickens are kept in the basement and rats and mice abound. Such conditions are doubly dangerous in the presence of an epidemic of infantile paralysis. The proper place to make complaint is at the sanitary bureau of the health department.

GRAIN ALCOHOL IS BETTER.

L. L. writes: "Which is best to use for rubbing the limbs that are affected with rheumatism? A says grain alcohol, B says wood alcohol."

REPLY.

A is right. Wood alcohol is liable to cause neuritis, which will result in pain somewhat similar to that of rheumatism.

PAVING WALTON STREET.

Chicago, July 22.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will Walton street from Cicero to Lavergne avenues be paved? Is there any prospect of this work being done this summer?

W. P. BARRY,
4821 Walton street.

The assessment roll for paving Walton street from Cicero to Lavergne avenues was filed in court July 17, 1916, and if no objections to the assessment are filed the same will probably be confirmed about Aug. 9 and a contract can be awarded within thirty days thereafter. If objections to the assessment are filed, however, the trial of the case will probably be protracted to such an extent that the work cannot be done until late this fall or early next year.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

MUST AWAIT CONFIRMATION OF ASSESSMENT.

Chicago, July 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The alley in the block bounded by Kimbark and Woodlawn avenues, Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets was ordered by the city to be paved last year with creosoted blocks. Since then nothing has been done.

J. R. DAY, 5636 Kenwood avenue.

The assessment roll for paving the alley between Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets, Kimbark and Woodlawn avenues, will be filed in court in about two weeks, and if no objections to the assessment are filed, a contract can be let within forty days thereafter. If objections are filed, however, the amount of time required to try the case in court may prevent the improvement from being made this year, in which case it will be one of the first pavements put in in the spring of next year.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

WILL REPAIR CURBING.

Chicago, July 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The curb at the corner of St. Lawrence avenue and Sixty-second street is demolished. If repaired at once it will prevent further damage to street.

"PROPERTY OWNER."

This curb will be repaired late this week or early next week.

WILLIAM G. GREGORI,
Assistant Superintendent of Streets.

NO GROUNDS FOR BREAKING LEASE.

Chicago, July 23.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a lease on a flat. The other day I discovered a very bad leakage coming through the roof caused by rain and damaging my rug. (1) Will this break my lease? (2) Can they hold my furniture if I fail to meet my payments?

H. S.

1. No. 2. Yes. If your lease places upon the landlord the duty of keeping the premises in repair and this damage was due to his negligence, you can hold back from your rent an amount sufficient to cover the damage that you have suffered. Otherwise you have no remedy.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MUST NOT USE FICTITIOUS NAME.

Wheaton, Ill., July 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me if an individual when starting a business is permitted to call it a manufacturing company while it is wholly owned by him and before he actually engages in the manufacture of goods—it being his purpose to manufacture later, but obtaining the goods for his trade for a time from other parties.

E. H.

You can trade under any name you choose, but you must not, of course, use a fictitious name to defraud the people with whom you deal.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ADVISABLE TO PROBATE ESTATE.

Chicago, July 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man dies without a will, the only heirs are the widow and two sons. The sons waive their claims in writing. Is it necessary to have the estate probated in order to secure transfer of real estate property in Cook county and farm mortgages on land located in several states?

A. E. T.

It is advisable to have real property go through probate because of the fact that when you desire to sell the purchaser may refuse to buy because of this irregularity. This is especially true in your case because of the sons' waiver.

MR. MANN AND PORK.

Chicago, July 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In an editorial in your issue of July 24 advocating the candidacy of Medill McCormick you state that James R. Mann, among others, opposed pork measures in Congress. Now, the facts are as follows: Mr. Martin B. Madden, when the Humphreys Ransdell bill was up for passage, took the view of a statesman and not only voted against the bill but made a speech opposing it. Senator Sherman is also opposed to its passage.

This is a flood water measure which THE TRIBUNE has wisely and persistently fought as a vicious pork barrel grab.

Now, Mr. James R. Mann, "the peerless leader of the minority," not only voted in favor of this pork barrel bill, but added an amendment, which was carried, increasing the salary of the lay members of the Mississippi river commission [another useless drain on the national treasury] from $3,000 to $5,000 per year. When the presidential bee was buzzing in his bonnet not only did he join the raiders on the federal treasury but he went them one better and increased the amount of the raid.

As he comes up for reëlection this fall it is well for all who are interested in opposing pork measures to know which congressmen are for and who are against economy and efficiency in the management of national affairs.

PERSONAL LIBERTY CRANKS.

Chicago, July 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Every time some one recommends a reform for the betterment of certain conditions a number of so-called personal liberty advocates immediately set up a howl objecting to the curtailing of their liberty. However, when such things happen as happened on Irving avenue a day or two ago, they deplore very much the occurrence, but immediately some of our judges or city officials suggest a plan to prevent a recurrence of such an affair these advocates of personal liberty sit up on their hind legs and howl.

I would like you, or some one who is better acquainted with the theory of personal liberty than I am, to give me a definition which justifies their beliefs. It was perfectly all right for the insane black man to remain free, as far as his personal liberty was concerned, but where does this liberty come in for the families of those who were so ruthlessly snatched away?

C. FREDERICK BARKOW.

GUARDSMEN'S FAMILIES.

Chicago, July 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish to thank THE TRIBUNE, also the members of the Red Cross, for their timely assistance, in as few words as possible. Could the generous donators of the Red Cross fund know the quiet, systematic, thorough investigating, its courteous business-like system of relieving burdens of our guardsmen's families, each and every donor would be glad he helped so worthy a cause.

When my boy went away with his regiment his going to the front was a loss of $50 per month, and with debts and unpaid taxes staring me in the face I could not see how I could make $15 do the work of $50.

A well meaning writer of one of our daily papers informed the mother who gave her son to war, disease, and hardships that she should be grateful for $15 per month instead of 3 cents per day which Europe is paying her soldiers. The knowledge does not feed our families or pay our rent, although we are justly grateful to our well meaning government. I am only one of the many guardsmen's mothers who are more than grateful, not for advice but help that pays our rent and feeds our families.

A GUARDSMAN'S MOTHER.

SCOTCH HYPHENS.

Chicago, July 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A few days ago you were good enough to print a letter of mine in your columns under the heading, "Shedding the Hyphen."

As I had signed my name and address a number of your readers availed themselves of the information of my identity and sent me letters in reply. Six were highly pleased with my sentiments, but two condemned them and me in no uncertain tones. One of those who took issue with me signed himself "An American," and gave vent to his "Americanism" in the most bitter and insulting terms.

For his information as well as for the enlightenment of others I take the liberty of enclosing herewith a "Flag-ger" which is being distributed broadcast by the Caledonian Society of Chicago, advertising their picnic, and calling upon all good Scotchmen, "Dinna forget the land of your forefathers." Is that "hyphenism" or is it not?

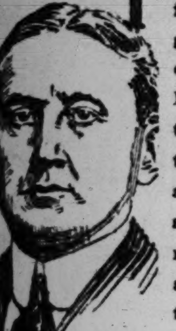
WHAT IS COMING?

By Robert Herrick



IF all the prophets big and little, whose forecasts into the dark future after the great war has come to its inevitable end I have read, the English novelist, Mr. H. G. Wells, has produced, if not the likeliest and safest lot of vaticination, at any rate the most imaginative and most exhilarating. Mr. Wells has always used his gift of a lively imagination in attempts to synthesize in a large and new form the social facts that his trained observation has gathered. He is not content merely to weave entertaining stories of contemporary life out of the panorama before him; he must also have his guess as to the real meaning of what is going on under our noses. Already we have had several entertaining books of social studies from him, one notably about our own America, showing that he was sufficiently modern and cosmopolitan to look beneath our variegated surface.

If the novelist's temptation to find in the nebulous future what he personally would like to have there has sometimes carried him away, if his large generalizations have often seemed too slimly based on facts and his tendency to abstract vaporizing at crucial points irritating, at least the Wells synthesis has always had the virtue of freshness and modernity—he looks at his world as in perpetual solution, not fixed and set as the more sterile professional analysts are wont to do. Above all he has faith in the destiny of human kind on this planet. And he does not believe that history repeats itself, which is the illusory comfort of platitudinous minds.

THE chaos introduced by the great war has stirred Mr. Wells to his best and has occasioned in his most recent volume, "What Is Coming?" his finest divination. There is a sweep, a breadth of overlook, an imaginative perspective in these pages altogether lacking in the guesses of American prophets. Also for the first time Mr. Wells has brought himself down pretty consistently to concrete statement. He gathers up much common reflection on the dislocations produced by the war and in a daringly imaginative flight over the globe rearranges the fates of nations. The destiny of this world during the next century or more is the subject of his mediations, not merely the situation in England or Europe, but with us—in Asia and Africa and India as well! Part, no doubt, of the intense interest with which I read the book was due to the fact that I found myself so often in agreement with his imaginative guesses.

For illustration he sees in the financial débâcle of the great European powers which is proceeding at a faster pace each month the ultimate doom of the capitalistic system and the compulsory resort to some sort of socialized cooperation in peace similar to what has been forced upon all the warring nations during the war. And he further predicts that the ultimate recovery or disappearance of each great power will depend largely upon how generously and willingly its privileged classes enter into the new scheme of world economy, how large their spirit in accepting the new order which must perforce shear them of many of their privileges. For England here is sounded a grave note of warning. There are only too many indications that the greedy individualists who have had their selfish activities curbed by the necessities of war will hasten to reimpose their sort of industrialism upon their country as soon as the guns cease to talk, that they expect to resume direction of enterprise and the major part of the profit just as they still enjoy the vantage of government. Mr. Wells believes that the returning soldiers, schooled in reality by their frightful trench experiences, will have something to say as to who shall rule and enjoy; that, unlike their ancestors after the Napoleonic wars, they will not submit tamely to a reimposition of slavery by way of heavy taxation. He thinks these modern Englishmen will fight instead. And if they should prefer to fight rather than submit to the exploitations of private capital there would be confusion worse confounded in England and Englishmen will look back upon the great war as to a time of hope.

MR. WELLS also forecasts the creation by necessity, of a world state or a United States of the world to keep the peace among all the nations. He does not believe in the "crushing of Germany," in either the possibility or the desirability of a Germany crushed after the war. In this Mr. Wells' cosmopolitanism triumphs over his Britishism. He takes, for an Englishman, a large, tolerant view of the situation. Therefore, the unconscious narrowness of certain exclusions becomes all the more astonishing. In that new world after the war he all but exterminates the Germans, ignoring them in his rearrangements. He makes a clear distinction between what he calls "Hohenzollernism" and Germany. "Hohenzollernism"—a better term than the common "Prussianism"—must go, and the only way in which it can be got rid of, according to Mr. Wells, is for its immediate victims to repudiate it and cast it out. He is keen sighted enough to perceive the difficulties of this most desirable way of curing Germany of its madness; he thinks it may take more than one generation to accomplish the complete cure of Germany, which is the extinction of "Hohenzollernism."

Meanwhile Germany is to be treated by the rest of the world much as the bad boy sent into the dark attic to think over his sins in private until the necessity of repentance comes over him. The Germans are to have all their colonies taken from them, and pretty much every other contact with the outside world, including, of course, all her recently acquired conquests and some of earlier date. Recognizing the folly of tariff blockade, nevertheless Mr. Wells thinks one necessary for "two or three generations," until Germany has reformed and all good Germans have come to their senses. Germany apparently is to be left out of that august United States of the world that is to take control of the destiny of this earth. We ourselves are invited, somewhat coldly, by Mr. Wells to join with Russia, France, and England to form the nucleus of this new world republic and to help maintain peace therein—but not Germany. Nor does he leave Germany anything in the shape of Asiatic ambitions to compensate her for her lost African colonies (which are to be handed over to a vague tutelage by "Latin Europe"). Germany is to be left with a somewhat shorn fatherland to contemplate her folly in the ashes of repentance.

THIS complete exclusion of Germany from the hopes of the new world for the space of "two or three generations" is probably quite unconscious on the part of the prophet. It is none the less vicious It illustrates the instinctive, ineradicable Britishness overlaying all the novelist's surface cosmopolitanism. It is that sort of cool, insolent ignoring of Germany's existence that did so much to prepare the ground for the war disease. Aside from the absurdity of discussing Germany's acquiescence in such a program at the moment when German armies possess practically all of Belgium and Poland and a good part of France and seem able to hold all their enemies coming on at once the blindness of Mr. Wells' propositions appals me, coming from his pen. Does he seriously believe that the allies, exhausted as he frankly admits they will become before his nebulously triumphant end, will be strong enough to impose upon Germany any such cold exclusion? That Germany, even if reduced by starvation to accepting harsh terms, will be sufficiently crushed to accept such a humiliating career in the new world of after the war as the novelist maps out for? That Germany will meekly wait for two or three generations before taking her place as an equal at the councils of the great states?

It is such exhibitions as this of Wells which make the coming of peace so dubious. If an intelligent, cosmopolitan, imaginative man like Wells can talk in this strain quite unconscious of his absurdity, what can be expected of those little prejudiced Britishers who are now running the English government, the Asquiths, the Runcimans, the Greys, that "lawyer politician" class which Wells holds up to our ridicule. If the imaginative leaders of English thought are unable to form a large enough conception of the new world to contain Germany as an equal, then the great war may be near a lull, but not at its end.

WITH equal British unconsciousness Mr. Wells assumes the common version of England's part in the making of the war. He presents England as an angel in long white robes coming to the rescue—a little late—of outraged Belgium and threatened France. England, he repeats, will fight until the wrongs of Belgium and of France and of Serbia are avenged, etc. It is tedious to hear from another Englishman, one of Mr. Wells' distinction, this varnished chromo picture of English innocence in the rôle of great protector of the oppressed. He must know as well as anybody—if not Mr. Shaw will enlighten him—that England will fight until her front door across the channel is freed from the menace of a strong enemy. That the front door happens to be on Belgian and French soil is merely incidental. And it will be well for England if after the peace is made she be not found again as before with her pockets full of stolen colonies—"compensations" for her heroic championing of "small nations."

The story of England's part in the war is wholly absurd. Mr. Wells ignores completely those indirect means by which England brought about a hostile condition in Europe, also her first timities and cowardices in the reeling days of July, 1914. Reading Mr. Wells, one might think that Great Britain had never entertained fear of Germany, had never sought to ally herself with Germany's professed enemies. The very same spirit that did so much to foster suspicion in Germany of England's purposes is well illustrated in these prophecies of what England will do to the world after peace is won. The spirit that could contemplate a Germany in the outer darkness of a lonely repentance, eating her bitter crust of defeat, behind lofty trade walls, condemned "for two or three generations" to nonparticipation in the new world, is not the spirit that either sees very deeply into the principles of life or conduces to making a stable peace.

The war will go on until another spirit enters the hearts of European men and women, I do not say a more Christian spirit, as Christianity seems to have had very little to do with this war, but a saner, a more remarkable spirit.

THE EXEMPT

By Guy Forester Lee.

Europe two years in a sea of blood;
  Cities and farms laid bare;
Nations wiped out by the grisly flood—
  What of the monarchs' share?
Maimed and crazed are unnumbered slaves,
  Loyal whate'er betide;
Millions of men in nameless graves,
  But how many kings have died?

Trenches and stenches and wholesale gore,
  What do such mean to those
Who, in the saturnine scheme of war,
  Command, but avoid the blows?
Have they drunk of the devil's gall
  Are they of dust beside
Tommy and moujik and serf, et al.?
  How many kings have died?

Helpless mother, fatherless child,
  Agony, filth, despair;
Homes a mockery, girls defiled,
  Ruin spread everywhere!
Not a point solved, not a single jot
  Gained in the hateswept tide!
Only a hemisphere plunged in rot,
  AND—how many kings have died?

LORD HALDANE SPEAKS

By An Englishman

The following article appeared in a recent issue of the London Daily Mail:

WE have heard, not without astonishment, that Lord Haldane proposes shortly to address the house of lords concerning the future of the race, the training of our citizens, and all those other matters which for the last ten years his pedantry has leaned upon with its heavy hand. His motive is easily intelligible. No politician likes to be kept many months out of the papers. Our demagogues have no thought, no hope, no soul of their own. They live contentedly in the mouths of men; they see themselves photographed in the journals with the complacency of third-rate actors; and when catastrophe overtakes the country through their negligence, they murmur with complacent cynicism that the country willed it.

But they cannot do without publicity, and even the publicity of shame which overtook Lord Haldane some two years ago has failed him at last. The country asks nothing of him but silence, prolonged and unbroken; and silence is the last thing he can give it. A mere man of words, he is restless if he be not permitted to speak, and the vanity which urges him to address the house of lords persuades him that England will listen patiently to the platitudes which he utters:

England will not listen patiently to him. Long ago she discovered the hollowness of his big drum. She knows by the bitter experience of a great war how muddy all his clear thinking has been. The mere boast of his pellucid thought should have been enough to make men beware. A minister who boasts, as Lord Haldane has always boasted, of his thinking arouses the same sort of suspicion as a woman who boasts of her honor. For ten years we have watched him at work, and it is plain to us all that his clear thinking was solidly devoted to the patient collection of votes for his party.

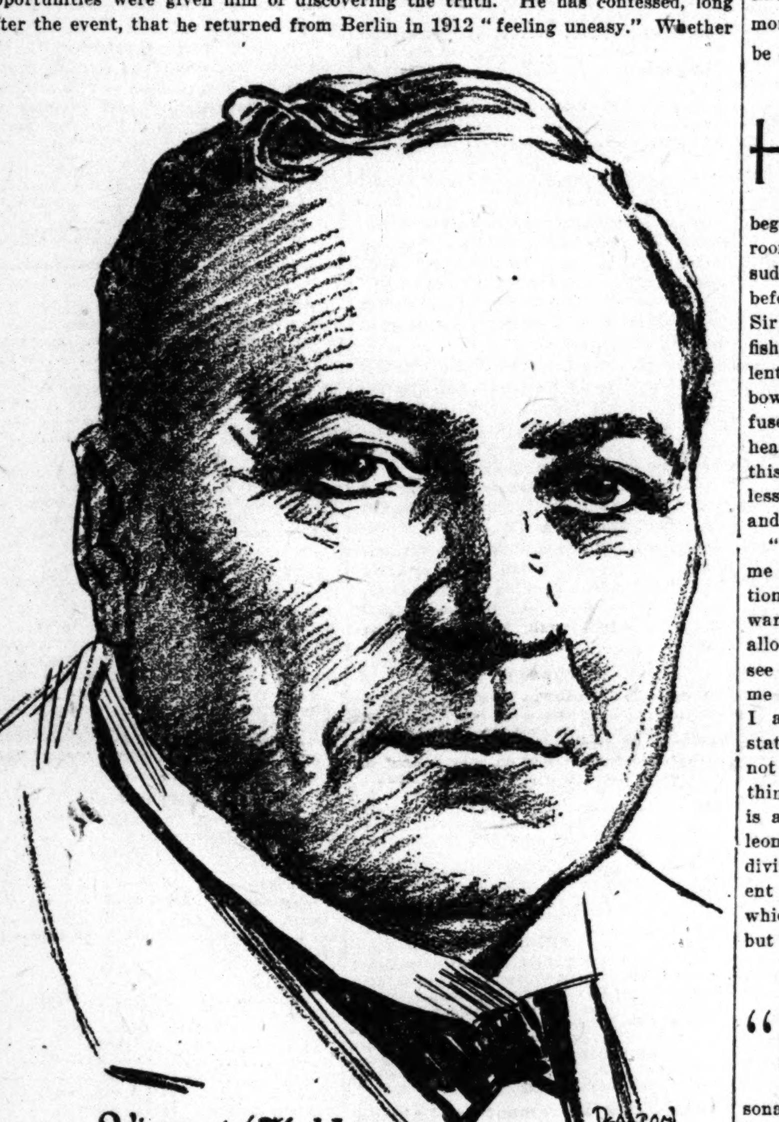
THE most of politicians sin from ignorance, which is their constant heritage, and they are no less blameworthy for that. Lord Haldane has sinned against the light. If there be any knowledge which he has professed with sleek arrogance it is a knowledge of Germany, his spiritual home. He visited Berlin, a favored guest. He called the kaiser his friend with the satisfaction of a true radical. He had the advantage, as he was careful to tell us, "which showed the friendliness of a great nation with whom we sometimes had grumblings, of going to Berlin as the guest of the emperor." He hailed that emperor gratefully as the "true child of the time spirit."

His was the privilege of knowing Herr Ballin and of finding him a man "of the most interesting personality." Only two years before the war he had "close and interesting conferences" with Herr Bethmann Hollweg. All the opportunities were given him of discovering the truth. He has confessed, long after the event, that he returned from Berlin in 1912 "feeling uneasy." Whether he really did or did not we shall never know. Whatever uneasiness he felt he kept locked up in his breast, and refused to utter one word of warning to a defenseless and unprepared country.



Viscount Haldane of Cloan ~

Nor was silence the worst of his sins. He flung a handful of the same dust which impaired his vision in Berlin into the eyes of those dupes, his countrymen. Though he says he was "uneasy," he was determined not to disturb the optimism of the voter. He had persistently declared upon public platforms that Germany harbored no sinister intentions against us, and he went on declaring it, even after he had seen and heard in Berlin many things which, says he, had shaken his confidence in peace.

Six weeks before war broke out he still professed a satisfaction which "the gratifying interchanges" of the Prussian court had convinced him was unfounded. "I am not in the least afraid of the invasion of German armies," said he on June 20, 1914, "but I am very much afraid of the invasion of people who have been trained in German universities and schools, and whose science has enabled them to compete with us." And for two whole years, if his own account be true, he had been shaking in his shoes!

SO, Lord Haldane, fully conscious of the danger which threatened England, let her drift into war without soldiers, without rifles, without munitions. Perhaps he hoped that the unexpected would happen. Perhaps he thought that England, untrue to herself, would refuse to go to the help of her friends. After all, politics is a gamble, and with the voters fast asleep it is easy to hold on to office. At any rate, Lord Haldane remained unperturbed until Germany drew the sword, and then, with amazing effrontery, threw the blame upon the people, which he had deliberately refused to enlighten.

"The public," he said a whole year after the outbreak of war, "did not insist that the unrest of Europe should be the foremost subject of political consideration." How could it insist when all news of unrest was scrupulously withheld from it? It was not the public which went to Berlin and had the privilege of the kaiser's friendship—it was Lord Haldane. And it was his duty, not the public's, to take adequate measures of defense.

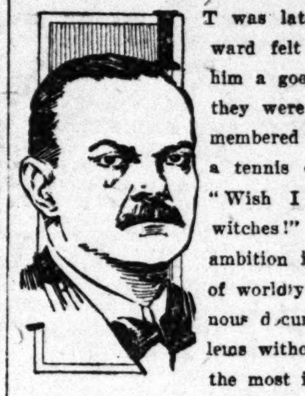
IN August, 1914, Lord Haldane and his colleagues had been the undisputed tyrants of England. It was theirs to shape the opinion and to stir the energies of the people. They taught it the doctrines of materialism, and Lord Haldane then complains that they accepted the teaching without a murmur. "The democracy," he tells us, "in this country was suffering from an indisposition to reflect, and in consequence was not disposed to listen to the few who preached." Among the few who preached assuredly Lord Haldane was not. He cheerfully kept the people in blindness, and when Lord Roberts spoke the gospel of self-defense he and his colleagues covered him with the insolence of ridicule. Untiringly did Lord Roberts, one of "the few," insist that universal service was necessary to avert the German menace. Lord Haldane dismissed him as no strategist, and, composing his own epitaph, prayed he might be remembered as one who had buried conscription in a deep grave.

It is Lord Haldane's theory of politics, then, that the people should lead and the leaders follow. It is a pleasant theory, because it relieves our ministers from the burden of responsibility. If all things go well they may claim the credit; if disaster overtakes us, it is the people's fault. But the people cannot be duped forever, and there is one man—Lord Haldane—whom the people having found him out, will never trust again.

It wishes to hear no more of him and his clear thinking. It remembers that he, knowing the purposes of our foe, thought it prudent to hold his tongue, and professed a sentimental friendship for Germany at the very moment she was preparing her felon's stroke. After the war England will take such steps as she deems right to train her citizens efficiently. She will not waste her time in listening to the pompous lectures of Viscount Haldane of Cloan.

SIR EDWARD'S DREAM

By Edward Goldbeck



IT was late in the night and Sir Edward felt tired. His eyes had given him a good deal of trouble lately and they were aching now again. He remembered the time when he had been a tennis champion and smiled sadly. "Wish I had never met the three witches!" he murmured. "Political ambition is certainly the most hollow of worldly idols." There were voluminous documents on his desk and problems without number in his mind, but the most important of them, it seemed to the outworn man, was how to get some sleep. In the course of these last trying months Insomnia, an unknown visitor before, had laid her fatal grip on him. He looked doubtfully at the bottle of old port which the servant had placed on a side table. Yes, that might help a little. It is true that the quality of the sleep it gave was not very good, but he did not find himself so luckily situated as to haggle about the quality. Beggars must be no choosers. He helped himself to a glass and drained it in the style of Old Merry England. Pitt and Fox and most of the dii minores of the bygone glorious time indulged heavily, he thought, and posterity bows to them. "Why shouldn't I follow their example for such a harmless purpose as to get a few hours of rest? I cannot write philosophical treatises like Balfour; that is probably the sporific he takes. I am not given to speculation by nature and decidedly too busy in this moment to care very much about the great beyond. Maybe all our questions will be answered there, but I know that there are millions of men who would like to put off the acquisition of this knowledge for a few more years. Poor devils! I envy them. But nothing can be done. We must go on, go on . . ."

HE dreamily sipped at the second glass and repeated the last two words after a certain rhythm. "I am getting idiotic," he mumbled, and made an effort to take up his work again, but he failed. The light began to flicker, there was a sort of mist about the large room, and Sir Edward's head sunk on his breast. All of a sudden he started. Who was that gentleman who stood before him as if he had shot up from below the ground? Sir Edward knew that stout body, those big glassy and fishy eyes, that easy and dignified countenance, that benevolent and cynical smile. He tried very hard to get up and bow, but all his limbs seemed paralyzed and his tongue refused its service. He was not dead, anyhow, as he could hear very well what the visitor's voice poured forth, and this idea gave him some comfort. The voice sounded careless and imperious at the same time; now it was insinuating and then dictatorial:

"Please don't make any fuss, and don't you dare to greet me by quoting Shakespeare—'Thou comest in such a questionable shape!' Having been the prince of swells while I wandered through the valley of shadows, I would resent the allocution. Don't get up; I never cared for ceremonies. I see that you are taking port. It is an agreeable surprise to me that the good old tradition is not quite dead in England. I always thought you were a saint and teetotaler. A statesman without vices is bound to be a failure; he does not know human nature. And that is the most important thing in politics. Napoleon—I see him every day now; he is a perfect maniac; no common sense at all—well, Napoleon had a great moment when he said: 'Psychology is the divine part of war.' War is nothing but policy with different weapons, so psychology is the divine part of policy, which means of business, for international policy is nothing but business on the grandest scale.

"I HAVE been a business man all my life—I mean, from the moment mother popped off. Of course I kept up the time honored pomp and circumstance, because the masses want it and need it, but personally I had no other ambition but to be an English gentleman and an English merchant. You know what diplomacy was before I stamped it with my individual method. It was the Metternich system, to put it shortly. Each diplomat tried to 'do' the other, and the result was that they lived together like a gang of thieves. To believe a diplomat was impossible. They wrestled all the time about petty advantages and lacked vision entirely.

"Then there came Bismarck, and he was wily as well as powerful, but his opportunities were comparatively limited. The German empire was entirely continental and had not at its command all the international objects of barter which England could dispose of. I used them freely, and my new idea which revolutionized diplomacy was simply to deliver the goods (which were not necessarily our goods) and to create the belief in our reliability and a general atmosphere of good will towards Great Britain. We had everywhere real values in territory, and if not that we had claims, and there were innumerable possibilities of compensation which made our game easy enough. And we really did something for the parties who took up business connections with us.

"In a way I can say that we created Japan. It was the alliance with England which made the Japanese victory over Russia possible and gave Japan the equal footing with the great European powers. Then I accomplished my best coup, that master stroke which even Bismarck envies me. Russia owed its defeat in the Japanese war to England (and to itself; the czar was under the dominion of pacifists at that time and forbade the necessary preparation). After the war the revolution broke out and Nicholas had to permit a constitution, very much against his inmost tendencies.

"One should have thought that thirty years of bitter enmity between Russia and England would follow. But my nephew William helped me. Nicholas was afraid of what he considered his plotting and preferred to come over to us. 'There,' he said, 'I know at least what I have to expect, while Germany's policy is absolutely incalculable.' I offered him that the Dardanelles be opened and we agreed about Persia. To France I gave Morocco, a nice piece of territory in Siam, and the dazzling outlook of a revanche against Germany. Spain received money on condition that she fix up her rotten navy. To Turkey we promised moral, financial, and military support, and we did not miss one opportunity of obliging the United States. Of course I dealt not a little in promissory notes, but all the leaders in Europe knew me, and they said: 'There is no nonsense about this fellow. He wants to live, but he lets other people live, too.' The only one who was impermeable to my charm was old Francis Joseph. Well, he will be with us soon, and then I shall give him a piece of my mind. He behaved quite nastily towards me in Ischl and refused to come in with the entente. That was a pity, as with his support my nephew would have been absolutely isolated.

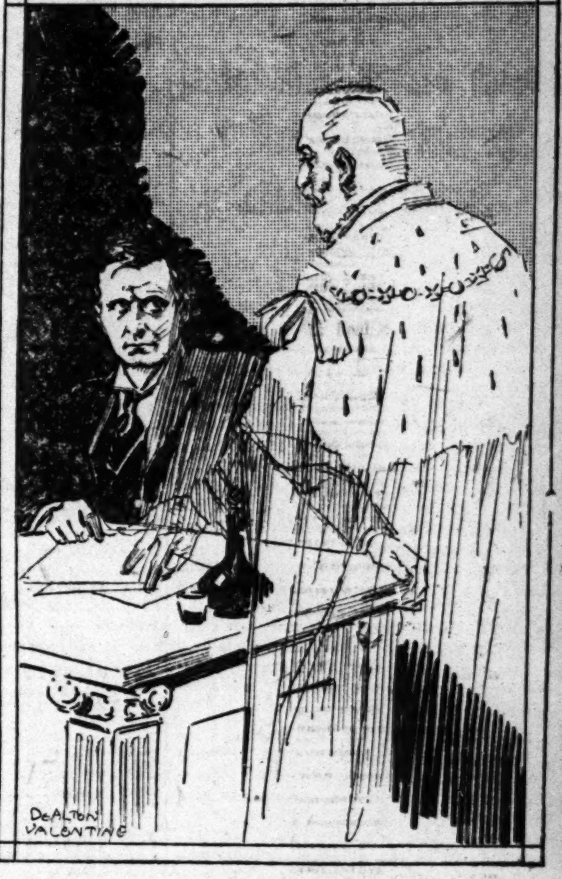
"I SAY 'my nephew,' and not 'Germany,' intentionally. The nations will probably never understand how intensely human the great of the earth are and how heavily personal sympathies and antipathies weigh in the scale of national destinies. If Gortchakoff had not by his vanity set Bismarck's teeth on edge the congress of Berlin would have ended differently and perhaps we should never have come to an agreement with the Russians. You remember that during Gortchakoff's grandiloquent opening speech Bismarck wrote on a slip, 'Po, pom, pomp, pompous'? Well, young William annoyed me the same way. His first period was really unbearable. I would not have minded so much his uncalled for criticisms of certain moral weaknesses of mine, but I hated his artificial Cæsar mask and his patronizing manners. Moreover, I considered him a real danger from the dynastical point of view. I knew that in the long run the Germans would not stand for all that talk about divine grace and so on. There was a temperamental difference which separated us, and on the other hand we were too much alike. The blood of the Coburgs was in both of us; I always disliked the fact.



"So I thought that it was my duty as an Englishman and a king to subdue my nephew a little, and I succeeded quite well in that. The last lesson I gave him in November, 1908, and it almost swept him off his throne. When the Germans read in the Daily Telegraph that the same monarch who had congratulated President Kruger in a wire which made the Boers think that Germany would help them had sent his grandmother an elaborate plan as to how to vanquish the rebels they opened their eyes and stared. But I made two psychological mistakes. I did not think that Francis Joseph would be sentimental enough to stick to his ally. I thought he would be only too glad to get even with the upstart dynasty of the Hohenzollerns who had been vassals of the Holy Roman empire for such a long time.

"That was the first mistake. The other one was that I underrated William's courage. I thought he would never draw the sword, and when in 1909 he informed Russia that in case of an attack against Austria he would side with Austria I gave up the idea of encircling Germany. I never considered war as part of my political system and I am sorry you blundered into it. England's traditional policy was to let the continental nations fight and weaken each other and in the meantime to take what we thought might be good to have. There was no necessity in 1914 to depart from this tradition. If I made the mistake of underrating my nephew, you undervalued and are still undervaluing Germany. Germany is invincible. Look at Prussia in 1807 and 1813 and you will feel that to 'crush German militarism' is a task which never ought to have been undertaken. To subjugate the Germany of today would demand years, and you know that we have not as much time as that at our disposal. A nation which combines courage, discipline, spirit of sacrifice, creative power, science, industry, and many other qualities which up to now seemed uncombinable cannot be crushed.

"I ALWAYS believed in facts and hated to make phrases, because I know that they have the trick of befogging the brain of the very man who uses them only to dazzle the other people. But this invincibility of Germany is a fact. So the war with Germany was poor business judgment. The ideal would have been to have Germany fight Russia, France, Italy, and if possible the United States, to get in the meantime valuable compensations and profitable business connections; to wage war against the German drummer, who is much more dangerous to us than the German soldier; to prepare and have army and navy ready for the peace conference, to be the umpire then, and in the halo of moral superiority prevent the victor from becoming too powerful.

"The idea of annihilating Germany is an outrage to common sense, as Germany is not only our most formidable competitor in the world market but our best continental customer, too. Moreover, we need a great European power as a counterbalance to Russia. We cannot allow Russia to be omnipotent in Europe. Russia is insatiable; her history proves it. It is the history of never ceasing expansion.

"If Russia threatens to become omnipotent in Europe and western and middle Asia, Japan will be the predominant power in eastern Asia. When we entered the alliance with Japan we were condescending to these outcasts. Now they grab the part of China which interests us most, and they insure their new possessions by an alliance with Russia, which means that our opportunities in China are gone. When Kiau-Chau surrendered we, too, surrendered, but very few of us knew it.

"I READ about your trade boycott after the war. You cannot be very busy if your leading men have leisure enough to indulge for hours in such inane talk. You have not the slightest idea how your little world will look after the war and how the international powers will be grouped by then. Every word that has been spoken or written down at that occasion was hypothetical, and that is wasted strength. The only result was a very disagreeable impression in the United States. Did you think you would frighten Uncle Sam into an alliance with you? It almost looks as if you did; the publication of your blacklist can hardly be explained in a different way. But here you might make a psychological mistake again; some day the Yankees will get touchy. You have gone pretty far already.

"If I were you, Sir Edward, I should covet the title of 'peacemaker.' It was bestowed on me once, but you are welcome to it. The first step is to return to international politeness, speak of the adversary with high esteem, sweep away the question of culpability, stop fighting and begin talking. Are you afraid the German diplomats will get the best of you . . . ?"

Sir Edward heard his visitor chuckle. It sounded vicious and he resented it. He made a tremendous effort to throw off the numbness which had been weighing on him during this long speech; he jumped to his feet and opened his eyes. "Your majesty," cried he, but then he stopped astonished and stared vacantly into the sleek, well shaved face of the servant who had just entered.

FURTHER BREAK IN WHEAT MART; CABLES STEADY

Bullish News from Northwest Becomes Stale—Rust Is Spreading in Canada.

The wheat market again developed a reactionary tendency yesterday and prices were forced lower by the selling of long wheat, which encouraged considerable local pressure. The buying demand was quite general at times and leading commission houses were credited with buying, but on the other hand the Armour selling was against the market, and it was the general opinion the last named intrest had sold an immense lot of wheat the last few days. Prices at the finish were ¾@1¼c lower.

The news from the northwest was more bullish if anything, and the spread of black rust was reported from sections of our northwest and in Canada not hitherto reporting it. Blight damage is also increasing. The reports from crop experts and northwest interests were decidedly bullish.

Cool Weather Forecast.

Some selling was occasioned by the forecast for possibly cooler weather northwest with showers. The Canadian forecast, however, was for fair and warmer weather. The weather conditions will continue to be the dominating influence. A bearish feature was the fact that present prices appear to satisfy many farmers in the southwest, especially in Kansas, where they are getting $1.00 to $1.05 at country stations. As a result country offerings have increased materially for the first time on the crop, and but for a scarcity of cars a big movement would probably start shortly. Elsewhere in the winter wheat belt the country offerings are not heavy, and the new wheat is commanding excellent premiums, with mills good buyers.

Foreign News Bullish.

Foreign news was not against the maintenance of prices. Cables were steady and European weather conditions continue unfavorable, being cool and wet. Broomhall reported light offers of winter wheat from this country in spite of increased receipts of winter wheat. He said it was feared export accumulation will be disappointing, and that this, as much as the rust talk, was causing nervousness. Italian reports said the estimates of the crop were too high and that harvesting yields were of inferior quality. Import requirements will exceed those of last year. Receipts were 141 cars, with primary receipts of 11,873,000 bu for the week, compared to 8,417,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 843,000 bu. Northwest reeceipts were 380 cars; last year, 158 cars. Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 50,000 bu for one day.

July Corn Closes Higher.

July corn scored a further advance, while the September eased off a little and the December was weak and 1c off. Armour was credited with buying September and selling a lot of December, and there was some selling of December corn against the purchase of December oats. Weather conditions were not materially changed, and the weather predictions did not show much hope of relief. Damage reports are increasing. The cash market was steady with moderate offerings, while sales were small at 35,000 bu.

Receipts were 208 cars, with primary receipts for the week 5,710,000 bu, compared to 3,045,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were small at 1,000 bu. Cables were unchanged.

Oats Weak at Close.

Oats developed a weak tone in sympathy with other grains, and prices at the finish were ¼@⅜c lower. Cash demand was fair and sales were 335,000 bu, partly for export. Receipts were 170 cars, and primary points had 1,054,000 bu, with weekly receipts 5,864,000 bu, compared to 3,127,000 bu a year ago. Hedging sales are moderate. Increased pressure is expected, however, as thrashing is becoming general in some sections. Yields mainly are favorable. Clearances were 873,000 bu. Grading of oats shows fine quality.

Erratic fluctuations in pork, with rallies on short covering and big breaks at times on miscellaneous selling, with a generally steady tone in lard and ribs, featured the produce markets. Hog receipts were 10,000, with 31,000 the estimate for tomorrow, and western receipts for the week of 396,400, compared to 408,000 a year ago. The cash trade is fairly active.

Rye Prices Steady.

Rye was steady with sales of No. 2 at $1.00@1.00½. Receipts were 7 cars.

Barley ruled firm. Malting was quoted 68@74c and sold 70@72c; feed was quotable, 60@67c and screenings, 48@57c. Sales of 50,000 bu feed barley were made for export. Receipts, 59 cars.

Timothyseed was quiet. September, $5.30 bid and $5.60 asked; cash lots were quoted at $4.50@7.50. Cloverseed was quiet; cash lots quoted $7.00@14.00.

Duluth flax closed 2½@3½c higher. Cash on track and July, $2.11; September, $2.10, and November, $2.09. Receipts, 6 cars. Minneapolis was 3¼c higher. Cash on track, $2.08@2.12; receipts were 15 cars. Winnipeg closed 2⅝c highly. July, $1.84¼, and October, $1.86¾. Receipts, 32 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Sentiment was a good deal mixed in wheat at the close yesterday. Local traders in many cases were bullish, but were disappointed over the sudden lull in the outside demand, which indicated an overbought market condition. There was also selling on predictions for cooler weather northwest. The Armour concern was credited with selling wheat freely, and this made some of the local longs nervous, as Armour interests have been supposed to be the largest longs. Traders generally were disposed to even up over Sunday and wait weather developments.

A cargo of durum wheat was worked for export from Duluth late Friday. Ocean freights continue to harden, indicating a big demand for boats. The southwest offerings of wheat are increasing and a scarcity of cars is complained of in Kansas. Offerings from the soft wheat states continue moderate, and red wheat is commanding good premiums over the September. Minneapolis reported a somewhat better demand for wheat, with prices steady relatively. Local prices were firm relatively and sales were 25,000 bu.

Reports on black rust were more numerous from the Canadian northwest. The Winnipeg Free Press had reports from Brandon, Rounthwaite, Beresford, Roseland, and McKelvie stating black rust and blight were damaging wheat. According to advices from Brandon the rust development has been rapid in that territory the last week. Fields already show much damage.

Weather conditions remain the chief consideration in the grain markets, and reports from over the corn belt yesterday indicated but little change in the situation. Temperatures were high in all directions and there was not much change in the northwest, although there were some showers. The forecast for Canada is for generally fair and warmer weather. There were showers at a few points in Kansas and Missouri, but purely of a local character, and the forecast is for continued fair and warm over the big corn states.

Cash corn prices were not much changed, and oats were steady to ¼c off. Offerings of corn from the country were moderate and of oats fair. Shipping sales were 35,000 bu corn and 335,000 bu oats. Part of the oats were for export. Cash houses were buyers of September oats early.

Le Count wired Barrell from Crookston, Minn.: "All fields examined today infected with black rust. Some early marquis will mature without serious damage, but 50 per cent of crop is late, and I believe will suffer severely. Some fields of velvet chaff almost ruined now. Very hot, sultry, unfavorable."

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 141 cars; corn, 208 cars; oats, 170 cars; rye, 7 cars; barley, 59 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 35,000 head, and for all next week, 115,000 head.

Munson Burdick made application for membership on the board of trade and a membership was posted for transfer by John B. Turner.

Showers were reported at Springfield, Mo.; Jefferson City, Mo., and Columbus, Kas.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Coffee futures opened at unchanged prices on continued steadiness in Brazil, but as there was very little demand around the ring, the market gradually worked off under local realizing and further selling against purchases in Brazil, with the close 3 points higher to 5 points lower, late positions showing relatively more heaviness than near. Hog receipts of 9,000 head found a good clearance at steady prices. The better grades, lightweights, sold on a firm basis, several loads reaching $10.15. Common, mixed packing hogs, on the other hand, were weak to a shade lower than on Friday. The bulk of all hogs sold at $9.45@10.05. Pigs were unchanged and in good demand at the prices.

Final figures made prime light hogs 25@30c higher than a week ago, and cheaper grades 15@20c higher. Pigs showed a net gain of 25c for the week. The average price of all hogs here this week was the same as last week's, $9.65.

CATTLE.

A decrease of about 30 per cent in cattle receipts at Chicago this week had a good effect on the market, which closed in a healthy condition and much higher than a week ago. Good steers, selling from $9.00 up, were largely 25@40c higher than low spot touched late last week. Less desirable steers closed at a net gain of 15c to 25c. Cows and heifers were up largely 25@40c, while calves showed a gain of 25c. Top steers this week sold at $10.35 and the bulk at $8.00@9.50.

Cattle at seven western markets, 113,100, against 152,500 the preceding week, and 121,400 a year ago. Total for 1916 to date, 4,152,000, against 3,713,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Receipts of 8,000 sheep and lambs included a big string of western rangers that found a clearance at $11.00. This was only 5c under the week's highest price and indicated the satisfactory condition in which the market is closing the week. Final quotations made lambs largely 75c higher than a week ago, while sheep were mostly unchanged to 10c higher. Wethers topped this week at $8.50.

Rural Credits Law.

A careful study of the new rural credits law suggests the idea that it will not, for the present, at least, compete or interfere to any great extent with the business of good farm loan companies as now conducted. The best of these companies operate only in regions where land is fertile and rainfall sufficient. In such territory a thrifty and successful farmer can now borrow money at 5 to 6 per cent, while under the federal loan bank system he would in effect pay 6.05, besides guaranteeing the mortgages of other farmers to the extent of 10 per cent of his loan. In time the federal loan banks may be able to give a lower rate, but not for the present.

To borrow money under the new law, ten or more farmers must form themselves into a farm loan association, each taking stock in the association to the amount of one-twentieth of the loan he wants. The association then buys stock in the federal loan bank to the amount of its own stock. At some time in the future this bank stock may pay dividends large enough so that some of the money will be returned to the farmers, but they cannot count on that for the present.

The stock serves as a guarantee. In case some member of the association fails to pay his loan, all the members may lose their stock, and if that does not make good the deficit, they are liable for an assessment equal to the amount of the stock. The association will have a paid secretary-treasurer and various other expenses, and if the moderate revenue provided by the law is insufficient to cover the cost an assessment may be levied on members.

With these possible expenses in view and with the prospect of serving on committees and giving time to the affairs of the association, the best farmers evidently will find the old way of getting loans good enough.

In districts where farmers now pay 8 per cent or more for money the federal loan plan may find opportunities. The fact that a high rate is paid, however, is a sure indication that the mortgages are not of the best grade, and general knowledge of this will tend to prevent the bank debentures from selling on a low income basis. As the mortgage interest rate is 1 per cent above the debenture rate, with 6 per cent as the maximum, it seems likely that 6 per cent will also be the minimum for some time.

Remington Typewriter.

E. J. D.—The Remington Typewriter company suffered a drop in net earnings of about 65 per cent in 1914. It paid dividends on its first and second preferred stocks for the first nine months of that year and has paid none since. The net earnings in 1915 were $1,127,668, almost double the 1914 amount. Interest on notes was $273,762, and $324,797 was allowed for depreciation, leaving a balance of $529,109. On Jan. 1 last an issue of $5,500,000 of serial first mortgage bonds was put out to retire $4,300,000 of notes. There is $3,998,000 first preferred stock entitled to 7 per cent dividends and $4,994,000 second preferred entitled to 8 per cent, both cumulative. On common stock 6 per cent dividends were paid to 1907, but none since except 1 per cent in 1913. There is $9,996,000 of common stock.

Brief Answers.

J. H. K.—The Midwest Oil company sold its refineries to the Midwest Refining company two years ago. Since then earnings have declined. In 1915 it earned 761,548 net. A dividend of 2 per cent was paid on the $2,000,000 of preferred stock and none on the $4,000,000 common. Another dividend of 2 per cent was paid this month, being the first for a year. As the preferred stock is entitled to 8 per cent cumulative, there is little show for the common at present.

A. H. F., Rockford, Ill.—If you buy western farm mortgages from a long established and reputable concern there is no need of your making any independent investigation. If the mortgage is to be obtained from a comparatively inexperienced concern it would be preferable to have it on property which you could see.

DO YOU OWN MINING STOCKS?

If So, Do You Read Wall Street's Most Remarkable, Dependable and Authoritative Issue on Mine and Market Conditions, Affecting the Leading Actives?

THE INDUSTRIAL AND MINING AGE

Published regularly each week since January, 1907, the INDUSTRIAL AND MINING AGE occupies the unique position of being the only House Organ in New York's great financial district which charges and collects $5 a year for each subscription. It reviews, analyzes and dissects from week to week the active N. Y. Stock Exchange and curb metal mining securities.

The paper boasts of five high-salaried experts who are its editors. Three are well-known and experienced mining engineers. The fourth is noted historiographer of America's leading mining camps. The fifth is a market student of national reputation.

Painstaking, well-informed and able, the paper is conceded to be the leading authority in its field. It is read by professional mine and market men and investors everywhere. Average weekly circulation, more than 15,000.

A copy will be sent to you free for purposes of introduction, if you write immediately.

GOLD IN PLENTY; SUPPLY GAINING; U. S. EXCEEDS ALL

McAdoo Asserts Prosperity Is Wide and Deep—Statistics Given.

The gold import movement this year has exceeded all expectations and it promises to continue on an enormous scale indefinitely. This fact largely explains the revision of banking opinion as to money rates, which in this money market are expected to average around 4½ per cent through the autumn and early winter.

What a gold import movement of around $700,000,000 since Jan. 1, 1915, means can be better realized perhaps by some concrete comparisons. It is three times the Bank of England's gold holdings when the war began, more than the United States gold production in any decade down to 1900, $200,000,000 more than the gold mined in the United States from 1880 to 1895, and more than $30,000,000 in excess of the gold produced from United States mines in the highly productive period from 1909 to 1915 inclusive.

Banking Growth Is Remarkable.

The country's banking growth the last year is no less remarkable. National banks' resources last March amounted to $13,838,000,000, a new high record by $370,000,000 and $2,271,000,000 increase in a year, which increase, the controller of the currency points out, exceeds the entire resources of the Reichsbank of Germany as reported last February.

Secretary McAdoo recently figured out that the aggregate resources of the United States national banks exceed by approximately $3,000,000,000 the combined resources of the Bank of England, Bank of France, Reichsbank, Bank of the Netherlands, Swiss National bank, and Bank of Japan. The total in March was reported officially as $10,790,000,000, or an increase of $411,000,000 in three months and of $2,106,000,000 in one year. Mr. McAdoo says:

"These figures are so prodigious as to be almost unbelievable. They reflect infallibly a degree of prosperity as wide and deep as it is amazing and gratifying. The country's prosperity is strikingly reflected in the surplus reserves of the national banks. Adding the loaning power of the state banks and trust companies we have an aggregate loaning power around $6,000,000,000."

All Watching the Weather.

Banking and commercial interests the country over are watching the weather situation with more interest, not to mention anxiety, than is often displayed. While it is the usual thing for speculators to kill off the crops several times during the period of growth and maturity only to see them fill the granaries later, there never before has been a war situation of sufficient length and importance to introduce the complications that now easily might arise.

Railways of the northwest, both sides of the international line, have been counting confidently on large tonnage from that section. The heat is daily shriveling up their prospects and altering their calculations. Wheat fields in a large area of the northwest are waving unfilled heads where the appearance promised bountiful yields. The southwestern and western edges of the corn belt are also beginning to get a taste of the weather effects and there are already murmurings of losses beginning to appear nearer the heart of the corn belt.

Country in Good Situation.

The trade did not awake last year to the importance of the frosts in early October until it had discovered, after months of compiling of the evidence, that a large portion of the corn in the northern one-third of the belt was hopelessly lost. The government's official report as of conditions on July 1 showed a shortage of over 700,000,000 bushels in the five leading grains, as compared with final yields last year. Railway, banking and commercial interests will therefore be quick to note any further crop losses and will pray for rain and a return to more normal temperatures in the great central valleys.

Nevertheless, if in the order of things, not now seriously expected but highly possible, this country should suffer a real crop calamity, it could not come at a time when the country were more prosperous. It has been taking back its own securities from Europe at low prices and selling them what they want at good prices, with the result as shown in the gold supply above.

Eastern Market Deserted.

Traders in stocks had little to encourage them in their advices from the east. Only 100,000 shares were traded in during the two hour session, as most of the active people had taken occasion to get out of town the day before.

The list showed firmness wherever there was enough doing to show anything, but stockbrokers generally declared the day almost a blank.

Further Oil Reductions.

All grades of crude oil were reduced 3c per barrel by Joseph Seep, purchasing agent at Oil City, yesterday. The Texas company reduced prices of Caddo, Louisiana heavy crude, and Crichton light crude 5c per barrel to 65c for both grades. Dating from yesterday, the Mid-Continent crude oil price, as announced from Independence, Kas., is $1.35 per barrel.

The Texas company has cut the price of gasoline to 22c per barrel, tank wagon basis in New Jersey, following the reduction by the Standard Oil company.

More Activity in Munitions.

An order for 9 inch high explosive shells has been placed with the Babcock & Wilcox company by the British government. It is understood the order will amount to between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000, but the figures are being withheld by the company. Two new factories are to be built at Akron, O., and several hundred additional workmen are being sent there to handle the order.

It is estimated that munitions orders placed in this country since July 21 total $82,500,000. Nearly all have been for large shells. More orders are being negotiated and it is expected that the total will be swelled to $120,000,000 in the next two weeks by the orders on which specifications are now being figured.

Chicago Stock Exchange.

More than the usual Saturday interest was shown in the few stocks that were traded in on the local exchange. Lindsay Light scored an advance of one point and held it at the close. Stewart-Warner gained 1¼ points and retained 1⅛. Swifts closed with a reaction of 1 point from the previous day's close, finishing at 141. Sears-Roebuck had a range of one point, opening and closing at 200. Little was done outside of the above.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago steady at 4@4½ per cent on collateral, 4@4½ per cent on commercial paper, and 4½@5 per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold at 10c and 5c discount. Chicago bank clearings were $51,785,294.

Chicago Bank Clearings.

Chicago bank clearings for the week ended July 29 were $348,884,291, as compared with $297,390,807 for the corresponding week last year. This is an increase of $51,493,484, or 17.3 per cent. The figures:

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The new Wabash railway almost earned its full year's fixed and other charges in six months from Jan. 1 to June 30. Including "other income," available net after deduction of operating expenses and taxes was about $1,000,000 short of full year's requirements for interest, rentals, hire of equipment and all miscellaneous charges. Net has lately been averaging $1,000,000, so that it is considered fair to estimate that in seven months of the current calendar year the company will earn all its fixed charges for the twelve months to end Dec. 31 next. Wabash management is seriously considering advisability of changing the fiscal period which now ends June 30 to end Dec. 31. On the basis of the last six months the Wabash should close its twelve months on Dec. 31 with a surplus of $5,000,000, although the company would still show 5 per cent earned on its $46,200,000 preferred A and 4 per cent on the $48,720,000 preferred B stock.

The American Public Utilities company report for the week ending July 15 shows an increase of 452,012 cubic feet of gas in the sendout of all its plants over the corresponding week of 1915. The increase in electric outfit of all the company's plants during the same period was 257,715 kilowatt hours over that of last year's corresponding week.

Munitions orders aggregating $82,500,000 have been placed in this country by the British government since July 21, which was about the date of the last resumption of foreign ordering in this line. Negotiations are now on which promise within the next two weeks to swell the total to $120,000,000.

Interurban service between Kansas City and Topeka will be inaugurated over the line of the Leavenworth and Topeka which has just been bought from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road by the Willard E. Winner interests of Kansas City. It is claimed that $250,000 covers the purchase price.

The New Morrison hotel reports capacity business during the month of July. Work will soon begin on the building for the second section to occupy the corner of Clark and Madison streets.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

LONDON, July 29.—Money was fairly plentiful, but discount rates were firmly maintained today. Shipping shares were again the feature of the trading on the stock exchange. A considerable business was transacted and prices reacted early, but recovered and closed strong. Otherwise there was little doing beyond a few sales of gilt edged securities at easy prices. American securities were dull and uninteresting. Bar silver, 30¾d per ounce. Money, 4¾ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 5⅝@5¾ per cent; three months, 5⅝@5¾ per cent.

Total sales of stocks, 100,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $2,450,000.

TRADING IS SLUGGISH.

New York, July 29.—For all practical purposes today's session of the stock market might well have been omitted. Dealings were at an irreducible minimum, even for a midsummer week end. The usual leaders, like United States Steel, Mercantile Marine, Mexican Petroleum, and a few equipments and industrials made up more than 50 per cent.

Many standard stocks were not recorded at all, and gains of 1 to 3 points in issues of the character of New York Air Brake, American Car and more minor specialties were without the slightest influence elsewhere.

Rails were almost motionless, with some irregular changes, Pennsylvania showing slight pressure, with moderate gains for Canadian Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line, and four points for Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh, which recently increased the dividend rate.

French Notes Stick at 98.

In point of activity and importance international bond issues constituted the real feature of the day. Anglo-French 5s changed hands to the extent of almost $1,100,000, mostly at 95¼, a small concession, and the new French notes were traded in to a total of almost $500,000, all at 98, the subscription price, at which this issue seems to be "pegged."

General news included several June statements of railway earnings, Canadian Pacific showing a net increase of slightly more than $1,000,000 and Norfolk and Western $450,000.

Dealings in foreign exchange were in keeping with the dull stock market, sterling and francs being unaltered, with some improvement in marks and rubles.

Local banks' conditions were strengthened by a further small cash gain and increase in reserves, but the clearing house statement lacked especial feature.

United States 3s and Panama 2s advanced ¼, Panama 3s 1½, and United States 2s declined ¼ per cent on call during the week.

Par Value, $10.00 Each

We offer, subject to prior sale and advance in price, capital stock of this corporation at $8.00 Per Share
with a bonus of Ben-Hur Motor Common (the manufacturing company).

This offers an unusual opportunity to investors who wish to become identified with the selling end of the gigantic motor car industry.

The supply for medium priced cars is overwhelmingly short of the demand. The Ben-Hur car, because of its exceptional quality, will attract more than its fair share of this unprecedented demand.

DESPITE the intense heat of the last few days and the fact that this is the season of "midsummer dullness," real estate men were busy last week and several important transactions were closed. Every section of the city was represented in the dealing, which embraced all classes of realty.

Operators and brokers expressed themselves as particularly gratified over the conditions, which they profess to believe indicate a booming business as soon as the hot season is over.

The loop district had the most notable deal—the sale of a fee for $435,000—but outside business property, industrial sites, and apartments all figured prominently in the week's trading.

McCormick Estate Buys Fee.

The downtown deal was the sale by purchase by the Leander J. McCormick estate from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of the fee under the Unity building, 125-33 North Dearborn street, at the northeast corner of Court place for $435,000. The ground is 80x120 feet, and the sale is therefore at the rate of $5,437.50 a front foot and $45.31 a square foot. The deal was negotiated by Albert L. Strauss and H. G. Miller.

With this purchase the McCormick estate acquires control of a frontage of 180 feet on Dearborn street and 120 feet on Randolph street, extending from the southeast corner of those streets, the property just bought adjoining the McCormick building on the south. It is understood no change in the condition of the property is contemplated.

Under 99 Year Lease.

The ground involved in the present transaction was leased by the late Gov. J. P. Altgeld from T. G. Richardson of New Orleans for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1890, at a yearly rental of $18,000. It can thus be seen that the deal just closed is on a 4.15 per cent basis of investment. The fee was sold by Mrs. Richardson to the Chapin family, Michigan capitalists, about ten years ago, and they, in turn, disposed of the fee in May, 1914, to a local capitalist, whose name was withheld, for $400,000, which was at the rate of $5,000 a front foot and $41.66 a square foot. Title at that time was taken by W. C. Niblack, and he conveyed title to the Chicago Title and Trust company as trustee.

The board of review valued the property at $717,039, of which $324,000 is in the sixteen story Unity building. An interesting feature in connection with the history of the property is the fact that the holding was sold on May 11, 1880, for $68,894, and on Oct. 14, 1885, for $235,000. In the present sale the seller nets a profit of $35 000 in addition to the ground rents for two years.

$2,000,000 Hyde Park Hotel.

Another important item of the week was the announcement of plans which will mean that Hyde Park is to have another big, high class fireproof hotel. It will be ten stories high, will cost $2,000,000, and will have 600 rooms. It will be built at the southwest corner of Forty-third street and the lake shore. Work will begin on the first unit within a month or so, it is announced.

H. W. Sisson has had plans prepared by Architect H. R. Wilson for the first section, which will cost $1,000,000 and will contain 289 guest rooms. Upon its completion the second section, slightly larger than the first, will be built. It will also cost $1,000,000.

The lot controlled by Mr. Sisson at that point is 222x230 feet in extent and the first unit of the proposed apartment hotel will cover 95x171 feet of ground. An unusual feature of this lot is the fact that there is a fifty-one foot building line, which will be utilized for landscaping purposes and other decorative features.

COOK REALTY BOARD TO HOLD OUTING IN INDIANA

Members of the Cook county real estate board plan to hold their tenth annual outing and basket picnic Wednesday, Aug. 9, at Michigan City, Ind. They have chartered the boat Theodore Roosevelt, which will leave the municipal pier at 10 o'clock. It will be a four hour ride—two hours going and two returning—with four hours' time to see Michigan City. There will be music and dancing on the boat. When they get to Michigan City they will hold races and prizes will be given.

ASK BIDS ON NEW FACTORY.

McClernan & Co., manufacturers of metal kitchen cabinets, now occupying a space in the Central Manufacturing district at the stock yards, are asking for bids for a $35,000 factory building, to be erected at North Chicago, the new factory district up the north shore. The deal has been negotiated by the Northern Illinois Industrial company, of which C. H. Sayler is president.

SAMPLES OF BUILDING ACTIVITY

Modern Apartments Under Construction at Oakley Boulevard and Thomas Street Are Shown in Upper Picture. Below Is New Addition to Stromberg Motor Devices Company's Plant.

WORK has been started upon an attractive structure to be known as the Oakley Boulevard apartments, at the southeast corner of Oakley boulevard and Thomas street, which is being erected by Messrs. Kaplan, Williams & Richie. The building will cover 62½x108 feet and will contain fifteen apartments, three of six rooms and eleven of four rooms, each with a sun parlor. A bond issue loan of $30,000, six years, at 6 per cent, has been underwritten upon the property by Baer, Eisendrath & Co.

Owing to the rapid increase of their business, the Stromberg Motor Devices company, manufacturers of carburetors, have acquired through C. O. Goss of E. A. Cummings & Co. forty-one feet adjoining its present plant at 62-66 East Twenty-fifth street, on the west, as the site of an addition to the plant which will cost approximately $100,000. Plans for the structure, which will be six stories and basement high, of fireproof construction, have been made by C. W. & George L. Rapp, architects. The above cut shows the completed building, which, it is said, will be one of the most up to date manufacturing plants in the city. The factory will have a total south frontage of 103 feet on Twenty-fifth street, and a depth of 105 feet, with an alley on the east. Contracts have already been let for razing the old residence on the lot. The building is opposite the new service building of the Fisk Rubber company.

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY BRISK

Numerous Trades Indicate Corners in Demand as Investments.

Sales of outlying business holdings were fairly numerous during the week, indicating the continued demand for this class of property as investment.

An important sale embraced the property at 1617-19 South Michigan avenue. It has a ground area of 37½x163 feet and is improved with a new three story building, occupied by Adams & Engs, agents for the Auburn automobile. It was sold by Mrs. Flora L. Reed of Wellesley, Mass., to Martha E. and George P. Braun and Mabel B. Papin for a reported consideration of $80,000.

The six apartment building at 4040-42 Kenwood avenue and other unincumbered property with a total valuation of $35,000 was conveyed as part payment by the purchasers. William A. Bond & Co., for the seller, and Frank G. Pagin & Co., for the buyer, were the brokers.

Plans Auto Salesroom Building.

Robert M. Fair intends to improve the property on Wilson avenue, 175 feet east of Sheridan road, 100x192 feet in extent, north front, he recently acquired from the Sheridan road Theater company, with a two story reinforced concrete building for automobile salesroom purposes, to be occupied by Louis Geyler & Co., agents for the Hudson automobile. The building will cost about $90,000. The transaction was closed by Charles O. Goss of E. A. Cummings & Co.

In an interesting west side transaction the property in Canal street, 110 feet south of Harrison street, east front, 22x160 feet, was bought by Joseph G. Snydacker of the board of trade firm of Scotten & Snydacker from G. R. Roberts for an indicated consideration of $50,000. Disregarding improvements, this is at the rate of about $2,273 a front foot. The purchase was made through Charles W. Braithwaite.

Mr. Snydacker also acquired the leasehold interest on the property adjoining his purchase on the south. The holding is 66x160 feet. The consideration in this transaction was not disclosed. It is reported that a large warehouse will be erected on these properties and the other frontage on the west side of Canal street south to Taylor street.

Sixty-first Street Corner Sold.

The business property at the southeast corner of Sixty-first street and South Park avenue, with 124x97 feet of ground, has been purchased by Isador Baumgartl from Herman H. Goodfriend for a reported consideration of $57,500, subject to $27,500 incumbrance. The property is improved with a two story white tile front building containing stores and offices. The buyer conveyed in part payment the three apartment structure at 4545 Michigan avenue. Hugo Ash & Co. negotiated the deal.

INVESTORS FROM OTHER CITIES BUY FLATS IN CHICAGO

South Side Apartments Figure in Leading Sales of Week.

The apartment building market last week was featured by the sale of several large and well known structures on the south side to out of town investors.

John Winsor and George E. Lottman of Peoria, Ill., bought from Benjamin H. Wallace the five story structure containing six stores and 100 apartments on 150x175 feet of ground at 5511-25 Kenwood avenue for a reported consideration of $200,000, subject to an incumbrance of $5,000.

In part payment several improved holdings in Chicago and Peoria were transferred to Mr. Wallace. The Kenwood avenue building is said to have a yearly rental of $31,000. John F. Wallace & Co. closed the transaction.

Beveridge Apartments Sold.

The same brokers also sold for Henry B. Hatch of Hart, Mich., to Leander J. Ibold and Charlotte D. Renolds the seven story structure known as the Beveridge, at the southwest corner of Calumet avenut and Twenty-sixth street, with 79x125 feet of ground and containing four stores and sixty-five apartments, for a reported price of $125,000, subject to $50,000 incumbrance. The building is said to have a yearly rental of $20,000.

In another transaction Mr. Hatch acquired the property at the northwest corner of Ellis avenue and Fortieth street, east front, 70x200 feet, improved with a building containing thirty-three apartments, from Edward M. Bertha, for an indicated consideration of $125,000, subject to $75,000 incumbrance. Keller & Harris negotiated the deal.

New York Man Sells.

The apartment premises at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Bryn Mawr avenues, 100x150 feet in extent, have been acquired by Hugo Sonnenschein from Charles D. Brower of New York City and Ogden Brower of Mont Clair, N. J., for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to $20,000 incumbrance. Mr. Sonnenschein subsequently conveyed the property to the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee, for an indicated price of $50,000.

Adelor J. Petit, former judge of the Circuit court, has bought from Mrs. Louis W. Stayart the high grade two apartment structure at 5424 Kenmore avenue, with 50x150 feet of ground, for a reported price of $25,500 cash. The deal was negotiated by Broomell Brothers, with Howard S. Evans associated.

John J. Fitzgerald has acquired from J. B. Graves the apartment property at the northwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Homan avenue, 41x142 feet in extent, for an indicated consideration of $30,000. The buyer conveyed in part payment the apartment premises on Hermitage avenue, 150 feet north of Van Buren street, east front, thirty-five feet to alley, for an indicated price of $11,000.

Pays $35,000 for Corner.

Benjamin H. Wallace has sold to Mayer Kadishewitz and Frank Buchel the fifteen apartment structure at the northeast corner of Central Park avenue and Fifteenth street, 48x125 feet, with a reported rental of $6,000 yearly, for a reported price of $35,000, subject to $24,000 incumbrance. In part payment the purchasers conveyed the stores and theater with 50x165 feet of ground at 3923 North Ashland avenue for a reported price of $16,500. The deal was reported by John F. Wallace & Co. Stafford & Trankle and the Liberty Realty company as brokers.

NO HOSPITAL BUILDING PLANS IN MARQUETTE MANOR

Through an error it was reported that the Augustana hospital plans to erect new hospital buildings in Marquette Manor. Instead it is the Augustinian Society of Illinois, a Catholic institution, which has taken title to a block bounded by Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets and Fairfield and Washtenaw avenues, comprising forty lots. The society already has erected a large school and church on the grounds and additional buildings will be erected from time to time. A large investment will be made there within a few years, according to present plans. The building there now and the one just nearing completion will cost about $250,000.

Leases and Loans.

WHILE the general leasing market was comparatively quiet last week, a notable feature was the closing of a long term lease in South State street, involving the erection of a new building to cost at least $100,000.

The lease closed was that of the L. Fish Furniture company from the Soldiers' Home of Chicago on the property 1903-11 South State street. The lease is for ninety-nine years at an annual rental of $3,000 for the first ten years, $5,400 for the next ten years, and $6,000 for the last seventy-nine years of the term.

By terms of the lease the furniture company is compelled to build a structure to cost at least $100,000 before May 1, 1921. It is said the company contemplates erecting a building much in excess of the required figure, probably $150,000 or $200,000.

The company, under the terms of the contract, is given an option of purchasing the fee within the first five years for $90,000; in the second five years for $92,500; in the third five for $97,000, and the fourth five for $100,000. Figuring the average rental, $5,697, on a 5 per cent basis of capitalization, the property is given a ground leasing value of $113,940, or $1,139 a front foot, or 11.63 a square foot.

Record was made last week of a lease by Charles H. Kusel and Daniel W. Fishell from Sivert Hollesen of the property at the northeast corner of Devon avenue and North Clark street, 121x191 feet on Clark street, the east 65 feet having a depth of 260 feet. The lease is for ninety-nine years from March 1, 1916, and provides for a yearly rental of $7,000 for the first ten years and $7,500 for eighty-nine years. The average annual rental—$7,449—is 5 per cent on a ground value of $149,980. The lessees are required to erect a new business block to cost at least $35,000 prior to Feb. 1, 1919. This land formerly was under lease to John Refakes.

Theresa Schiavone has leased the theater structure at 1536-42 North Crawford avenue, between North avenue and Lemoyne street, from Peter Naziopulos for ten years at an aggregate rental of $66,000 for the term.

The American Wall Paper company has leased the five upper floors of the Francis A. Hardy building at 825-27 South Wabash avenue for a period of years at a total rental of $41,500. Clark & Trainer and Albert W. Wetten & Co. were the brokers in the deal.

The estate of Lucius G. Fisher has obtained a loan of $175,000, bearing 4½ per cent interest and running for five years from Oct. 1, 1916, secured by a trust deed to the premises at 364-76 West Monroe street, 135x99.5 feet in extent, being at the northeast corner of the Chicago river, improved with a seven story mercantile building. The loan was made by R. D. Hill & Co. The property is valued by the board of review at $378,492, of which $100,000 is in the improvements.

OLD AVIATION FIELD DIVIDED

W. H. Britigan & Co. to Place Large West Side Tract on Market.

One of the features of the week in the real estate market is the opening of a new subdivision, which is to be known as Parkholme, on the west side, between Forty-eighth and Fifty-second avenues, and between Sixteenth and Nineteenth streets. This property is to be subdivided and placed on the market by William H. Britigan & Co., who have been operating in Marquette Manor, Garfield Manor and Auburn Highlands—all southwest side property.

This tract of land comprises eighty acres, and up to thirty years ago it was owned by the late Hetty Green. She in turn sold it to the former owners, who have held it for the last thirty years. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. negotiated the placing of this land in trust with the Chicago Title and Trust company and William H. Britigan & Co. have taken over the sale of the property for the beneficiaries.

This property, which was formerly known as the Aviation field, is located in the heart of a section that has had a marvelous growth in the last three years. The Western Electric plant and the Grant Locomotive works are located in this section.

"Parkholme is destined to be one of the greatest residential sections on the west side. The Metropolitan Elevated railroad borders this property on the south, and has three elevated stations within a short distance of every lot. The property is fully surrounded by surface lines. Parkholme will be fully developed."

FACTORY SITE DEALS FEATURE OF THE TRADING

Sales of Property on the North Branch and in South Chicago the Leaders.

A number of important transactions in industrial property, including one on the north branch of the Chicago river and another in South Chicago, comprised a feature of the market during the week.

The Central Trust Company of Illinois, acting for unnamed clients, has taken title through Edward A. Seegers, a clerk in the bank, to the property of the Hanna Engineering works, fronting on the north branch of the Chicago river, 130 feet southeast of Webster avenue, for a stated consideration of $125,000. The property has a northeast frontage of 165x550 feet on the southeast and 475 feet on the northwest. The holding is improved with a two story brick factory building and contains slightly more than two acres of ground. The purchasers gave a purchase money mortgage on the property to obtain $100,000 for five years at 5 per cent interest.

Iron Company Buys Tract.

In the South Chicago deal the Iroquois Iron company, recently bought by the By-Products Coke corporation interests, purchased a tract of approximately ten acres for an indicated consideration of $107,000 from the American Smelting and Refining company. The property consists of one parcel fronting west on Sixth or Kreiter avenue, fifty feet southeast of Ninety-fourth street, 395x938 feet, and a second parcel adjoining the other on the north, 292x174x339 feet. No incumbrance is shown in the transfer.

The erection of a new packing plant to cost $170,000 is involved in the sale by the Acme Packing company by the Illinois Smoked Meat company of 70,000 square feet of land at the northeast corner of Western avenue and Forty-fifth place for $30,000. The property is 150x464 feet in extent. The tract comprises the south half of the block purchased last week by the Acme company for $52,000 as the site of a plant to cost about $230,000. Hodge & Chandler were the brokers.

Railroad Takes Title.

There have been filed for record three deeds by which the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway company takes title to five parcels of property in the west side railroad district, for a total stated price of $188,370. Carl T. Kelly conveys title to an undivided one-half interest in the property on Twelfth street, 522 feet east of Canal street, south front, 30x542 feet, containing 13,551 square feet, for $81,310, being at the rate of $12 a square foot for the entire holding. Title to property in Taylor street, 452 feet east of Canal street, north front, 30x128 feet, containing 6,545 square feet, and other property containing 5,082 square feet, was conveyed to the road by Charles M. South of Sewickley, Pa., for $61,336, or at the rate of $5.82 a square foot.

The road obtained title from W. B. Blake to property in Stewart avenue, 200 feet south of Polk street, west front, 98x14 feet, containing 1,394 square feet, and other property, comprising 9,082 square feet, for $45,724, being at the rate of $4.39 a square foot.

NORTH SHORE REALTY MEN TO HOLD OUTING THURSDAY.

Real estate men of the north shore are making reservations for the automobile outing trip next Thursday at "The House That Jack Built," Milwaukee avenue and Des Plaines river, under the auspices of the Edgewater and Rogers Park Real Estate Men's association. Paul E. Hartung, chairman of the prize committee, reports many novel prizes being offered by merchants who cater to real estate men's needs. The parade will start at 9 a. m. from a point near Devon avenue and Broadway. After an elaborate chicken dinner there will be baseball games, fat men's races and other sports.

SCHULTE AND FISCHER SENT TO PIRATES FOR WILSON

JOCKEY THROWN AT HAWTHORNE MAY NOT LIVE

Accident to Hack Mars Close of the Meeting; Dodge Victor.

BY E. S. MERRILL.

A serious accident marred the final day's racing of the Illinois Jockey club's thirteen day meeting. In the first race at Hawthorne yesterday Jockey Raymond Hack was hurled in the midst of a field of horses at the first turn of the course and was so badly injured that he was still unconscious at a late hour last night at St. Anthony de Padua hospital.

The physician at the hospital would not venture an opinion last night as to the lad's chances of recovering. The boy is suffering from a concussion of the brain.

Hack, who was probably the lightest rider at the track, had the mount on an unruly horse, Just Red, which previously had run away following one of his races at the meeting. The horse was stepped on from behind as the field reached the turn in the mile and seventy yard race and stumbled. The boy fell off and the horse turned almost a complete somersault. The animal's back was broken and the boy was picked up unconscious.

Lad Sought by Many Owners.

Hack is 16 years old and small for his age. He was under contract with J. Everman, the trainer of Just Red, and the latter has recently had tempting offers to sell the lad's contract to eastern horse owners. The boy's mother and brother witnessed yesterday's accident, the gravity of which was lost on most of the holiday crowd, which was unaware of the accident.

But for this near-tragedy the windup was a favorable one for the meeting. The horses ran fairly true to form in most instances, there were several good contests, and a good breeze saved the fair sized crowd from much of the heat torture that would otherwise have prevailed. It was the smallest Saturday attendance of the meeting, attributable probably to the weather.

Polo Pony Race a Feature.

A novel feature, indicating the intention of the Illinois Jockey club to encourage a new element in racing, was a contest for polo ponies ridden by their owners, which was given the place of honor on the program. It resulted in a Hotel Sherman victory, the winning rider and owner being Manager Frank W. Bering of that hostelry, with Eugene V. Belfeld, one of the proprietors of the hotel, landing second place.

Mr. Bering conceded weight to all his rivals, but that did not prevent him from landing his South Shore Country club show winner, Cherry, many lengths in front of the rest of the field in the half mile race. All the six competitors are members of the Whip and Spur club. The prize was a cup presented by that organization.

Scratches made almost a farce of the supposed racing feature of the day's card—the Illinois Jockey Club Gold Cup handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth. Everything withdrew except the Weber & Ward Derby pair, Dodge and Franklin, and the 5 year old handicap horse, Leo Skolny. Eight names were on the published entry list, and it would seem that a more accurate forecast of the probable starters might have been obtained.

Dodge Runs Great Race.

Horsemen got plenty of entertainment out of the race, if the public did not, because it showed a great performance by the Derby winner, Dodge. Giving away a lot of weight to the older horse, he led every foot of the journey and won with the greatest ease in 1:45 4-5, within less than a second of the track record. He, a 3 year old, was carrying 120 pounds, whereas the track record was made by Carnero, a 5 year old, carrying only 107. Dodge could easily have surpassed this record, even at the weight, had he been pressed.

Leo Skolny made a laborious effort to keep within striking distance of the flying Dodge most of the journey, but was perceptibly tired in the run home, and finally was passed out by Franklin, which previously had trailed, and had to be satisfied with third money.

Other Goods Nags Win.

In addition to Dodge, three other good racehorses—Grasmere, Vogue, and Eddie T.—notably the first two—won their races yesterday. The first named was a 1 to 2 shot in the last race and won like a 1 to 5 shot. Vogue did not have matters so easy, as a good field of sprinters, with a couple of Derby colts in it, caused her to extend herself throughout the fifth race to win under an energetic ride, with Faux Col and Pesky heads apart only half a length away. Eddie T. had a lot of trouble overcoming a bad beginning in the second race, but, once in front in the stretch, he did not leave his supporters much cause for worry.

The other winner of the day, Volant, from the H. G. Bedwell stable, showed a sharp form reversal, which caused much unfavorable comment.

The happiest man at the track when the last race had been run was Sheriff Traeger. "I'm glad it is over," he said. "It has been two weeks of constant worry and hard work. I thought I was going to keel over day before yesterday.

"The future? I'm sure I don't know. I only hope there are no more meetings like this. They ought to either pass a law forbidding horses to race or they should pass a law legalizing some forms of wagering. If two men standing beside me make a wager but do not pass any money, it is of no use for me to arrest them, because they will be acquitted."

Asked whether he favored a racing law, the sheriff hesitated. 'I believe horse racing might be made all right," he finally said, "with careful restrictions, but not as it has been here. With this kind of racing the public officials are in a peck of trouble. Something should be done to relieve such a situation."

Huffman Ruled Off for Life.

A sensational incident was the announcement that Johnny Huffman, once one of the best known turfmen in the west, had been ruled off the turf for life. Steward Fitzgerald took the action, after a warning, because Huffman refused to turn over Mary H., his fast 3 year old filly which was beaten Friday by Biddy and then was claimed by W. A. Baumgarden under the selling race rules.

Huffman was the trainer of Yo Tambien, one of the greatest race horses in America, in the early nineties. It is the second time he has been ruled off for a similar offense, having failed to turn over a racer named Hurry at St. Louis about fifteen years ago.

TRADE IS MADE BECAUSE CUBS NEED CATCHER

Last of "Old Guard" Goes with Release of Veteran Outfielder.

BY SAM WELLER.

Frank Schulte is no longer a Cub. With Catcher Bill Fischer the veteran outfielder was traded to Pittsburgh yesterday for Catcher Art Wilson, whom the Cubs sold to the Pirates last winter. President Weeghman of the Cubs and Prexy Dreyfuss of the Pirates arranged the deal via long distance telephone. Schulte and Fischer left the Cubs last night to join their new mates at New York, and Wilson went from Gotham to Philadelphia to report to Manager Tinker.

Discussing the trade last night, President Weeghman said it was merely in line with his efforts to inject more ginger into his team.

Pirates Hot After Schulte.

"Schulte is still a grand ball player," said Weeghman. "He has been with the team too long to retain all his enthusiasm, however. Pittsburgh has wanted him for some time. We are in need of a capable catcher with Archer laid up, and Fischer's work this season has been a sad disappointment. We had to let Schulte go with Fischer to land Wilson.

"It seems Wilson had an off year last season in the Federal league. He has been catching great ball for Pittsburgh. Art has a lot of life, too, and his presence behind the bat ought to instill a lot of pepper into the team. Art also is a right handed hitter, so we will be better fortified against southpaw pitching than with Fischer, who hits left handed.

Last of the "Old Guard."

"Schulte was practically the last of the 'old guard' that made up Frank Chance's famous pennant machine, and I hated to let him go. But it had to be done, and I believe Frank will profit by the change. With Carey and Hinchman he will hold down a regular berth for Callahan, and the change of pasture should make a big mprovement in his work."

Frank Schulte was playing his twelfth year as a Cub regular and until Charles Weeghman and his associates purchased the former west side club last winter was the only surviving member of the famous champions who won three pennants in a row, 1906, 1907, and 1908. Schulte was the only one of the "500" club left on the team until it changed hands and brought back Joe Tinker and Mordecai Brown. Those eligible for the "500" club were the players who took part in 500 or more games starting with the season of 1906.

Awarded Chalmers Trophy.

Always one of the quietest and most modest of the famous Cubs, Schulte also was one of the most popular players with the Chicago fans, and in 1911 his playing was so great that he was awarded the Chalmers trophy of an automobile, having been voted as the most valuable player to his club of any player in the National league. That season Schulte was credited with twenty-two home runs.

It was in 1905 that Schulte came to the Cubs, having been purchased from the Syracuse club. He was the regular left fielder that season and the following year was shifted to right field after Sheckard became a Cub. He stayed in right field for a period of ten years.

Chief Delight in Horses.

Outside of baseball Schulte's chief delight is in horses, and at one time he owned a fast pacer and won several races on the ice during the winter months near Syracuse. It was while he indulged in the luxury of a fast horse that he acquired the nickname of Wildfire, which has stuck to him for years. In the off seasons now Schulte lives on a big plantation in Georgia, which he purchased a few years ago, and unlike most of the prosperous farmers of that state, he drives a "nag" in a light racing buggy instead of an automobile.

Art Wilson jumped from the New York Giants to the Chicago Federals in the winter preceding the 1914 pennant race. That year the Feds branched out with steel and concrete stands and made a bid for recognition as a major league. Wilson hardly could be classed as a real "jumper." With Chief Meyers doing practically all the catching for the Giants, Art never had much chance to break into a game, and he deserted and joined the outlaw league largely so he might secure a regular's berth.

Stars with Pittsburgh.

With the Chifeds Wilson won the sobriquet "Home Run Wilson," because of the many drives he sent out of the north side park. Last season Wilson had trouble with his arm, and his batting also fell off. That was what induced Tinker to let him go to Pittsburgh. With Callahan Art seems to have taken a new start and his work all season has been one of the bright spots in the playing of the Pirates.

Baron Bill Fischer jumped the Brooklyn Nationals to join the Chicago Federals before the independents started their second big season in 1915. When Wilson went bad last season Fischer became the main dependence of the Whales behind the bat. His throwing was of high order, and his batting won him a permanent berth in a hurry. He looked so good Tinker kept him in preference to Wilson when Manager Joe had to let a catcher go last winter.

Both Wilson and Fischer have wartime contracts which expire with the current season. Wilson signed for three years when he came here, and Fischer for two years.

Pick Five Amateur Players in "Tribune" Finals Today

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF

Friends of the players and fans will be admitted without charge to "The Tribune" contest today.

There will be five jubilant amateur baseball players in Chicago tonight. They will be the winners of the four TRIBUNE prizes and the B. B. Johnson special prize in the second annual TRIBUNE amateur baseball contests, the finals of which will take place this morning at Weeghman park, beginning at 10:30 o'clock.

Aside from the prizes, considered the most liberal and the most satisfactory ever offered for the encouragement of baseball among younger players, the winners will have the satisfaction of knowing that a competent board of judges and an advisory board of some of the wisest heads in baseball consider them the premier prospects culled from a field of 580 entrants, an entry list which compares with 399 in the inaugural contest held last season.

First Trip with Sox.

To be chosen from such a large field in such keen competition insures for the successful youngsters a degree of attention from major and minor league managers that is practically sure to bring offers in the professional field. Two of the boys chosen will accompany the White Sox upon their next eastern trip, leaving Chicago Aug. 13, and two will go with the Cubs, leaving Chicago Sept. 10 and swing around the eastern circuit.

The hotel and railroad expenses of these four boys will be paid by THE TRIBUNE. By special arrangement with Presidents Comiskey and Weeghman, they will be treated as actual members of the team while on the road—appearing in uniform, taking part in the preliminary practice, and sitting on the bench with the other players, possibly getting into a championship contest as a substitute. They will be under the direct observation of Managers Rowland and Tinker. Isn't that a wonderful opportunity to learn baseball from the inside?

Johnson Prize for Youngster.

The B. B. Johnson special prize is a trip to the world's series this fall as the guest of the president of the American league. It will be awarded to the best amateur player in the tourney under 18 years old. The offer was prompted by Mr. Johnson's well known sympathy with all movements to encourage the younger boys to play clean baseball and his desire that well behaved and promising youngsters be given an opportunity to enter the professional ranks, thereby elevating the national game.

THE TRIBUNE has been especially fortunate in securing an advisory board of exceptional caliber for today, as follows:

B. B. Johnson, president American league.

Charles A. Comiskey, owner White Sox.

Clarence H. Rowland, manager White Sox.

Charles H. Weeghman, president Cubs.

T. M. Chivington, president American association.

Robert M. Sweitzer, donor Sweitzer cup to semi-pros.

These keen judges of budding baseball talent will be asked their opinions and consulted by THE TRIBUNE'S regular board of judges—C. E. Eldridge, James Ryan, and Charles Reading—who have conducted the preliminaries with such general satisfaction.

Show Their Sportsmanship.

That the members of the advisory board without exception accepted the invitation to be present in this sweltering weather is a striking testimonial of the value and importance they attach to THE TRIBUNE tourney. President Johnson of the American league is the only possible absentee. He was feeling the effects of the heat yesterday, but promised to be present if physically able. He will not, of course, express an opinion in the selection of the youngster who will be his guest at the world's series.

Regular Game Program.

The thirty-five finalists who will appear at Weeghman park this morning in a regular game between picked nines are survivors of the long series of tryouts in the last two months, during which every one of the 580 candidates was given a chance to show his wares. The final contests will be free to the public and friends of the players through the courtesy of President Weeghman.

Players who secure these prizes are strongly advised not to sign any contracts for their future services until they have given such opportunity to the manager of the team with which they travel. For instance, the boys going with the White Sox should give Manager Rowland first chance to make an offer for their services, for he will best know their capabilities after seeing them in practice on the trip. Similarly, the boys going with the Cubs should confer with Manager Tinker before signing with any flatterer who perhaps merely wishes their contracts for trading purposes.

RILEY, 71, LOSES BOAT RACE TO RICE BY HALF A LENGTH.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 29.—James H. Riley, 71 years old, a former professional sculling champion, was defeated in a three mile race on Lake Lonely this afternoon by Jim Rice, coach of the Columbia crews, by half a length. Riley rowed a remarkable race, but Rice, who is 46, proved the stronger. He conceded a handicap of one minute to his old opponent. Rice's actual time was 22:22⅕.

CUBS ROUT ALEX IN OPENER, 5 TO 2; LOSE SECOND, 4-1

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 29.—[Special.]—As is usual in such cases, Chicago and Philadelphia divided a double header today fifty-fifty, the Cubs copping the curtain raiser in spite of the fact that they faced Alexander the Great, and the Phillies winning the afterpiece with Demaree on the mound. The scores were 5 to 2 and 4 to 1, respectively.

Claude Hendrix wore the laurels in the first game when opposed to Alexander. He held the Phillies to four safe hits, one of which was a home run smash into the bleachers behind left center, but it did no damage, as the Cubs already had sewed up the game with a luscious cluster of four runs, all hard earned, in their half of the third.

Alex the Great Taken Out.

Finding their efforts to locate Hendrix unavailing, Manager Moran of the Phils yanked Alex the Great for a punchless pinch hitter in the lucky seventh, and let a lesser light complete the slabbing. Hendrix got better as the game progressed, as shown by the fact only three runners saw first base after the third inning and only one man reached there after the fifth.

Demaree had the Cubs so completely at his mercy in the second combat that they counted only once against him, and it required a high loft over the right field fence to make that run. The Phils booted some chances behind the cartoonist-pitcher, but gave him sensational support in other places when he needed it more.

Bancroft jumped in the air and nailed a liner from Schulte which would have scored at least one run in the seventh round of that scrap, and when the Cubs went into their ninth three runs behind they started something that would have made a large noise if Luderus had not pinched two successive liners from Zim and Schulte, making a double play out of one of them.

Four Hurlers for Cubs.

Tinker used four pitchers trying to get results in the second combat, but the first two failed him. Lavender lasted less than two rounds. Seaton pulled the Cubs out of a deep hole in which Lavender left them in the second round, but was taken out in the fifth after a home run and a three bagger had been slammed off him with nobody out.

The Phillies got the jump in the first game with the help of Hendrix, who made a bad mess of a bunt that followed Good's single and let Wilbur reach third, from where he came in on a long fly.

The Cubs mauled Alexander for four runs and the game in the third. Flack and Mann singled with one out and Flack went to third, from where he counted on Zim's long loft to Good. A pass to Schulte and singles by Wortman and Saier manufactured three more counters.

Paskert Poles Homer.

The Tinx added a fifth in the fifth spasm on Flack's safe bunt, which pulled a wild throw from Killifer, a sacrifice by Mann, and a single by Schulte. Paskert's home run in the third was the last chance the Phils had to count off Hendrix.

The second game was Philadelphia's most of the way. Two singles and an infield play scored one run for the Morans in the first. Schulte's home run tied that in the escond, and they went along that way until the fifth, when Good opened on Seaton with a home run and Whitted followed with a triple. Prendergast rushed to the rescue and Luderus singled, scoring Whitted. A single, a wild pitch and two outs let in the final tally in the fifth.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Chicago's White Sox took a leap toward first place yesterday afternoon by winning both games of a double header from Connie Mack's alleged athletes from Philadelphia, while the New York Yankees dropped a double header in St. Louis and the Boston Red Sox were licked twice in Detroit. By gaining two full games on the leading teams the Sox now are only a game and a half behind New York and one game behind Boston, and have six more fights with the Athletics. The scores yesterday were 6 to 1 and 6 to 4.

If it hadn't been for a near blow up by the Sox in the ninth inning of the second game yesterday the fans wouldn't have experienced a thrill all afternoon. Comiskey's boys galloped home with the first game without once getting into distress, and when the ninth round arrived in the second they were leading by a count of 6 to 1, with no fears whatever.

Rout Two Sox Pitchers.

But at this point Joe Benz began to waver. There was a base on balls, and then a couple of singles with only one out, and Joe was hustled out of the game in a jiffy, Reb Russell being called to stop such antics by the Macks. But Reb wasn't the least bit like himself. Instead of being steady and true, as is his custom, he started walking a lot of people to first base. He got one man out, but walked three others and was yanked. Eddie Cicotte was summoned to pitch to Jimmy Walsh with the bases filled, two out, and two runs needed to tie the combat. Cicotte pitched four balls and Walsh fanned and the game was saved.

That Connie Mack has entered into a conspiracy to dishearten the White Sox in the battle for the flag was evident from his tactics. He pitched his two star hurlers in the first double header of the series, sending Elmer Myers to the slab for the first game and Joe Bush for the second.

Faber Hurls Stylish Game.

Red Faber, who has been on the sick list since the first part of June, was sent to the slab to oppose Myers in the opening game and the Cascade boy hurled as steadily and stylishly as ever. He allowed six blows, never was in danger, didn't walk any one, and looked strong at the finish, although laboring under a tropical sun. Benz went along just as easily against Bush in the second fight until the ninth inning, when it looked as if the customary ninth inning blowup was sure to take place, and Russell didn't help matters any with his work.

Connie Mack's team didn't look as funny as the last time the Sox played it because Stuffy McInnis has had his nose mended and is back in the game. With Lajoie working along side of him and Strunk and Walsh in the outfield there were times when it looked as if a regular major league team was present.

Muff Gives Hose Good Start.

The Sox wasted no time in getting away in the first game. They were handed a couple of runs because Lawry, one of Mack's college boys playing at second base, had stage fright while waiting for a high pop fly to come down. The result was he muffed it when it did come and two runs went over the plate. The bases were filled at the time with two out. In the next inning the Sox batted in two, being helped a bit by a fumble on the part of Witt, another youngster.

In the third inning Chicago had to take another run because there were two wild heaves in succession with a runner on second base. In the sixth a single was converted into another count with the help of an error and a wild pitch. Against Faber the Macks never threatened, though they did get a run in the sixth when Walsh doubled and Strunk tripled after two were out. Both of those fellows played in the old Mack school, when such things were common.

Beat Real Twirler in Bush.

The Sox rather took the hope and spirit out of Joe Bush in the first inning of the second game. Joe is a regular pitcher and has won this season with one run to his credit, regardless of the funny fellows behind him. A single by John Collins and a triple by Joe Jackson and another single by Ness sent two Chicago runners home in the first, and from then on until the ninth it was no contest.

Jackson's single and Felsch's triple got one in the third and three hits, some sacrifices and stolen bases got three more in the eighth. It was well for the Sox they did business in the eighth, too, for they needed those runs at the finish.

JOE WOOD WANTS RELEASE.

Cleveland, O., July 29.—Smoky Joe Wood of the Boston Red Sox wants to buy his release for $10,000, President Jim Lannin of the Boston club stated today. When they could not come to terms Wood made the offer, Lannin said, but it was refused. Lannin wants Wood to sign up and deliver the goods, but the two year contract asked by the hurler is holding up any agreement.

GIANTS WIN TWO FROM PIRATES; FIRST IN 11TH

Errors Beat Mamaux, 4 to 3, Then Anderson Scores 5 to 0 Shutout.

New York, July 29.—New York won a double header from Pittsburgh before the largest crowd of the season, 4 to 3 and 5 to 0. The first game went eleven innings and it was the third extra inning game the Giants have won on successive days.

It was a tight struggle between Mamaux and Perritt, the Pittsburgh star losing when his support cracked in the eleventh. Lobert was safe in this inning on Farmer's fumble, took third on Rariden's single, and scored when Gibson muffed Hinchman's throw to the plate after Hunter had sent a short fly to the outfielder.

In the second game New York hit Kantlehner hard, while Anderson was effective. This is the first time this season the Giants have won more than two consecutive games at home. Scores:

ROBINS SHARE WITH REDS.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 29.—Twenty thousand Brooklyn fans who gathered to welcome Christy Mathewson and his Cincinnati Reds to Ebbetts field, saw the Reds and Robins break even. Cincinnati won the first game, 6 to 1, and lost the second, 3 to 2. Schneider, in the opener, held the league leaders to three hits. Marquard was routed in five innings. In the second game Pfeffer held the Reds to four scattered hits in six innings, then winged Groh, starting a two-run rally. The Robins bunched hits in the fifth and sixth for their runs. Griffith and Chase each got a triple and double in the opener, while Daubert led in the second with three hits. Scores:

BRAVES DOWN CARDS TWICE.

Boston, Mass., July 29.—Boston took both games from St. Louis today, 4 to 3 and 8 to 5. Costly errors by Hornsby and Betzel, coupled with timely doubles by Magee and Konetchy, gave the first game to the Braves. Boston hit Meadows hard in the four innings he was on the mound in the second game, getting nine hits, including five doubles. Wilhoit hit for three doubles in four times up, in this game. In the opener Hornsby batted for 1.000, getting three singles and a double in four times up. Scores:

NINE DAY COWBOY SHOW AT OLD WEST SIDE PARK.

The annual nine day skan-kive roundup will be held at the old Cub park on the west side, Saturday, Aug. 19. The event might be termed a cowboy carnival. It is an occasion devoted to the strenuous sports of the cattle country—broncho busting, wild horse racing, steer roping, relay riding, steer bulldogging, Indian dancing and galloping parades. Among the honorary judges will be Col. William F. Cody of Wyoming, known the world over as Buffalo Bill, and Mayor William Hale Thompson.

Time, 24, 49 1-5, 1:14. Track fast.

WINNER—B. f., by Dick Welles—Lady Armagh [trained by F. Hulse; bred by C. W. Reidinger].

Went to post at 3:30. At post three minutes. Start good and slow. Won driving; second and third the same. BIDDY was away forwardly, showed much speed and, taking the lead on the last turn, outstayed BORAX in the final drive. BORAX closed a big gap and was going well at the finish. LIBERATOR tired slightly after making a good effort on the stretch turn. KORFHAGE tired when turning into the stretch. HA' PENNY closed a big gap. The winner, entered for $1,000, was bid up to $1,605 and bought in.

WINNER—B. c., by Jim Gaffney—Flora Willoughby [trained by J. S. Ward; bred by W. F. Schulte].

Went to post at 4:10. At post two minutes. Start good and slow. Won easily; second and third driving. DODGE moved into the lead at once and made the pace under restraint to come away in the stretch and win easing up. FRANKLIN was reserved far back for the first three-quarters, then moved up fast in the last quarter and outstayed LEO SKOLNY for second place. LEO SKOLNY raced in closest pursuit most of the way, but tired near the end.

Scratched—Olga Star, 105; Grover Hughes, 108; Guide Post, 92; Faux-Col, 110; Herbert Temple, 90.

FIFTH RACE.

WINNER—B. f., by Peep o'Day—Clare Russell [trained by J. C. Gallaher; bred by J. S. Barbee].

Went to post at 4:44. At post four minutes. Start good and slow. Won driving; second and third the same. VOGUE was hard ridden and, racing into the lead at once and setting a fast and steady pace, held the others safe, but was doing her best at the end. FAUX-COL moved up resolutely from a slow beginning and was going fastest at the finish. PESKY ran well up throughout and held on gamely in the closing drive. SIR EDGAR raced gamely but began losing ground in the last eighth. KINNEY had no mishaps. CASEY JONES raced wide. HAWTHORN tired badly.

SIXTH RACE.

1 1-16 miles. Purse $750. 3 year olds and upward. Selling. Net value to winner $650; second, $70; third, $30.

WINNER—Ch. g., by Meddler—Rotha II. [trained by R. D. Williams; bred by Clarence H. Mackay].

Went to post at 5:12. At post two minutes. Start good and slow for all but BEAUTY SHOP. Won easily; second and third driving. GRASMERE was under restraint for the entire race and won as his rider pleased. STAR OF LOVE, away slowly, moved up fast after going a half mile and finished with a rush. RAPIDS showed much good speed, but tired in the last quarter after racing into the lead on the backstretch. BEAUTY SHOP was practically left at the post. CHARLES FRANCIS retired after racing well for three-quarters and setting the early pace. The winner was entered for $600; no bid.

Scratched—Bonanza, 112.

Overweights—Rapids, 1 pound; Beauty Shop, 5.

DAVENPORT WINS DOUBLE HEADER FROM YANKEES

St. Louis Hurler Goes Through Both Games, 3 to 1 and 3 to 2.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—Davenport allowed New York only nine hits in two games, and St. Louis won both, 3 to 1 and 3 to 2. The second was St. Louis' eighth straight victory.

In the first, with New York leading, 1 to 0, Austin opened the eighth by getting a base on balls. Three hits and a sacrifice fly then gave the locals three runs.

New York took the lead in the third inning of the second game with one run. Davenport drove in two runs in the fifth with a double and St. Louis scored another in the eighth. Miller knocked a home run over the left fence in the ninth. Scores:

INDIANS, 10; WASHINGTON, 0.

Cleveland, O., July 29.—Cleveland opened its series with Washington by winning, 10 to 0. Bagby kept the Senators' eight hits well scattered and received perfect support, while Gallia was ineffective and Washington's errors costly. The day was designated as "Turner day" in honor of Cleveland's veteran infielder who began his big league career here in 90. He was given many presents. Score:

TIGERS BEAT BOSTON TWICE.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—Boston suffered a setback in the pennant fight when Detroit took both games of a double-header, 10 to 8 and 7 to 3. The first game was a free hitting contest in which Ruth, Wyckoff and Coveleskie all were knocked off the seat. Leonard suffered the same fate in the second game. Both teams fielded well. Vean Gregg, recalled from Buffalo, joined the Red Sox and pitched part of both games. Score:

CAMPI GIVEN DECISION IN BOUT WITH COULON.

San Francisco, Cal., July 29.—Eddie Campi of San Francisco was given the decision last night in a four round bout with Johnny Coulon of Chicago, former bantamweight champion. When the fighters weighed in it was found that Campi weighed 120 pounds—two pounds overweight. Coulon, who weighed 110, insisted that on account of his opponent's excess weight, the fight be declared a draw, whoever won. Campi had so much the better of it, however, that the referee disregarded the agreement and gave the local boy the decision.

INTERURBAN SHOOT TODAY.

The Chicago Interurban League of Gun clubs will hold its monthly tourney today at the Chicago Gun club traps, One Hundred and Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue. Each representative of the clubs will shoot at 100 targets from the 16 yard rise.

Hawthorne Notes

A. Claver and F. Williams each rode two winners.

There will be a general cleaning out of horsemen with their horses from the Hawthorne track today.

Just Red was destroyed shortly after the accident in the first race. He was an aged gelding by Cunard-Doris, owned by F. J. Butler.

It is understood many owners were assured that there would be a September meeting at Hawthorne. Many doubt the wisdom of this move, and some of the fairly conservative favor it.

Four favorites out of six won. Thanksgiving, the choice in the opening race, got away poorly and managed to finish third. Korfhage was made favorite in the third race by some mysterious heavy play, but ran an indifferent race.

Frank Hutchinson, who gained fame as the author of "The Barkeep" series in a local paper fifteen years ago, got in yesterday from Tia Juana. He thinks that track has a great future; says the southern California peninsula scorns all fealty to Corranza or any other Mexican government but its own, is free from bandits, and friendly to Americans.

F. Murphy led the winning riders at the meeting, despite the fact he was limited to the stable of Weber & Ward during the closing days. He had eleven winning mounts; W. Hoag rode eight; Schermerhorn [set down early in the week], seven; H. Stearns and Claver, six each; McCabe, Andress, and Byrne, five each; C. Hunt and Williams, four each; Taylor, Guy, and Wolstenholm, three each; Hack and T. Hunt, two each; Van Dusen, Gray, Carter, and Gaugel one each.

BYFORD BEATS WALTER HAYES FOR NET TITLE

Retains State Honors by Besting Biggest Rival, 7-9, 6-2, 6-0, 6-3.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Heath T. Byford and Walter T. Hayes fought out a feud for the state tennis championship on the turf courts of the Wanderers' club yesterday.

Byford retained the title of Illinois champion, which he first won last year, after four sets, 7—9, 6—2, 6—0, 6—3.

Hayes began by winning the first set, but the frame went sixteen games before he could turn the feat. The players set a cautious pace from the first, and the consistent play which is the main reliance of both resulted in a great duel for position.

Victor Forges to Front.

Byford did not seem to mind the loss of the first set, keeping up his usual play throughout the second frame. He conserved his energy as much as possible and worked a deadly drive along the alley lines to back court, which piled up placement aces in his favor. Byford's service frequently had Hayes in distress, and the Great Plains champion slammed the veteran's weak returns for sure points.

The margin in Byford's favor was even greater in the third set, which he won by a love score. The veteran's ebbing vitality affected his strokes and resulted in nets and out. Byford had a harder time in the last set. Hayes rallied for three games, but Byford won the set, 6—3, and the match without ever being in much danger.

The women's state title went to Miss C. B. Neely, who won without much difficulty from Mrs. W. A. Ellis, former California player, 6—3, 6—2. Miss Neely's accuracy and the power of her strokes kept her opponent continually on the defensive. Miss Mary K. Voorhees and Mrs. Malcolm MacNeill Jr. annexed the title in women's doubles by beating Mrs. Ellis and Miss Frances Houston, former University of Chicago champion, 6—1, 6—1. The winners secured many points on Miss Voorhees' work at the net.

Doubles Final Today.

Al Green Jr. and M. G. Ketchum downed William M. Blair and A. H. McCormick in the semi-finals of men's doubles, 6—4, 5—7, 6—2, and 6—2, and today will play Hayes and Burdick for the title. This match will be at 3 o'clock. Art Hubbell of the Wanderers club and W. S. Miller of the South Parks tennis club team will meet for the consolation title today.

Notes

Another double header against the Macks today.

Owner Comiskey served a buffet luncheon in the Bards' room between games. As usual Admiral Agnew poured.

Connie Mack has a lot of names on his list of pitchers besides those of Bush and Myers, but the Sox are glad they have disposed of Bush and Myers.

In seven innings the Macks made only one hit off Benz, but he showed signs of weakening in the eighth. In that round a double play pulled him out of a hole.

Joe Jackson padded up his batting average considerably yesterday with three hits in one game and two in the other, getting five blows in eight times at bat.

In Picinich and Haley, Mack introduced two new catchers to Chicago yesterday. He didn't notify the press how the former pronounces his name.

The veteran Harry Davis, who was a star in the late '90s, went in as pinch hitter for Bush in the ninth inning fuss and drew a base on balls which forced in a run.

Hap Felsch poled the ball to the corner of right field in the third round of the second game and tried to make a home run of it, but perfect relaying by the old timers, Walsh and McInnis, nailed Hap at the plate.

Notes

Philadelphia, Pa., July 29.—[Special.]—Nothing to do till Monday.

The Cubs have four more games to play here, including another double header on Tuesday.

Manager Tinker received word that Mollwitz left Chicago today and would report here tomorrow, which is an off day. Catcher Elliot is expected on Tuesday.

Saier made a swell play in the fifth of the second game by backing up third on Whitted's triple. Mann's throw shot past Zeider and Saier was the only Cub who thought to protect third base.

An X-ray examination of Cy Williams' injured wrist disclosed a fracture, which will keep the center fielder out of the game for a fortnight at least, and he probably will be sent to Chicago to recuperate. The injury is to his throwing arm.

The attendance, estimated conservatively at 20,000, was the largest of the season here, as it was a half holiday and perfectly comfortable weather besides. The stands were oversold beyond the danger point and no one was allowed on the field.

Good has been living up to his name since replacing Cravath in right field. Today he made only one hit in each game, but hit the ball hard four times in the first game, then drew two passes, made a home run, and hit a line drive in the second. He was not good enough for the north side team.

CHURCH-DAVIS TEAM ANNEXES DOUBLES TITLE

Pell and Williams Beaten in the Deciding Match for Eastern Honors.

Boston, Mass., July 29.—G. M. Church of Tenafly, N. J., and William E. Davis of San Francisco won the eastern doubles lawn tennis championship at the Longwood Cricket club today by defeating T. R. Pell of New York and R. Norris Williams II. of Philadelphia in the final match. The score was 4—6, 6—2, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

Church, former Princeton and intercollegiate champion in singles, was the star of the match. His net play, ground strokes, and overhead smashes were brilliant. Davis, although lapsing occasionally, suported his partner well.

Williams Plays Great Game.

For the losing pair Williams was the mainstay. When an emergency came he generally rose to it with one of the brilliant flashes of play that made his work so sensational in the Davis cup competition and in his winning of the national singles title. Pell had one of his off days and the hard attack of Church and Davis, with the net defense of Church, decided the contest.

In the singles play for the Longwood cup Watson M. Washburn of New York will meet the national champion, W. M. Johnston of San Francisco, in the upper half of the semi-finals on Monday, while in the lower half J. J. Armstrong of Philadelphia, who has been one of the sensations of the tournament, will meet the Japanese champion, I. Kumagae of Tokio.

Jap Star Beats Garland.

Kumagae went into the semi-finals by defeating C S Garland of Pittsburgh, 6—2, 6—1, 1—6, 6—1. The representative of the far east was steady, and his great court covering and base line play were equal to the best efforts the young Pittsburgh player put forth.

Armstrong sustained the reputation he made in this tournament by easily disposing of I. C. Wright of Boston, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3. Washburn's steadiness was too much for G. C. Caner of Philadelphia, the New Yorker winning in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1, 7—5.

Union Giants, 6; Omaha, 3.

Omaha, Neb., July 29.—Chicago Union Giants defeated Brandeis' Store team, formerly the Storz Triumphs, today. This makes the second game Brandeis lost this season. Score:

Giants ....0 0 3 0 0 3 1 1 [illegible]

FITCH WINS CUP IN SKOKIE MEET; DEFEATS BRAND

Indian Hill Player Takes Elm Trophy by Taking Final Match, 3 Up.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

W. B. Fitch of Indidan Hill won the main honors of the age limit tournament of the Skokie Country club, defeating Armand Brand of Lake Geneva, 3 up in the final for the Elm cup. All of the match rounds were by card comparison, the veterans playing in the same foursomes in which they competed the previous day.

Second flight honors went to Louis J. Hopkins, the Indian Hill southpaw, once a Skokie star. He defeated Harry E. Spear of La Granage, 5 and 4.

Cup to Shollenberger.

Harry R. Shollenberger, who twice has been runner-up in the yearly Skokie event, after falling into a minor flight because of a poor opening round, got into the running for the Skokie cup by notching a 76 on Friday afternoon. This proved the best round of the tournament and as the Beverly player yesterday batted out rounds of 79 and 79 he won the cup given for the best gross score at 72 holes. His total was 321. Armand Brand finished second in this event.

Although he scored a 79, Shollenberger was defeated by Roger Sherman, in the semi-finals for the Oak cup, the Skokie player, who had a card of 80, winning 1 up.

Judge Foell Also Victor.

The feature hole trophy was presented to Judge C. M. Foell, who made the seventh hole in three strokes on each of the four rounds. W. V. Schnur of Skokie was awarded the Cherry trophy, offered for the best net score of the morning round yesterday, with a card of 93-25-68. Summary:

Pairings for first round—Cockrell and Downer, Jackson and Herrick, Kinkel and Smart, Field and Williams, Pike and McClurkin, Johannes and Butcher, Holmes and Chelius, English and McFall.

Edgebrook.

A number of balls were wagered in the match between J. H. Taylor and W. H. Watson in the second round for the championship at Edgebrook, and the former, who has been rapidly coming to the front, won, 5 and 4. G. E. Williams defeated C. A. Butler by a good putt on the home green, his margin being 1 up. L. L. McLain defeated J. Stehman, 3 and 2, and H. C. Scharenberg defeated C. A. Lahey, 5 and 3. In the consolation event E. L. Schmidt, knowing the deference due to a man of pedigree, defaulted to President W. S. McAndrews. Other results were: M. H. McGrath defeated L. C. James, 3 and 2; G. W. Kirschner defeated R. Thomas, 5 and 4, and C. F. Ross won from R. Clark by default.

Beverly.

Beverly members competed in a varied program. W. J. Jackson won low net for the eighteen holes with 86—23—63, while Dr. B. A. Duffy won low gross for the first nine holes with 36. C. B. Sexton tied with E. B. Shogren for low net on the second nine, each having 31. J. A. Mudd Jr. won the prize for aggregate score on the second, third, eleventh, and eighteenth holes with 14. The first round for the club championship resulted as follows: B. A. Duffy defeated Charles Baker, 3 and 2; M. D. Mahoney defeated C. G. Littell, 5 and 4; H. R. Shollenberger defeated L. Nicholson, 2 and 1; J. R. McKee defeated M. A. Donohue, 2 up; J. A. Mudd Jr. defeated C. R. Terry, 2 and 1; P. J. Lawlor defeated H. F. Miller, 5 and 4; S. K. Milligan defeated J. T. Henry, 3 and 2; J. A. Middleton defeated C. H. Kingsbury, 4 and 3.

Chicago.

With a card of 79—1—78, Addison Stillwell won the Saturday cup at the Chicago Golf club. Mason Phelps with 78—scratch—78 took second prize.

Hinsdale.

A. G. Dugan and G. T. May tied with net scores of 86 in the blind bogey handicap at Hinsdale and in the toss Dugan guessed correctly.

Midlothian.

W. J. Black proved the best veteran golfer at Midlothian when he annexed the Old Boys' cup with his card of 83—13—70. E. A. Oliver was second, 94—23—71. Honors in the ball sweepstakes were annexed by Oliver. In the semi-finals for the President's cup F. Mattheson defeated Donald Edwards by 4 and 3. The latter had to give his opponent twenty-six strokes. C. D. Jenks won from J. D. Nadherny, 2 up.

Glen View.

After being tied with R. W. Keyes for honors in the class handicap, H. R. Hixson, with 86—13—73, won the toss in class A. S. F. Miller, who had 93—19—74, was successful in class B, and R. H. Folwell, who had 94—21—73, was successful in class C.

Maywood.

In the handicap at Maywood, F. G. Bear, with 81—8—73, won, while G. H. Bristol took second with 84—11—73. The semi finals for the Directors' cup was also decided and resulted as follows: First flight—F. P. Burnett defeated K. J. Pederson, 3 and 2; C. V. Williams defeated E. G. Allen, 2 and 1. Second flight—J. H. Perry defeated E. W. Doelling, 4 and 3; C. O. Jones defeated J. C. Hanley, 3 and 2. Third flight—F. F. Barnsley defeated W. A. Randall, 3 and 1; F. T. Hanson defeated C. T. Ross, 2 and 1.

Elmhurst.

In the second round for the Members' cup at Elmhurst, the results were: P. Albert defeated C. Bohassack, 2 up; G. F. Thompson defeated B. Brand, 1 up; J. Brickel defeated B. Porter, 2 up; A. Hankey defeated F. W. M. Hammerschmidt, 4 up; A. F. Raeder defeated F. L. Morrell, 1 up; G. Shallacombe defeated W. B. Pearn, 2 up; F. C. Hense defeated J. Kent, 2 up; C. Williston defeated C. R. Newhouse, 5 and 4.

Edgewater.

Edgewater golfers reached the season's half way mark yesterday with the conclusion of all matches in the midsummer tournament. E. F. Seney won the honors in class A, defeating H. H. Dietrich, 4 and 3; W. F. Klein registered a 1 up victory over A. E. De Riemer in class B, and W. G. Young took the measure of E. W. Hughes, 4 and 3, in class C. George W. Beaven won the handicap versus par in class A with a perfect card. W. J. Cummings finished 3 down in class B for premier honors.

AMATEURS LEAD IN AUTO CONTEST

Entrants in the fifth annual reliability contest under the auspices of the Chicago Motor club finished their first day's tryout last night at Bass Lake, Ind. There are eighteen professionals and sixteen amateurs. The amateurs lead, 156 to 45.

C. A. Coey was penalized 150 points for work on a broken radiator, and 6 points were ruled against E. Green for engine trouble. Both are professionals.

Ten of the amateurs finished with perfect scores. Forty-five points were ruled against the others for minor repairs. Those penalized were: W. D. Kier, 1; E. A. Fearn, 8; August Voiges, 33, and J. P. Denoanandic, 3.

The motorists will leave Bass Lake this afternoon at 2 o'clock and will finish at the Chicago Motor club, where the winners will be announced. A large trophy, contributed by A. J. Banta, general manager of the Locomobile company, will be presented to the winner.

Beloit, 7; Kenosha Jefferys, 0.

MARMON BREAKS OVERLAND MARK

Indianapolis, Ind., July 29.—[Special.]—Word was received here this afternoon that S. B. Stevens, chairman of the motor reserve division of the American Defense society, driving a Marmon 34 under the auspices of that society, broke the coast to coast automobile record when he arrived in San Francisco at 5 o'clock this afternoon, just five days, eighteen hours, and thirty minutes from the time the car left Columbus circle in New York City.

This lowers the previous record by forty-one hours and twenty-two minutes. The run was made by the society to establish the possible speed and reliability of motor transportation across the continent. Stevens is a millionaire auto enthusiast and personally drove about half of the distance.

The Automobile Club of America authenticated the trip.

GAELIC SPORTS MEET AUG. 27

The Irish Counties Social Union of America will hold an old time Irish sports meeting on the same order as those held in Ireland for centuries, at Gardner's park, One Hundred and Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, on Aug. 27. Throwing the "Irish Kaubor" and other events are billed.

GLEN OAK CLUB PAYS HONORS TO WOMAN GOLFER

Many Members Turn Out to Dinner Given to Mrs. Jones, City Champion.

Glen Oak members turned out in large numbers to the complimentary dinner given to Mrs. Melvin Jones last night in honor of winning the Chicago women's championship this week at Glen View.

President F. W. Pringle, on behalf of the club, presented Mrs. Jones with a diamond stickpin, congratulating her on being the first player to bring a championship to the club. Officials of the Women's Western Golf association and Miss Corella Lukens of Edgewater, the runner up, were the guests of the club.

In the final for the veteran's cup, C. L. West defeated G. Patch, 1 up. Results of the second round for the president's cup were as follows: H. B. Webb defeated S. McKinnie, 2 up; G. H. Hill defeated G. S. Wood, 7 and 6; A. E. Swanson defeated Frank Lavin, 2 and 1; V. A. Biggs defeated M. Musselman, 2 up.

Westward Ho.

W. C. Albro and E. M. Laurentzen tied for low net square in the qualifying round for the Illinois Club cup at Westward Ho, getting scores of 66. Ten players went under the 70 mark. Qualifying scores: W. C. Albro, 80—14—66; E. M. Laurentzen, 94—28—66; F. F. Ryan, 97—30—67; J. L. Davidson, 94—27—67; G. S. Masters, 92—25—67; R. M. Cutting, 84—16—68; M. A. Evans, 84—16—68; W. J. Boyd, 94—26—68; J. M. Purcell, 90—21—69; H. G. Struble, 95—26—69; F. Squibbs, 101—31—70; W. M. Gibbs, 86—16—70; A. B. Stratton, 87—16—71; P. Blatchford, 90—19—71; B. Shavino, 94—23—71.

Winners in the class events were: Class A—W. C. Albro, 80; Class B—R. M. Cutting, 84; tied with M. A. Evans, 84; Class C—G. F. Masters, 92; Class D—F. J. Squibbs, 92.

Onwentsia.

A. A. Sprague II. was tied for first honors in the eighteen hole handicap event with S. T. Chase, each having net totals of 73 at Onwentsia. E. S. Moore with 81—6—75 was third, while Wayne Taylor, who had 81—5—76, was fourth.

Exmoor.

Class A, C. I. Mansur, 82—9—73; class B, J. E. Gorman, 90—16—74; class C, E. E. Andrews, 95—17—78; class D, W. T. Kester, 102—25—77.

Park Ridge.

Willard Becker won the Saturday cup presented by S. H. Burroughs at Park Ridge with a net score of 72. In the semi-finals for the President's trophy L. P. Brady defeated G. M. Rowley, 13 and 11, at thirty-six holes. The other match between T. P. Hodge and Ralph Espey was postponed until today.

West secured ten tricks.

In order to put south in the unpleasant position in which that player found himself at trick seven, it was necessary for west to rid dummy of every heart. This is the play which the average player needs to learn. West could not lead at trick seven without losing a trick, and this meant game for west instead of a useless twenty-four points.

KOCKLER TAKES FIVE MILE OPEN; KELL SETS MARK

Ernest Kockler of the Mystic Athletic club won the five mile open race, the feature of the card at Riverview velodrome last night. Kockler covered the distance in 11:50 3-5. In a five mile motor paced exhibition against time Paul Kell broke the track record by a flat second when he made the route in 7:59.

Another feature was the Australian pursuit race, in which the three man team of Mike Damlos, Carl Selback and Charley Struckel copped first prize. They went two and one-half miles in 6:25. Summaries:

Mile novice—Won by Fred Van Reit, Sleipner A. C.; A. Larson, unattached, second; Ed Arens, Belgian American Cycling club, third. Time, 2:30.

2-3 mile open, classes B and C—Won by Fred Vinch, Belgian American C. C.; Oscar Saese, Logan Cycle club, second; E. Pagnarelli, Italian American A. C., third. Time, 1:43 2-5.

½ mile handicap, class A—Won by R. Vanderpelt, Belgian American C. C.; William Kell, German American A. C., second; E. Davini, Italian American A. C., third. Time, 1:00.

Australian pursuit race, three men teams—Won by Damlos, Selback, and Struckel; Henderson, Van Reit, and Stockholm, second; Faelens, Saese, and Matson, third. Distance, 2½ miles. Time, 6:25.

5 mile open—Won by E. Kockler, Mystic A. C.; E. Davini, Italian American A. C., second; Jules Arens, Logan Cycle club, third; William Kell, German American A. C., fourth. Time, 11:50 3-5.

The High-Gear Performer on America's Hardest Hills

Denver—Lookout Mountain, on high all the way, reaching 7,800 feet elevation.

IF YOU are looking for high-gear hill-climbing to prove power and performance—here are specific Hupmobile instances.

Dealers report them from demonstrations.

If they sound extraordinary, permit us to remind you that to Hupmobile owners they will merely confirm their own every-day experiences.

Hills that are Play for the Hupmobile

Boston motorists regard the Beacon street side of Corey Hill as their worst climb. Few cars, even with a running start, hold high gear to the top.

C. E. Jeffery, Jr., says his favorite demonstration is to come down the hill, turn at the bottom, and at this slow speed start back on high. The car is usually traveling 27 miles an hour when it tops the rise.

Hills encircle Cincinnati, and Clifton Avenue is one of the longest.

In demonstrating, Fred T. Larson drives the Hupmobile half way up at 30 miles; cuts the speed to 15 miles; and picks up again to 30 miles, finishing at that gait—without shifting gears.

Ten leading cars sold in Kansas City do not take Hospital Hill on high. The Hupmobile does; and W. C. Howard, the dealer there, says a hurricane must be blowing against the car any time it fails to clear the top at 38 miles an hour.

Omaha reports a brick paved test hill, 20 per cent rise, a block long. The Hupmobile, carrying five passengers and registering seven miles an hour at the bottom, skims it on high gear.

Thousands of tourists know how the Lookout Mountain trip in Colorado tests the high-gear power and the cooling efficiency of motor cars.

Things You Should Know About the Hupmobile

Four-cylinder motor — extremely simple, reliable and compact.

Vibration reduced to a minimum.

Horizontal type automatic carburetor — no adjustments.

Multiple-disc, 17-plate clutch, in unit with motor and transmission.

Spiral bevel, full-floating rear axle.

Oversize brakes — one square inch braking surface to each 8 pounds of car weight.

Tires 10 per cent oversize for car weight.

Underslung rear springs, very long and flexible.

Windshield that keeps out the rain.

Improved headlight dimmers; special type tail light.

Wheelbase of 119 and 134 inches.

The Mark of Superior Motor Car Service

High Gear All the Way on Lookout Mountain

The Denver dealer regularly makes this trip—to Idaho Springs and return—without shifting gears or taking on water. The climb is 2300 feet; the greatest elevation 7800 feet.

Think what this means, when each 1,000-foot rise robs an automobile motor of about 3½ per cent of its efficiency.

Is there any reason why Hupmobile owners should envy the performance of other types?

11,000 Owners Rate Efficiency at 99%

In other directions—pick-up, flexibility, smoothness and steadiness of the motor action—Hupmobile performance is equally good.

Eleven thousand owners give the car an efficiency rating of 99 per cent.

You begin to see now why 50 8/10 per cent of Hupmobile owners will have no other car. Why 24 2/10 of our owners come from the ranks of those who have owned costlier cars and cars with more cylinders.

They prefer the Hupmobile, because it does all they expect of a car; and because the Hupmobile coupon service system has shown them the value, in dollars and cents, of expert, definite service.

This system assures them—without a penny of cost—skilled care for their cars each month and eight monthly inspections of every unit of their cars. They pay with coupons supplied free of cost.

WALLEN FIRST IN RIVER SWIM; GIRL FINISHES

St. Louis Boys Second and Third—Rebecca Wells Star in Race.

ORDER OF FINISH

Entrant and Club.	Time.
W. L. Wallen, Hamilton club	35:17
Herman Laubisi, Missouri A. C.	36:00
Larry Sparks, Missouri A. C.	36:51
Michael McDermott, Illinois A. C.	37:12

W. E. McNicol, Hamilton club	41:55

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

By use of a powerful crawl stroke all through the race, W. L. (Buddie) Wallen, the 18 year old swimmer of the Hamilton club, yesterday won the eighth annual river swim of the Illinois A. C. The young swimmer covered the distance from the Sportsmen's clubhouse at the foot of Randolph street to the Wells street bridge, approximately two and one-half miles, in 35:17, considered fast time.

Herman Laubis of the Missouri A. C. of St. Louis was a close second, and Larry Sparks of the same club was third. Michael McDermott of the Illinois A. C., a strong favorite for premier honors, was fourth. Thirty-seven started and thirty-two finished. There were no accidents. Those who quit did so when they realized they did not have a chance to get in the prize list.

Girl Goes Entire Distance.

Although Wallen paddled the distance in remarkable style, the performance of Miss Rebecca Wells, a 16 year old mermaid, who swam the entire distance and finished in advance of some of the male contestants, was the real feature. She wore a boy's bathing suit and negotiated the distance by use of the breast stroke.

Miss Wells was an added starter, and most of the persons who watched the start did not know there was a woman in the race. She slipped into the water off the end of the dock, and because of the splashing of the big field no one was aware that a girl was in the event. She was quickly outdistanced by the star swimmers, but managed to keep in front of a number of contestants. She was given a rousing reception when she reached the finish line.

Veteran of 60 Finishes.

Another remarkable performance was that of John Reitz, a veteran of a number of long distance races, who finished thirtieth. Reitz is 60 years old. It will be remembered that he nearly lost his life in the same swim four years ago, when he got caught in the piling at the Clark street bridge.

The manner in which Wallen won certainly showed he was the class of the field. He went into the lead at the crack of the pistol and showed the field a clean pair of heels to the line. He was not pushed at any stage of the race, and when he neared the finish mark he slowed down considerably, which allowed Laubis to cut down the lead.

On the first leg of the race, from the clubhouse to a buoy off the breakwater. Wallen was in the lead by ten yards. McDermott was in second position, about five yards in advance of Laubis, who was an equal distance ahead of his teammate, Sparks. At this point the field was pretty well scattered.

Victor Increases Lead.

On the second leg to a buoy west of the life saving station, Wallen increased his lead to fifteen yards. Laubis passed McDermott, with Sparks still fourth. When the swimmers rounded the buoy to enter the river Wallen took advantage of his opportunity and swam where the current was fastest. There was no change in the positions at Rush street bridge, but when Clark street had been reached Sparks had passed McDermott, and they then finished in that order.

When the swimmers lined up for the start the veranda was crowded with men and women, while the decks of the big excursion boats were lined with nearly listing capacity to watch the getaway. The field hit the water at the same time, and as they started on their journey the whistles of nearly every boat in the harbor were tooted to wish them good luck.

When the field entered the river the docks were lined with thousands of persons, and the bridges were black with spectators. It was estimated that between 10,000 and 15,000 persons saw the race. The river was dotted with canoes and rowboats and other craft, making the sight a spectacular one.

Clear Water in River.

Contrary to the opinions of those who are supposed to know, the water in the river was clearer than that in the lake. If the river had been dirty Chairman Blankley of the athletic committee of the I. A. C. said the race would be discontinued next year. The police and harbor patrol boats kept the course cleared, and in general it was the most successful marathon staged by the club.

Other starters were Harold R. Rosenwald, A. M. Johnson, D. Hill, John Reitz, R. E. Lloyd, E. J. Bamrick, G. A. Gaynor, C. H. Kennedy, M. G. Hoffman, John Dullaghan, W. Orlove, G. Schmitz, Joe Shier, Thor Knap, M. Michels, J. J. Gibbons, L. McCurdy, H. N. Ford, T. E. McGrath, unattached; Joe Greenspaun, H. Magida, H. Baum, Chicago Hebrew Institute, and P. M. Cady, North Shore club.

Colonels Land Catcher Wendell.

Louisville, Ky., July 29.—O. H. Wathen, president of the Louisville association club, announced that the deal for the purchase from the New York Giants of Catcher Lew Wendell had been completed. It was understood that refusals to waive on Wendell had halted the sale.

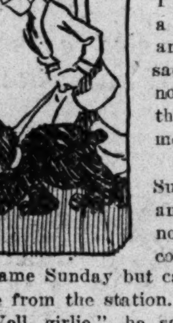
In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

JULY 25.

Lennie has gone east with the Cub nine and these next couple of weeks are going to be very lonely as I have made a resolution not to allow any other man to call or take me any where. It will be hard for me to do it as there is not hardly a day passes when I do not receive at least one invitation but Lennie is worth making any sacrifice for him and I am the kind of a girl who holds an engagement sacred and from now on Lennie is the only man for me.



The nine left Sunday evening and Lennie did not have time to come out after the game Sunday but called up on the phone from the station.

"Well girlie," he said. "We will soon be on our way."

"Will you miss me?" I said.

"Sure," he said. "Be good and don't take any bad money."

"Are you going to bring me something from the east?" I asked in jest.

"What do you want?" he asked thinking I was in earnest.

"I was just joking," I replied. "Do you think I am one of those kind of girls who would lower myself to ask a man to bring me presents? But of course if you see something pretty but not expensive I would not object to you having remembered me. Any gift from you is sacred to me."

Then we said our good-byes and there was a choke in both of our voices. I hope the dear foolish boy will not buy me something he can not afford but a girl can not help from being pleased when her sweetheart remembers her with some little token. I must write to Lennie now.

JULY 27.

Ray Harper called up this A. M. and asked me would I leave him come and see me some evening this week. He has been out of town most of the summer and this was the first time I had heard from him in a long while.

GUESS I'LL GO BACK TO TH' BIG TOWN

"I'm sorry Ray," I said. "It hurts me to disappoint you but I am going to be busy all this week."

"How about next week?" he asked.

"Well," I said "we will see about that later on."

So the poor boy is going to call up later in the week and I will have to disappoint him again. I think it will be best next time to tell him of my engagement to Lennie. That would be a kinder plan than leaving him with any hope only to disappoint him later.

JULY 29.

I expected a phone call from Ray Harper today but he did not call up. I had made up my mind however that in fairness to him I ought to tell him of my engagement so I called him up at noon at his office. When I got him on the phone my courage failed me and I did not have the heart to tell him the truth.

DING! DONG! DING!

"I was just going to call you up," he said, "and ask you if you would not care to go some place tomorrow."

"I am afraid I can not," I replied.

"Oh yes you can," he replied in his old commanding way. "I will come and get you with bells on about ten o'clock in the morning."

So I am going to allow him to come and I will go to one of the parks or something with him and that will give me a chance to tell him face to face about my engagement which is much better than talking over the phone which seems cold and heartless some way. Then after I have come home I will write to Lennie and explain about going out with Ray and what I did it for.

HATCH WINS MARATHON; KENNEDY PLACES SECOND.

Johnstown, N. Y., July 29.—Sidney H. Hatch of Chicago, national marathon champion, won the 26.8 mile marathon here today in 3:07. William Kennedy, also of Chicago, was second, and Carmen A. Sippelet of Schenectady, N. Y., finished third. Of twelve starters, all finished except one.

MODALLION ANNEXES SPLIT HEAT VICTORY IN LOCAL TROTTING

Well matched contests and exciting finish marked the West Chicago Driving club events yesterday. Modallion, son of Mabel, carried off the feature race, the 2:30 trot, in a split heat victory. He won the final two heats, after fighting his way past the field in some great racing.

Five starters lined up in the 2:20 pace and Mary Hal, a daughter of the 2:04¼ record pacer, Direct Hal, was driven by her owner, Dr. Stackable, to a straight heat victory. Gerald Wilkes and Rockwell were her nearest contenders, but Geronimo showed the speed of the party each heat.

The free for all was won by Phrase Highwood, preserving his unbeaten record for the year. Alma Girl gave the winner a close call the second heat. Peggy Harmon had a walkaway in the 2:25 mixed race. The 3:00 mixed went to Lassie Dillon, a daughter of Sidney Dillon. She was the only pacer of the four to start. Summaries:

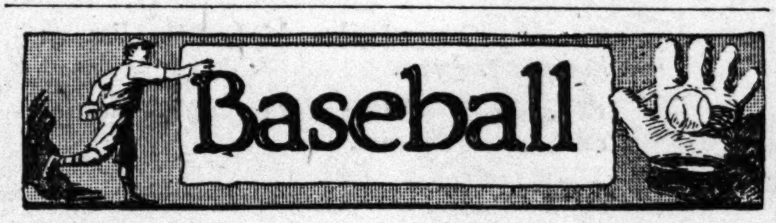
VOLLMER SETS RECORD IN METROPOLITAN SWIM.

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—Herbert E. Vollmer, New York A. C. swimming marvel, today added the Metropolitan A. A. U. 880 yard championship to his long list of titles. He won the event in the 110 foot open air pool of the Deal Beach club at Allenhurst, N. J., defeating his two teammates, Bedford H. [Ted] Cann, and Joseph W. Wheatly, by three and twenty yards, respectively. His time was 11:41 4-5, a new American record for the distance, under the conditions.

HEAT DELAYS GOLF TOURNEY

Springfield, Ill., July 29.—Heat was responsible for the indefinite postponement here today of the golf tournament between the country clubs of Champaign and Springfield.



A RALLY in the eighth inning, when they scored five runs, won for the Butler Brothers over Swift & Co. at Twenty-second and Rockwell streets, 8 to 4. The game was one of the few played in the Commercial league, most of them being called off on account of the heat. Phil Stremmel saved the game for the Butlers when he relieved Bucholz in the third after the latter had been scored on three times. Stremmel stopped the Swifts and fanned ten. Score:

CHICAGO ROWERS WIN SMALL CRAFT RACES IN ST. LOUIS REGATTA

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—[Special.]—Oarsmen of the Lincoln Park Boat club of Chicago again showed superiority over St. Louis Rowing club men when it comes to the small craft in the rowing game. They won the open quarter mile dash for singles and finished first and second in the junior doubles of the Southwestern Amateur Rowing association regatta at Creve Cœur lake today.

The Chicagoans were seriously handicapped through having none of their own boats to row the races with. The boats were delayed in shipment and will not be at the lake until tomorrow afternoon.

Alfred Anderson, who easily distanced all the St. Louis men in the singles at the Central tSates regattta at Peoria early in the month, duplicated this feat in the dash. This time, however, he had more competition. Harry Vogler of the Western Rowing club, made the Chicagoan row his best all the way, but Anderson got the jump on his St. Louis rival at the start and won by a quarter of a boat length, in 1:25. Chris Loehde, another Lincoln park man, finished third.

G. R. Levey and J. Hamper won the junior doubles, trimming their clubmates, J. Salem and H. Kelley. Levey and Hamper allowed their clubmates to set the pace during the first mile of the race, then went out and won by a big margin in 9:57 1-5.

Tomorrow the Chicagoans will compete in the senior four oared shell race and open one-half mile dash for fours, in which they stand a good chance of landing the medals.

BROTHERS RUN DEAD HEAT IN TWO MILE CONTEST.

Two brothers, A. and G. McKieghan of Ogden park, raced to a tie finish in the two mile run in the seventh annual Hamilton park meet yesterday. The events were open to representatives of all south parks. Only running events were held. Dubolz of Armour square was the only contestant to capture two firsts. He carried off the honors in the 100 and 440 yard sprints.

Hamilton park won the team honors with 29 points. Ogden park got 17 counters, Palmer park 14, and Armour square 10. The winners.

50 yard dash—Kuhn, Hamilton; 100 yard dash, Dubolz, Armour; 220 dash, Pittman, Hamilton; 440 dash, Dubolz, Armour; half mile, Kuehne, Hamilton; mile, Zandeutikom, Palmer; two miles, A. and G. McKieghan, Ogden, tied; five mile relay, Hamilton four man team.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

Only one game was played in the Mercantile league, the United States Ball Bearings beating the National Malleables, 6 to 0, at Palmer and Kolmar avenues. Ole Olson twirled a great game for the winners by holding his opponents to three scattered hits and striking out ten of them. Score:

AMERICUS TEAM LANDS VICTORY IN K. OF C. MEET

Scores 29 Points in Riverview Games—Lupton Puts Hyde Park in Second Place.

TABLE OF POINTS

Americus	29	McHale	[illegible]
Hyde Park	8	Phil Sheridan	[illegible]
Calumet	7

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Americus council with 29 points easily won the track meet held yesterday at Riverview park in conjunction with the Chicago chapter's outing of the Knights of Columbus. The meet was sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic union. No records were broken.

Americus had little competition. Hyde Park council, with 8 points, was its nearest opponent. The winners scored first place in the 220 yard, mile, and mile relay, and secured four seconds in other events.

Lupton Scores Eight Points.

Tom Lupton scored all the Hyde Park points by running first in the 100 and second in the 220. The 100 yard dash, together with the 880 yard run, saw some keen competition, Lupton winning from a large field, while Farley put McHale council in on the first place honors after a hard fight with Walter Tyrell in the 880 yard event.

Time in all the races was slow, due to the intense heat. Gold, silver, and bronze medals were awarded the winners in each event.

St. Mary's Training School band, from Desplaines, furnished music. Summaries:

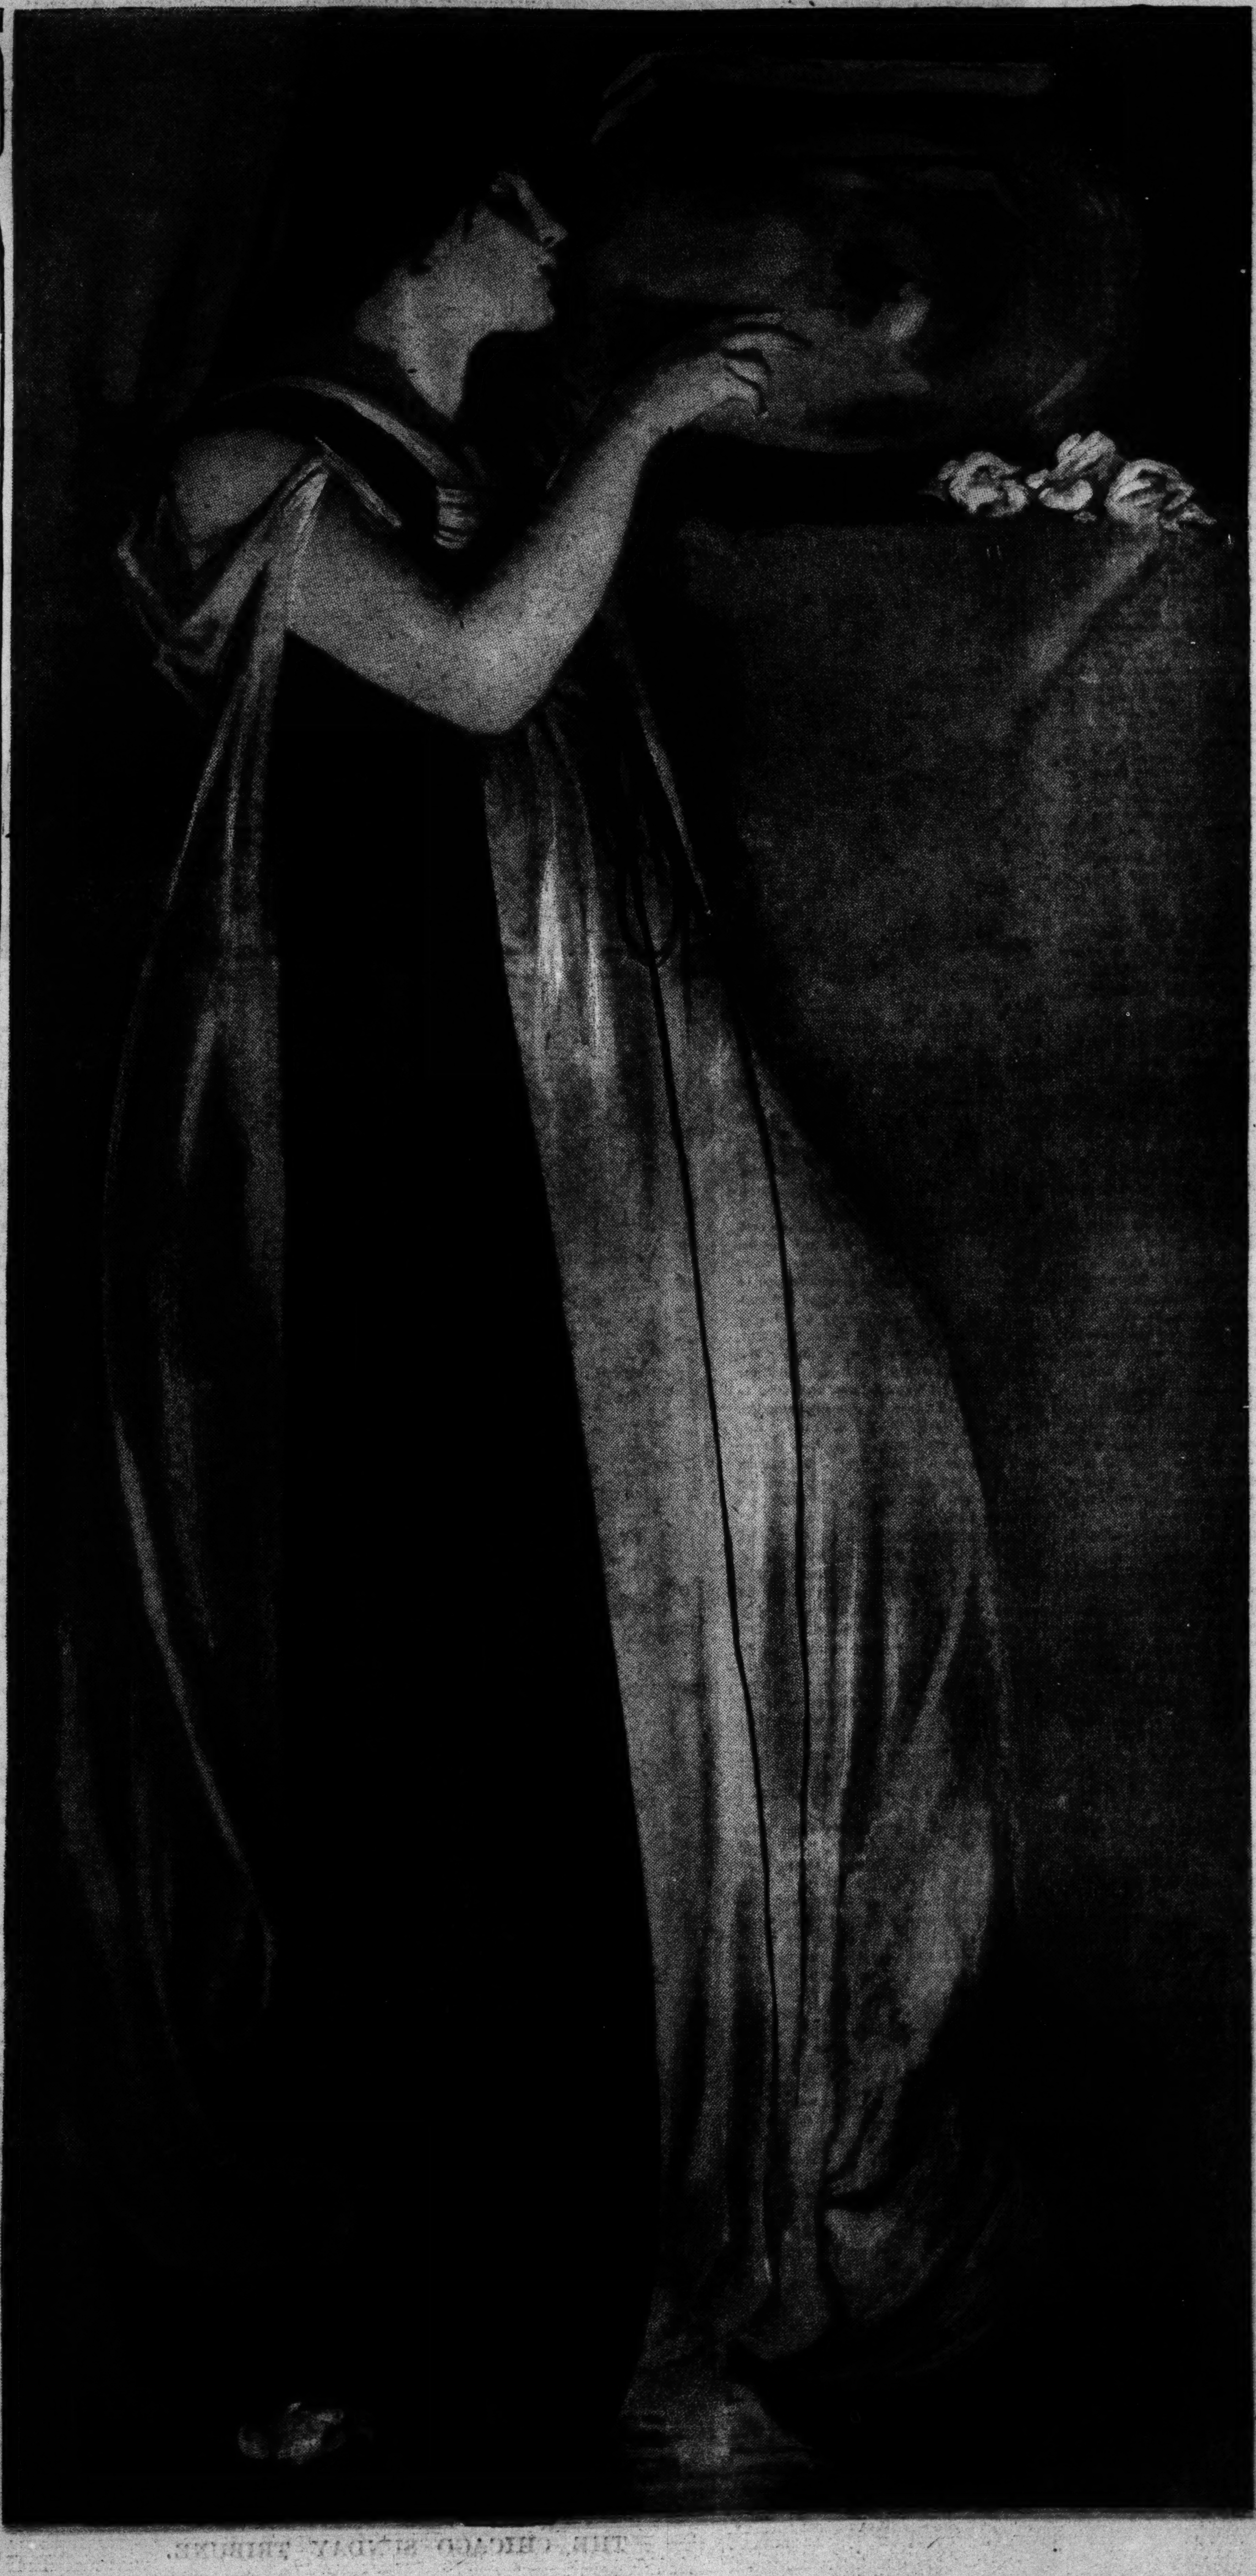
"POT OF BASIL"

by John W. Alexander

Every week this paper will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By Louise James Bargelt.



"The Pot of Basil," by John W. Alexander. Hanging in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. (1856.)

And she forgot the stars, the moon, the sun,
  And she forgot the blue above the trees,
And she forgot the dells where waters run,
  And she forgot the chilly autumn breeze;
She had no knowledge when the day was done,
  And the new morn she saw not; but in peace
Hung over her sweet Basil evermore
  And moistened it with tears unto the core.

FOR in this garden pot of Isabella's was the head of her lover, Lorenzo. In silken scarf scented with precious flowers, plucked in Araby, it was wrapped. And her own heart was imprisoned with it and her youth and all desire.

John Keats' poetic rendering of the old story from Boccaccio into verse form has given the world one of the most pathetic poems ever written.

Isabella was the daughter of a rich old Florentine family. She was adored by a youth named Lorenzo and worshiped him in return. But his birth was lowly and her brothers lured him to a deep wood by the banks of the Arno and murdered and buried him there, rather than risk the chance of his marrying their sister.

Isabella would not be comforted. Day and night she wept until in a vision Lorenzo came to her. He told her then that he was lying where the red whortle berries dropped above his head. All earthly bliss had been denied him, he said, but her constancy had brightened the gloom of his grave and made him glad.

When morning came the distracted Isabella went with her nurse to the place where he was buried. With a sharp knife she unearthed the loved body and cut away the head. Softly she combed the hair and shut the eyes forever and carried it home in her arms. For its tomb she chose the garden pot and covered it with sweet basil and kept it moist with her tears. Nor did she leave it day or night except for a brief few hours to sleep.

Her brothers, curious as to why her waking hours were spent by the basil flowers, waited one night until she was asleep and then went out and examined it secretly. And the sight of the thing that they saw was so dreadful to them that they fled madly with it into permanent banishment.

Isabella, crushed by the loss of her treasure, wasted away piteously. Every soul in Florence knew her tale and grieved for her, and the words that she cried out in her sorrow before she died lingered long in the minds of the simple Florentine folk.

For cruel 'tis, she said,
To steal my Basil pot from me!

Alexander's treatment of his picture is poetic. It is a masterpiece in its subtlety of face and form, with the abandonment of detail allowing no distraction from the haunting melancholy of the painting. Isabella is conceived as a slender, shadowy girl clad in a clinging robe of brown and moonlight green. By a dexterous manipulation of light and shade an atmosphere of wan, hopeless woe is created. The cheeks are ever so slightly sunken and there are deep circles under the eyes, while the lips are close to the bowl as if in vain yearning to caress the adored object within. There is a live, trembling intimacy about the figure, breathing forth an inconsolable, consuming grief.

The career of the artist was marked from its beginning by generous recognition from nearly every country in Europe. Born at Allegheny City, Pa., he was educated at the Royal academy in Munich. Alexander has paintings hanging in the Luxembourg, Paris, and among many European collections. He was president of the National Academy of Design in America and an honorable member of the Royal Society of British Arts, London. He was also a prominent member of the Societe des Artistes, France. He died June 1, 1915.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Herewith is presented the tenth installment of the great George Kleine-Tribune photoplay serial, "Gloria's Romance," written by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes as the especial vehicle for America's most charming actress of romance, Miss Billie Burke, who, for her services, receives $4,000 a week. See the pictures at the nearest theater showing them and read the story here. Watch for it every Sunday. The pictures will be shown in the leading theaters. A new episode is released every Monday.

SYNOPSIS.

Dr. Stephen Royce and Dick Freneau, an adventurer, love Gloria Stafford, daughter of the multimillionaire. Gloria, lost in the Florida everglades, is really saved by Royce, but Freneau, who also searched, gets the credit by a mean trick of fate. Freneau proposes and is secretly accepted, but Stafford pere makes them promise to wait five years. Meanwhile Freneau pursues his affair with Lois Freeman Stafford, wife of David Stafford, Gloria's brother, and becomes partner to the broker, Mulry. When the five years end, Gloria, out of school, is so matured Freneau doesn't recognize her—a terrible slight. Freneau, however, re-establishes himself with her and plans a hasty marriage, as he and Mulry need money badly. Lois learns of the intended marriage and threatens suicide rather than witness it. Freneau temporizes—declares he loves her (Lois) but must marry Gloria for financial reasons. Lois believes. David, her husband, by an anonymous letter, learns of Lois' infatuation for Freneau—whose name is synonymous with disgraceful affairs. In fact, Gideon Trask, father of Nell, one of his unfortunate victims, is on Freneau's trail swearing revenge. Planning to test her, David tells Lois he is to be out of town a week—but doesn't go. Meanwhile Lois promises to meet Freneau at the soldiers' monument, from where they will go to a Catskill village for a week. Each has damaging love letters in possession. Royce knows of the appointment. To deceive Gloria during his absence Freneau has written love letters, dating them from various cities. Mulry mails them. Freneau goes to the monument. There he is killed. Three men are seen near him. Gloria sees it all from her window. Royce thinks it is merely delirium. The fake love letters begin to arrive and add corroboration to this theory. Gloria learns the truth, vows revenge on the unknown slayer, but Royce prevents her from asking aid from the police and newspapers. He thus avoids scandal. At her father's command Gloria gives him the ring given her by Freneau.

WHEN Freneau slipped the gleaming circlet on Gloria's finger she had laughed with joy over it, never dreaming that he had bought it on credit and mentioned her name as security, and still less dreaming that he had not yet freed himself from the ringless engagement to Lois.

When Freneau died the gems that had looked to Gloria like jeweled laughter became teardrops of undying grief. She had taken a dismal pleasure in kissing the ring and talking to it as to her lost lover. When her tender heart yielded to the jealousy of her father and to his authority and she surrendered the ring to him her finger seemed to be suddenly naked and ashamed of itself. Her father's delight in his victory became only selfishness and an abuse of parental control.

Her very finger ached to have its ring back and she determined to go to her father and demand it. She went down the stairway to his library with a resolute step. She marched in upon him. He looked lonesome in his big dark room at his game of solitaire. Her mother had been dead for years and the little girl and boy he had raised had outgrown him. David was married and living in another house. Gloria had planned to leave him. She had as it were packed up her heart for departure. In her own loneliness she understood his. The look of determination in her face changed to one of pity. She felt more like her father's mother than like a rebellious daughter. She decided to postpone the quarrel for the ring for a few minutes.

She ran to him and seated herself on the arm of his chair, embracing him and twisting his white hair into a single spear as she had done from childhood.

"My own little Gloria has come home again!" he groaned in a childish rapture that showed how blue and deserted he had felt. "And you're not going to leave me again, are you?

"Never, daddy, never!" she sighed. "You poor old widower—you have a little widow for a child. You'll never lose me now."

That did not satisfy him either.

"O, yes, I will," he answered. "Your smiles will come back and some day a handsome man——"

"Hush," she said, and put her finger across his lips. "Don't say it."

It seemed treachery of the basest sort to discuss such a topic. She bent her head in apology to the memory of her lover. Her downcast eyes caught a sparkle in the depth of her father's waistcoat pocket. She knew that it was the ring he had taken from her. He had not yet put it in the safe or thrown it into the river.

Gloria was startled. Her lips parted to speak the demand she had come to make. But her father was staring into the fire with such a contented look that she could not bear to start such a scene as he would be sure to make. He was a great man for getting what he wanted and for keeping it, once it was got.

The diamond blinked at her and seemed to say: "Steal me. He took me by force; take me back by stealth. I belong to you."

Gloria had had no previous experience as a pickpocket, but she understood how exciting the profession must be. Her father was an unsuspecting and an easy victim. She had only to lay her cheek against his as a blindfold and while her hair got into his eyes and made him squirm she recaptured the ring. She was afraid at once that he would miss it, speak of it, reach for it, and find it gone. She dared not linger.

"Go back to your cards, you old darling," she said, kissed him half a dozen good-nights, and left.

She ran up to her room and set the ring in place again on her finger. She rejoiced in it a moment. Then her heart sank. Her father would not tolerate a combination of disobedience and robbery. The main thing was to keep the ring. She put it on a little chain and fastened that about her neck. And there she wore it until—until her quest was ended and she had learned the truth. Much time and many adventures lay between this night and that day.

Her father went back to his solitaire and did not miss the ring for hours. Then he raised a mighty pother. He had the old butler on all fours looking everywhere for the ring. He even had the ashes in the fireplace sifted. He suspected everybody but Gloria.

The next morning Gloria set about her task with an analytical mind. She read in the morning paper that Frank Mulry, the partner of the late Richard Freneau, had decided to incorporate the firm under the name of Frank Mulry, Inc. It made her angry to think of this businesslike haste. But she realized that, after all, she knew nothing of Mulry and that he must know a great deal about her poor Freneau. He was the first man to visit. She was happy in this determination. Her brother David dropped in to say, "Lois and I had a little misunderstanding, but we have made up. We're going to the country house for a new honeymoon. Come along, you two, and have some skating and skiing and toboggan work."

Gloria shook her head. She had other work to do. Her father urged her to make the change of scene. She said she would think it over, but she did not intend to go, as she planned to spend her wits on Frank Mulry. As soon as she could get rid of her father and brother she ordered her own car out for the long voyage downtown.

Frank Mulry was not at his office when she arrived. He had been summoned to Dr. Royce's office by telephone. Thinking that Royce probably wanted a tip on the market, and eager always for a new customer, Mulry lost no time in obeying the summons. He found Royce in a grim humor and not at all polite.

"Mr. Mulry," Royce began, every word as sharp as a surgeon's knife, "you know more about Richard Freneau's affairs than you would like to tell in the open court. Miss Stafford is suspicious of everybody who ever knew Freneau. I imagine that she will look you up. It is the wish of her father and of myself that she shall not find out what a scoundrel the man was. We want to spare her, at least till she grows much stronger and time has healed her wounds a little. It is to your interest as much as ours to keep her in the dark. You know how those letters were mailed and those telegrams sent. You know why Freneau played that horrible trick on the poor girl he was engaged to. I merely wish to warn you that if you see Miss Gloria Stafford coming your way you get out of her sight, no matter how or when. If you don't you'll be mixed up in a murder trial that may prove disastrous to you and your business."

Mulry's usual smile was twisted into a look of terror. He had more reasons than even Royce suspected for wishing to keep the searchlights of the press and the police out of his office. He was uncertain of the manner of Freneau's death, but the published hints of suicide for financial reasons had put Mulry into new financial difficulties. He had used the money Freneau had borrowed of Gloria's father to save himself from a crash. He was afraid that Stafford would demand it back at any moment, and he could not face such a demand.

Furthermore, his part in the writing of the letters and the sending of them and the telegrams from the various cities was one that he could not pleasantly explain. He could think of no good lie to tell, and the last person on earth he wanted to meet was Gloria Stafford.

Fortunately for him, he was at Royce's office when Gloria arrived at his. She was received by an impertinent young stenographer who seemed unable to spare time from her gum chewing and her appraisal of Gloria's looks and clothes to impart any useful information.

Gloria said that she would like to leave a note for Mr. Mulry. The stenographer pointed to a table whereon lay writing materials. Gloria sat down to invite Mr. Mulry to call upon her.

Now Lois Stafford has also an important errand at this office. Her whole future and reputation lay in the packet of her letters that Freneau had promised to return to her. She was sure that they were not on his body, for had they been found the newspapers or the police would have mentioned them soon enough. To recover those letters was now her prime purpose in life.

She thought of Mulry as the one most likely to be in possession of Freneau's effects, so she called on Mulry, never dreaming that Freneau had told him of her own interference in his plans to wed Gloria, or that Mulry collaborated with Freneau in his elaborate scheme to trick both women. Least of all did Lois dream that Gloria herself would be at Mulry's office. The stenographer was more impressed by Lois' clothes than by her attempt to be casual in her inquiry as to Mulry and "the papers of poor Mr. Freneau's."

The stenographer murmured to the bookkeeper, "Two swell dames campin' on Mr. Mulry's trail the same day! Somethin's goin' on here that ain't gettin' into the letters he dictates to me."

So she did not tell Lois of Gloria's presence and Lois went away in a turmoil of anxiety almost as great as that in Gloria's mind when she heard Lois ask about "poor Mr. Freneau." A knife of jealousy went into Gloria's heart and a hideous intuition that her beloved Dick might have bewitched Lois as he bewitched herself. Those eyes of his had been perhaps a little too winning.

She rebuked herself for allowing the suspicion even to flit through her brain and began her note to Mulry. Her eye fell on the letterhead. The branch offices of the brokerage firm were listed in an upper corner: Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburgh. A new suspicion stabbed Gloria. The letters and telegrams in Dick's writing had been sent from just those cities in just that order! Yet he had been dead when they were sent.

The earliest explanation was the true one, and Gloria guessed it immediately. He could have sent them to the branch offices in advance to be sent to her in order or he could have intrusted them to some one traveling the round of the offices. Her intuition hit on the truth, without knowing it. The very ease of the trick disgusted her. She felt herself in the shadow of some hateful conspiracy. She began to doubt her own memory as to the letters and telegrams.

"I won't wear mourning any more"

Crumpling the letter she had begun and thrusting it into her handbag, she left the office, telling the stenographer that she would telephone to Mr. Mulry. The elevator seemed to drop out beneath her as her whole trust in man and love had fallen from under her. She reached her motor and told the driver to make haste for home.

The crowded traffic, with its delays, maddened her, and when she reached her house at last she was in a frenzy. She ran up to her desk, took from the strong box the letters and telegrams of her lover, and compared them with the letterhead, laying them out date by date. There they were, the same towns in the same order, like a loathsome timetable of deceit. Her love revolted at the very picture of Freneau. She lost all self-control and cried at it:

"Whoever killed you and whatever his reason was, you lied to me, Dick. You never loved me, and I don't love you any more! I won't wear mourning for you any more."

She rang her bell furiously and ordered her startled maid to bring her the brightest gown in her wardrobe. She caught it from the maid's hands and drove the girl out, then flinging the riotous colors about her black gown like a scarf, she broke into a dance, flinging her lithe body into postures of joy and crying out that she was happy and that her heart would never be the fool of love again.

But she was not strong and her hysteria wore out speedily. Her heart swung back to its love again and she fell across the divan sobbing.

"Forgive me, Dick. I believe you in spite of the world, I love you in spite of everything and I'll find out the truth—the truth—the truth!"

And now it would have been hard to say whether Gloria's motive was one of loyalty to Freneau or of suspicion of him. She had to acquit him of worse than murder before the court of her own heart as much as to avenge him. If he was the victim of some conspiracy, she was the victim of his. The riddle maddened her with its uncertainties.

That visit of Lois to Mulry's office seemed to involve her in Freneau's duplicity. Lois had confessed to stealing the photograph of Freneau. She had said that she planned to have a miniature made for Gloria. But this seemed not to be only a hasty excuse, a desperate lie to hide a discovered theft. She decided to question Lois further. But Lois was going to her country home. Gloria had decided not to go. Now she decided that she would. She went to Lois' house to tell her so.

To her amazement Dr. Royce was there. He was saying to Lois that Gloria was on the hunt and warning her to be both a better wife than she had been and a more discreet woman, just such a warning as he had given Mulry.

Mulry had already taken the doctor's advice. He had invited himself to the country home of a friend of his, a home not far from David Stafford's. In eluding Gloria he had set out for the very region which she was about to visit in her investigation of Lois.

Gloria did not hear what Dr. Royce was saying to Lois when she was shown into the living room. But she saw that they were talking excitedly and that her appearance disconcerted them. Gloria was so disconcerted at this that she could hardly explain her errand.

"I just dropped in to say that I will accept David's invitation to go up to the farm with you."

Lois was so reassured by this that she exclaimed with delight.

Royce said to Gloria: "May I come up, too?"

Gloria answered him icily: "It isn't my farm. Good-by, Lois." Then she walked out.

Royce stared at Lois, then at the spot where Gloria had been. Gloria was angry at him. He could not imagine why. He could not permit her to snub him like that. He had some rights as a physician if not as a lover. He bolted from Lois' presence and caught Gloria just as she was getting into her car.

"I'm going to take you home at once," he said.

She answered with more ice: "I'm not going home. I'm going to my father's office. Good-by."

Royce helped her into the car, hesitated a moment, then jumped in after her. Neither of them spoke all the way downtown. She was too angry. He was too bewildered. Arrived at the Equitable building, she put out her hand to bid him good-by, but he shook his head and went in with her.

Entering her father's suite, she brushed aside a protesting secretary and penetrated with Royce to the luxurious inner office.

Pierpont Stafford rose in amazement.

"Why, my child, what are you doing down here? You're not strong enough for this." And he looked inquiringly at the doctor.

"I tried to take her home, but she would not listen to me," Royce said helplessly.

Gloria advanced to her father with sudden anger.

"My health is all right, father, but what neither you nor Stephen realizes is that something must be done for my peace of mind." And, drawing the photograph from her breast, she pointed to it with flashing eyes, turning to each of them accusingly. "He was not drowned. He was murdered. You don't care. You want only silence. But I want the truth! I'm going to find it! I'm going to hunt down that man whether you help me or not!"

Royce studied her with uneasy admiration: her father tossed his hands in despair.

Royce thought a moment, then beckoned to Gloria and said: "Come with me."

Gloria followed him out wonderingly.

Entering the corridor of the building, Royce pressed the elevator button marked "Up." He guided Gloria into a car that stopped for them. It was an express and shot them up to the fortieth floor. Alighting, Royce led her out to the roof. It was surrounded by a high wall, but a carpenter's ladder chanced to be there, and Royce set it up that Gloria might mount and see across the parapet.

Wonderingly, Gloria allowed Royce to help her up. She shuddered as she looked down into the depths of the vast cañons. Then, in great seriousness, Royce spoke. He stood on the ladder with her and pointed in a circle, beginning at the east and turning south, then west, then north, as he spoke:

"You say you saw a man kill Freneau! I say it was delirium. If it were true, you don't know his name, his country, or his motive; you would hardly know his face if you saw him again. No one knows who he is. He may have taken a ship across the ocean yonder. If he is in that city, among those millions, how can you hope to find him? Look!"

The marvelous expanse of the harbor, the rivers and bridges, and finally the enormous city, terrified Gloria, but she pounded her little fist on the parapet and shook it at the infinite sky above her in registration of her vow.

"I'll find him somehow! Somewhere! Some when!"

Royce stared at her and loved her more than ever, hopelessly, helplessly. She leaned on the parapet and gazed off into space.

Composer Says Music Can Make or Mar Picture.

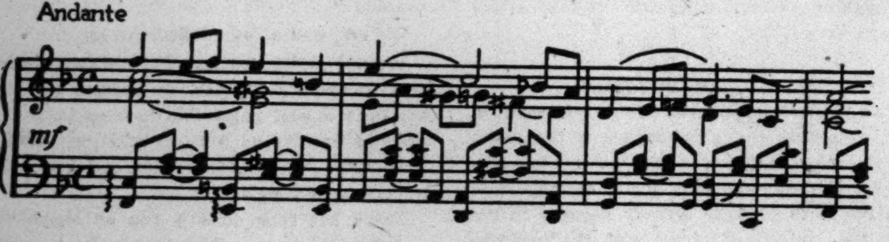
A SYMPHONY in brown—male gender—came toward my desk in tow of the perfectly nice young man who is publicity manager for Thomas Ince. To myself I said: "It is or should be the composer."

It was.

Let me introduce you then to Mr. Victor L. Schertzinger, musical director, composer, violinist, etc., and many of 'em, for Mr. Ince. He it was who prepared the score for "Civilization" and whose music has delighted the ears when "Peggy," "Aloha Oe," "Hell's Hinges," and "Edge of the Abyss" have been thrown on the screen. It is interesting to meet him, for in his class he is unique—at least I never met a real moving picture manufacturer of music before, did you?

MOFFETT PHOTO

Victor L. Schertzinger



"How did you happen," I began after my everlasting fashion, "to take up this line of work?" (I started to say his name and then I coughed embarrassedly, for I kunnut pronounce it—even yet, and delawd knows I have practiced.)

"Well," the symphony in brown answered (brown suit, brown tie, brown shoes, brown eyes, brown hair, different shades blended most, most artistically), "for a long time I played the violin for operas. Then I became interested in motion pictures, studied a bit, and came to the conclusion that a picture could be made or marred by the musical accompaniment. I spoke to Mr. Ince and he agreed with me. He told me to get busy and see what I could work out, and so I started in composing music for his pictures. Did you see 'Peggy'?"

"Yes," I said, "and it was lovely—picture, music—all." Then he told me something I thought rather interesting. He said:

"That being Billie Burke's first picture, the continual click, click of the camera made her so nervous she was scarcely able to work. Mr. Ince despaired. Then he hit on a scheme—or rather he and I did together. Each night he would give me a draft of the scenes he expected to work the following day. I would get busy and compose music that I thought fitting. Then with a miniature orchestra I would hang around while 'Peggy' was in the taking and play. This drowned the annoying 'click, click, click,' and Miss Burke was able to work happily instead of being on such constant nervous tension."

I looked at him severely. "Charlatan!" I said. "Hypnotist!"

"No limit to what music can do," he told me calmly. "No limit at all. Some day I'm going to prove it."

"How?" asked the lady.

"Ever attend grand opera?"

"Once."

"Well, if you're a bright young woman, as I trust you are, that once revealed to you that scenery and acting in opera are not on a par with voice. Is it so?"

"Ist."

"That being the case, that is where I got my idea. Why not have an opera score, and have the acting done on the screen? The best people could be procured to act—scenery could be reproduced that no stage settings could ever equal. Music, acting, scenery. The best procurable of all three. Why not?"

"Why not?" I echoed. Quite bowled over by his argument, I could see no reason why not. Nor can I yet. It could be done.

I asked then of the symphony in brown who he thought that specially improvised music was better than playing old selections that were appropriate to the scene.

"Because," he said, "play something your audience knows, and it invariably hums and sings, and thus fails to pay the proper amount of attention to the picture."

"That's a good argument," I agreed, "and besides depriving themselves of something that is their due, they inflict their neighbors with murderous intentions. Many the time when only the grace of God and what is known as fear of the law have prevented my attacking with my longest hatpin!"

He told me then how he works. He and the producer work together. He endeavors to make his score fit the picture, but many and many are the times, he says, when Mr. Ince, thrilled by a couple of bars of music that are a couple of bars too much, has rung in another few feet of film, so that the music may not be cut.

And while at first professional musicians accustomed to playing only for "legitimate" cursed the "movies" as a ravaging dragon about to drag the bread from them and their little helpless and innocent children, times have changed since then and they bless the good angel, the "movies," for they are paid more now than ever before.

"Write music yourself?" I asked the symphony.

'Yes, indeed," he said. "I have a staff that arranges it after I write it, but I write it."

"Then," said I, possessed of a bright idea, "supposing you write a little bar right here and now to go with a scene we will say is entitled: 'He meets Mimi in the desert after many years have rolled between.'"

"Righto," said the symphony in brown, and he did it.

Try it on your piano, and if you don't like it—you know the composer!

Anita Stewart received the highest number of votes last week. Her picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon the following six are the leaders:

Alice Brady, Mae Murray, Jack Pickford, Mary Miles Minter, Gerda Holmes, and Lois Weber.

Grace Cunard

GRACE CUNARD, of the popular Universal stellar combination, "Grace Cunard and Francis Ford," was born in Paris and is of American and French nationality. Before becoming a screen actress she was on the stage. She was educated at Columbus, Ohio. For the last four years she has been a motion picture favorite, having played with Biograph, Lubin, Republic, Kay-Bee and finally Universal. It has been while with the last company and playing opposite Francis Ford that she has made a name for herself. Miss Cunard is of medium height, has brown hair and gray eyes. She spends considerable time writing and is fond of automobiling, entertaining, horseback riding, etc. The picture in which you probably liked her best was the serial "Lucille Love." Miss Cunard, besides being an excellent actress, is also a writer and producer.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

FAN AND READER: I am glad you "devour" my page. Let us hope it will not give you movie indigestion. Billie Burke is in her 20s. Marie Doro is about the same age. Edna Mayo was on the stage before entering the movies. I have no record of her ever being in vaudeville. You keep right on "offending."

MISS HELEN L.: I received the ballots and they were counted with the others. Mr. Karr has been in motion pictures for about five years.

MRS. G. V.: In "Armstrong's Wife" Thomas Meighan took the part of Armstrong. In "Stingaree" True Boardman took the part of Stingaree. Y'wekkum.

LONELY GIRL: Well, any time you're lonely just remember that there is one person who is always mighty glad to hear from you, and sit right down and tell that person all about it. That person is this person. The name's right on this page. Don't forget!

E. A. H. A.: The cast of "The Devil" is as follows: The devil, Edward Connelly; Isabella, Bessie Barriscale; Harry Lang, Arthur Maude; Elsa, Clara Williams; Milli, Rhea Mitchell; Alfred Zanden, J. Barney Sherry, and Andrews, A. Hollingsworth. Your letter was no trouble at all. Please do not hesitate to write any time you think I can be of further service to you.

Yes, I think Marguerite Clark is splendid. Helen Holmes is in her twenties. She is married to her director, J. P. McGowan. If you will write to Miss Clark, care of the Famous Players company, 213 West Twenty-sixth street, New York, sending 25 cents for her photograph, I feel quite certain she will send it to you.

TWO WHO DO NOT AGREE: So far as I know Owen Moore and Mary Pickford are happily married. Let us hope so, anyway.

R. J. B.: Mary Miles Minter is with the American company, Santa Barbara, Cal. I wouldn't call you a "poor fool" because you lost your "kiddish heart." You see, I know that at 17 one's heart is a most unruly member.

MISS A. W.: Something about Billie Burke? Well, she's small and blonde and young. She has beautiful gray-blue eyes and loads of nice fluffy hair. She is married to Florenz Ziegfeld. You're welcome.

WISE GUY: For the article on scenario writing, a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

ALICE M. S.: If you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I shall mail you a list of the various companies that buy photoplays. Glad to accommodate you.

LOVER OF MOVIES: I do not think a person is foolish to ask a question when they want to find out something. It bane more foolisher to remain in ignorance. In "The Ragamuffin" Tom Forman took the part of Van Dyke, Blanche Sweet was Jenny, Park Jones was Jack, and James Neill was the crook. No trouble at all. I'm just flattered to death at what you said about me.

JESSIE K.: Anna Little is with the American company, Santa Barbara, Cal. Herbert Rawlinson is a Universal star. You are vurr', vurr' welcome.

W. A. D.: No, Helen Gibson and Helen Holmes are not the same person. Helen Gibson is with the Kalem company and Helen Holmes is with the Signal-Mutual company.

KATHERINE C.: Regarding the matrimonial affairs of Mr. Robert Warwick, I grieve to say I have no information. Write him, care of the World Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

LOUISE R.: "No come?" Well, "here come." Eugene Pallette is with the National Film corporation, Los Angeles, Cal. I have no information regarding his personal affairs. No, Louise, I cannot "slip" a picture of any star in the "Frame" unless that star received votes enough to warrant his photograph being placed there.

HAR HAR: Harold Lockwood and May Allison are with the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York. Mr. Lockwood is 28 years old and 5 feet 11 inches tall. Miss Allison is 20 years old and 5 feet 5 inches tall. Beautiful as "the sun, the moon, the earth, the clouds, and the sky." Is she? Well, her name is May All-i-son, and you could pronounce it All-sun.

EARTH
SOME BEAUTY

PAULINE E.: Stamped, self-addressed envelope, please, and I shall be glad to send you the article I have on the "doubling" process. Thank you, Pauline, for those kind words of appreciation.

A. L. K.: I suppose the reason you do not see your favorites any more is due to the fact that the theater you are attending is not buying pictures in which they appear. Henry Walthall is with the Essanay company, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. Yes, he was splendid in "The Birth of a Nation." Yes, he lives in Chicago, and is married.

HOME MADE FISH CAKES.

First prepare the batter for what is to come. The best way is to say nothing really pointed, but just hint at it. After you have done this, stir the batter into the small cake tins, put in the oven, and lock the door on it. During the twenty minutes required for cooking you may now gather the fish. If there is a convenient meadow at hand you may take your broom and sweep them in, but otherwise get them from the grocer. They should be no longer than 3 inches (Mrs. Rorer insists on 2) and should be born if possible off the Maine coast, as they are more docile. A simple test is to speak to them kindly, and if they answer with a down east twang you may be sure you have made no mistake. Now strangle them one by one and, removing the cakes from the oven, spread the fish over them. Serve with regrets.

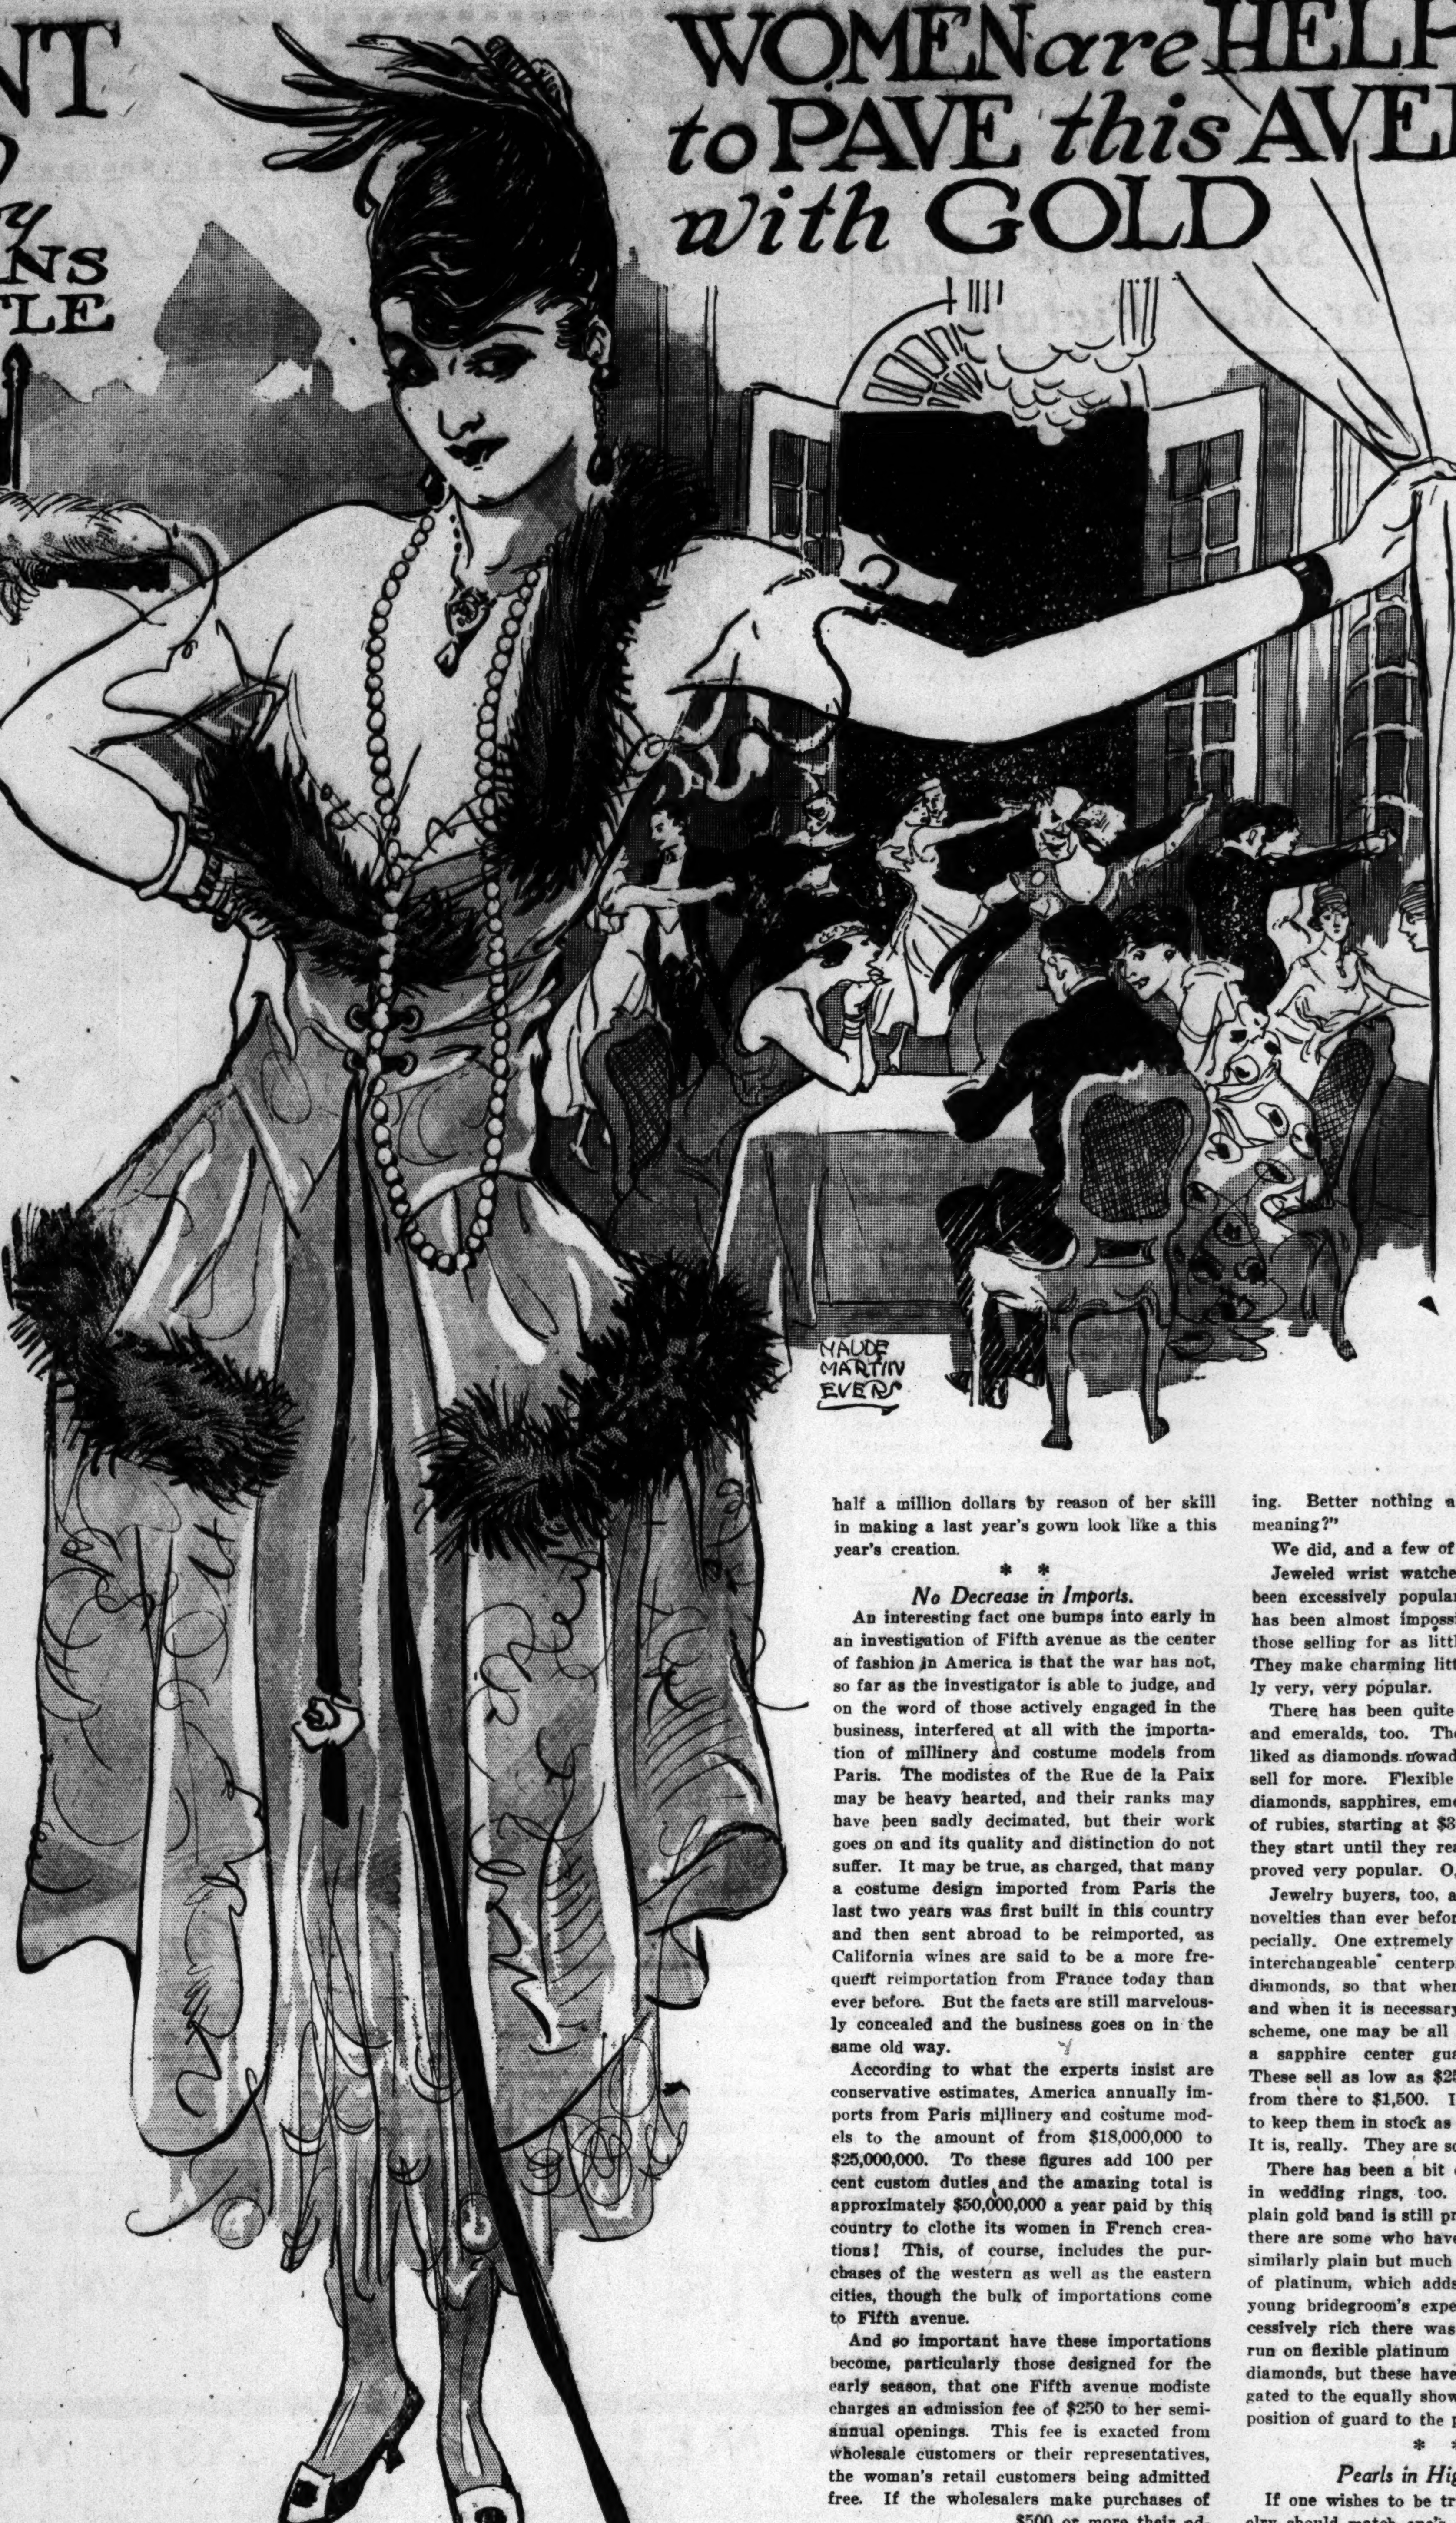
WOMEN are HELPING to PAVE this AVENUE with GOLD



The Great White Way as Far as Spending Is Concerned Is a Drab and Sorry Piker Compared to Fifth Avenue the Aristocrat of Shopping Streets.

THIS story is for the ladies, bless their extravagant ways! The men would not understand it, or, understanding, would be irritated by it. For it is a story of what women have done and are doing to make this the most extravagant of all years in the history of New York. Being for the ladies, it is a story of Fifth avenue and not of Broadway. Fifth avenue is her ladyship's own.

Give a younger son, or an older son, or a bachelor grown rich, a chance to spend a lot of money in New York and he will never wander far from Broadway and its glitter. Artificial lights become the joy of his life and food and frivolity his chiefest concern. But give a woman money and set her down in New York and she starts for Fifth avenue as fast as a taxi can carry her. And there she stays until the money is gone or the stores are closed against her. Little shops and big shops, native shops and foreign—they are all the same to her. Each contains something of interest—something costly, something smart, something to add to her personal adornment, something to gratify her pet extravagance or make her dearest friend envious.

A wonderful, wonderful thoroughfare, this avenue. Beginning at Washington square and extending north of Central park, it represents wealth and those who cater to wealth practically every foot of its length. Day by day and hour by hours, year's end to year's end, wealth rolls over its asphalt surface in hundreds of thousands of touring cars, or patters along its sidewalks on countless shopping expeditions. A mighty army of spenders paving a street with gold.

Compared with the spenders of Broadway these shoppers of the avenue are as the princes of the east in contrast to a crowd of revelers at a carnival. And if it were possible to add and parallel the total sales of a day Fifth avenuee would force the vaunted great white way to appear a drab and sorry piker, a cheap and garishly bedizened houri of the street, jingling the coppers of fools while her respectable sister was piling up the gold of wealthy aristocrats.

Pay High for Designer's Stamp.

Fifth avenue! Fifth avenue! The bargains that are sold and the profits that are made through the lure of thy name! And the names of thy proud merchants!

As an instance: A year ago Billie Burke appeared in a comedy called "Jerry." During the action of that play she wore pajamas. They were silk pajamas, rose colored, and with fluffs here and there; a neat though not gaudy garment suggesting anything rather than repose. But they made the already beautiful Billie appear more fetching than ever.

The day after the first performance of "Jerry" in New York a plump young person appeared at the Fifty-seventh street salesroom of one of our most widely advertised modistes and demanded that she be fitted out in a duplicate pair of "Jerry" pajamas. The order was taken, the pajamas were produced, tried on, and paid for. The bill was $175. Since then between twenty and thirty pairs of pajamas following this same model have been made by this same couturière, and at the same price. Not because by any stretch of the imagination they were worth the price asked for them, nor because they could not be duplicated by a plain sewing woman for a sixth the cost, but because they bore the stamp of a famous designer of Fifth avenue! And, more particularly, because the money was available to pay for them.

Again: The most famous of Manhattan's ladies' tailors is a modest gentleman bearing a modest name with nary a French tang to it. For several seasons last past he has been condescendingly making plain tailor made suits for from $200 up. This year the price has jumped to $400 for what he calls a "simple untrimmed tailleur." And he keeps 200 tailors busy in his workrooms the year round.

Once more: A year ago, two at most, one sport suit, or possibly two, was enough for any woman's wardrobe, smart as she might be. Today do you think she would think of playing tennis in her golfing suit? Or go rowing in her yachting costume? Jamais, ma cherie! She has a different suit for each sport. When she rides she wears a habit a foreign gentleman with an artistic eye has made for her for $300, hat and boots thrown in. (She furnishes her own horse and spurs.) If she golfs she wears a simple little skirt and waist effect this same habit maker is willing to turn out for $250, with a jacket included for the caddy to carry. When she was skating last winter she wore a leather suit that cost up to $400. Which in a way may be counted a reasonable investment, for the leather, being of the finest quality, may be put to other uses when the style changes next winter. For one thing, father may strop his razor on it.

Price and Profit Double.

While we are traveling with this particular set let me tell you of an outfitter to kiddies who is doing nicely in New York just now. She is a German and therefore thorough and efficient. And if she is not too busy when you call she will gladly make a little girl's lingerie frock for $60 or a coat for $75. These prices, she insists, are very moderate.

These items of the extremely extravagant would be of little interest were it not for the indisputable fact that they are true. These are prices that are being paid today, and as they set the standard by which all other prices along Fifth avenue are graded, they are important.

One honest caterer to the shopper with a lot of money confessed in an unguarded moment that prices from end to end of the avenue are up just about 60 per cent this year as compared with last year, and that profits are a good 50 per cent better. And then he begged that his name be not printed lest he be ostracized from his tradesmen's set.

Yet what the good of warning any one that this is positively not the year to buy in New York? The working of the feminine mind takes no account of such conditions. A woman wants the clothes she wants when she wants them, which is to say while they are in fashion. And if she has the money she will buy them. Her own pet deception is that she invariably gets a bargain. And nowhere in the whole world are salespersons better trained in the dissemination of this particular bit of fiction than they are on this same Fifth avenue.

This is New York's most extravagant year—most wickedly extravagant, in a way, because the prosperity that appears to be general has made the city the Mecca for money spenders. And being an imitative people, all grades have followed the spenders' lead.

Put Blame on the Times.

Those modest gentlewomen who formerly were content with a $15 hat have raised their allowance to $25 or $30—have had to raise it, in fact, to get a hat of anything resembling the style to which they have been accustomed. Those who have been in the habit of counting $25 not a cheap but a necessary price have gone as high as $35 and $50 and put the blame on the times.

With money in the family treasury—money that every frugal wife is afraid will be risked in speculation and probably lost if she does not get rid of it promptly—it is easy to convince the shopper that $200 is not too much to pay for the evening gown that formerly cost $125, and to be able to pay the $200 bolsters the pride.

Then there is the item of furs. Because furs are a reasonable trimming for summer gowns at the seaside places of France and England, furs have become the fashion even in interior America, where they are a burden. The style creators who specialize in the handling of pelts have seen to it that last summer's neckpiece cannot be made to do a second season's duty. Trust them for that. "In the place of the 1915 white fox scarf in what was known as the natural animal shape," to quote one expert, "this summer sees the launching of the pelerine, which is a fur cape that reaches to the hem of the skirt. Ermine is the favorite pelt for this costume accessory, and an effective ermine pelerine may be purchased for $600. This, of course, is our maximum price. We have them as cheap as $100."

Another, justifying the higher cost of frocks, called attention to the popularity of georgette crêpe sleeves. The silk afternoon frock will outwear at least three sets of sleeves, and these cost from $4 to $10 each time they are replaced.

Other Branches Prosper.

When money is free and spending is general it affects every branch of the business. As an instance of this we may cite the experience of Mrs. Charles M. Schwab and her lace gown. It was a handsome gown and no doubt cost a goodly sum, but one night at a party Mrs. Schwab caught the lace and tore it. She sent it next day to the shop of a specialist in the repair of expensive gowns and it was made again as good as new—at a cost of $250. Three girls, the proprietor of the place explained, had worked a solid week on the gown, being obliged to replace each torn thread by hand in order to render the tear invisible.

A perfectly enormous sum is spent each year in New York in the rebuilding of gowns, in making over costumes that have lost no more than the first blush of smartness. There are a number of firms that specialize in this work. One woman in particular has gained an enviable reputation as a rebuilder. Five years ago she was an actress working for David Belasco. She tired of the stage, reckoned that her chances for promotion were slim, and determined to go into business for herself. It is told of her that the amount of money she had to invest was so small that after she had bought a sewing machine and paid half a month's rent and the cost of a small advertisement in society's favorite newspaper her pocketbook was practically empty—so empty, in fact, that the evening before she opened her tiny workroom she decided to go to bed hungry and save her money to buy breakfast in the morning that she might start the day fairly well fortified.

Today this woman owns a four story building in one of the thirties just off the avenue, and a country place on Long island. In five years it is estimated that she has made over half a million dollars by reason of her skill in making a last year's gown look like a this year's creation.

No Decrease in Imports.

An interesting fact one bumps into early in an investigation of Fifth avenue as the center of fashion in America is that the war has not, so far as the investigator is able to judge, and on the word of those actively engaged in the business, interfered at all with the importation of millinery and costume models from Paris. The modistes of the Rue de la Paix may be heavy hearted, and their ranks may have been sadly decimated, but their work goes on and its quality and distinction do not suffer. It may be true, as charged, that many a costume design imported from Paris the last two years was first built in this country and then sent abroad to be reimported, as California wines are said to be a more frequent reimportation from France today than ever before. But the facts are still marvelously concealed and the business goes on in the same old way.

According to what the experts insist are conservative estimates, America annually imports from Paris millinery and costume models to the amount of from $18,000,000 to $25,000,000. To these figures add 100 per cent custom duties and the amazing total is approximately $50,000,000 a year paid by this country to clothe its women in French creations! This, of course, includes the purchases of the western as well as the eastern cities, though the bulk of importations come to Fifth avenue.

And so important have these importations become, particularly those designed for the early season, that one Fifth avenue modiste charges an admission fee of $250 to her semiannual openings. This fee is exacted from wholesale customers or their representatives, the woman's retail customers being admitted free. If the wholesalers make purchases of $500 or more their admission fee is returned to them. The custom was established to prevent thrifty manufacturers from copying without payment models imported at great cost.

Another trick of the trade that smart dressers are paying for this year is the frequently changing fashions. With money plentiful, the merchant's idea is to get as much of it added to his bank account as possible while the harvest is on. Before Easter the straw chapeau was the thing and the avenue was roofed with them. But Easter was barely over when the black velvet tam o'shanter appeared, adding another $20 to the cost of the spring wardrobe. The "tam" was soon too popular, however, and the shopgirls, who are nothing if not stylish, copying the hats and clothes they make almost as fast as they make them, killed interest in it. The next turn of the wheel brought on the straw trimmed felt hat, and $30 was a common price for these

Big Year for Jewelers.

But it is in the jewelry shops that the spenders really shine—shine literally when they emerge. This has been a big year for the jewelers—so big, in fact, that they do not like to talk about it. "It disturbs economic conditions; it serves to make the less successful envious and bitter; it hurts trade, old chap. Really we wish you would say nothing. Better nothing at all. You get our meaning?"

We did, and a few of their prices.

Jeweled wrist watches, for instance, have been excessively popular, so popular that it has been almost impossible to keep in stock those selling for as little as $250 and $300. They make charming little gifts and are really very, very popular.

There has been quite a run on sapphires and emeralds, too. They are quite as well liked as diamonds nowadays, really, and often sell for more. Flexible jeweled bracelets of diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, and sometimes of rubies, starting at $300 and continuing as they start until they reach $1,000, have also proved very popular. O, very.

Jewelry buyers, too, are going in more for novelties than ever before. Novelty rings especially. One extremely popular style has an interchangeable centerpiece surrounded by diamonds, so that when occasion warrants, and when it is necessary to suit the costume scheme, one may be all in diamonds or have a sapphire center guarded by diamonds. These sell as low as $250 and range quickly from there to $1,500. It is quite as difficult to keep them in stock as it is the wrist watch. It is, really. They are so chic and so novel.

There has been a bit of novelty introduced in wedding rings, too. The old fashioned plain gold band is still preferred by many, but there are some who have taken a fancy to a similarly plain but much more expensive band of platinum, which adds $25 or $30 to the young bridegroom's expenses. With the excessively rich there was for a time quite a run on flexible platinum bands set with small diamonds, but these have gradually been relegated to the equally showy but less important position of guard to the plain gold band.

Pearls in High Favor.

If one wishes to be truly smart one's jewelry should match one's costume. Hence the popularity of sets of rings for the little finger to go with flexible platinum bracelets set with the same stone—diamonds, emeralds, sapphires, rubies, amethysts—and to be changed with each costume. Long pendant earrings are still vogue, too, we discover—at least they are vogue if they cost $300 the pair.

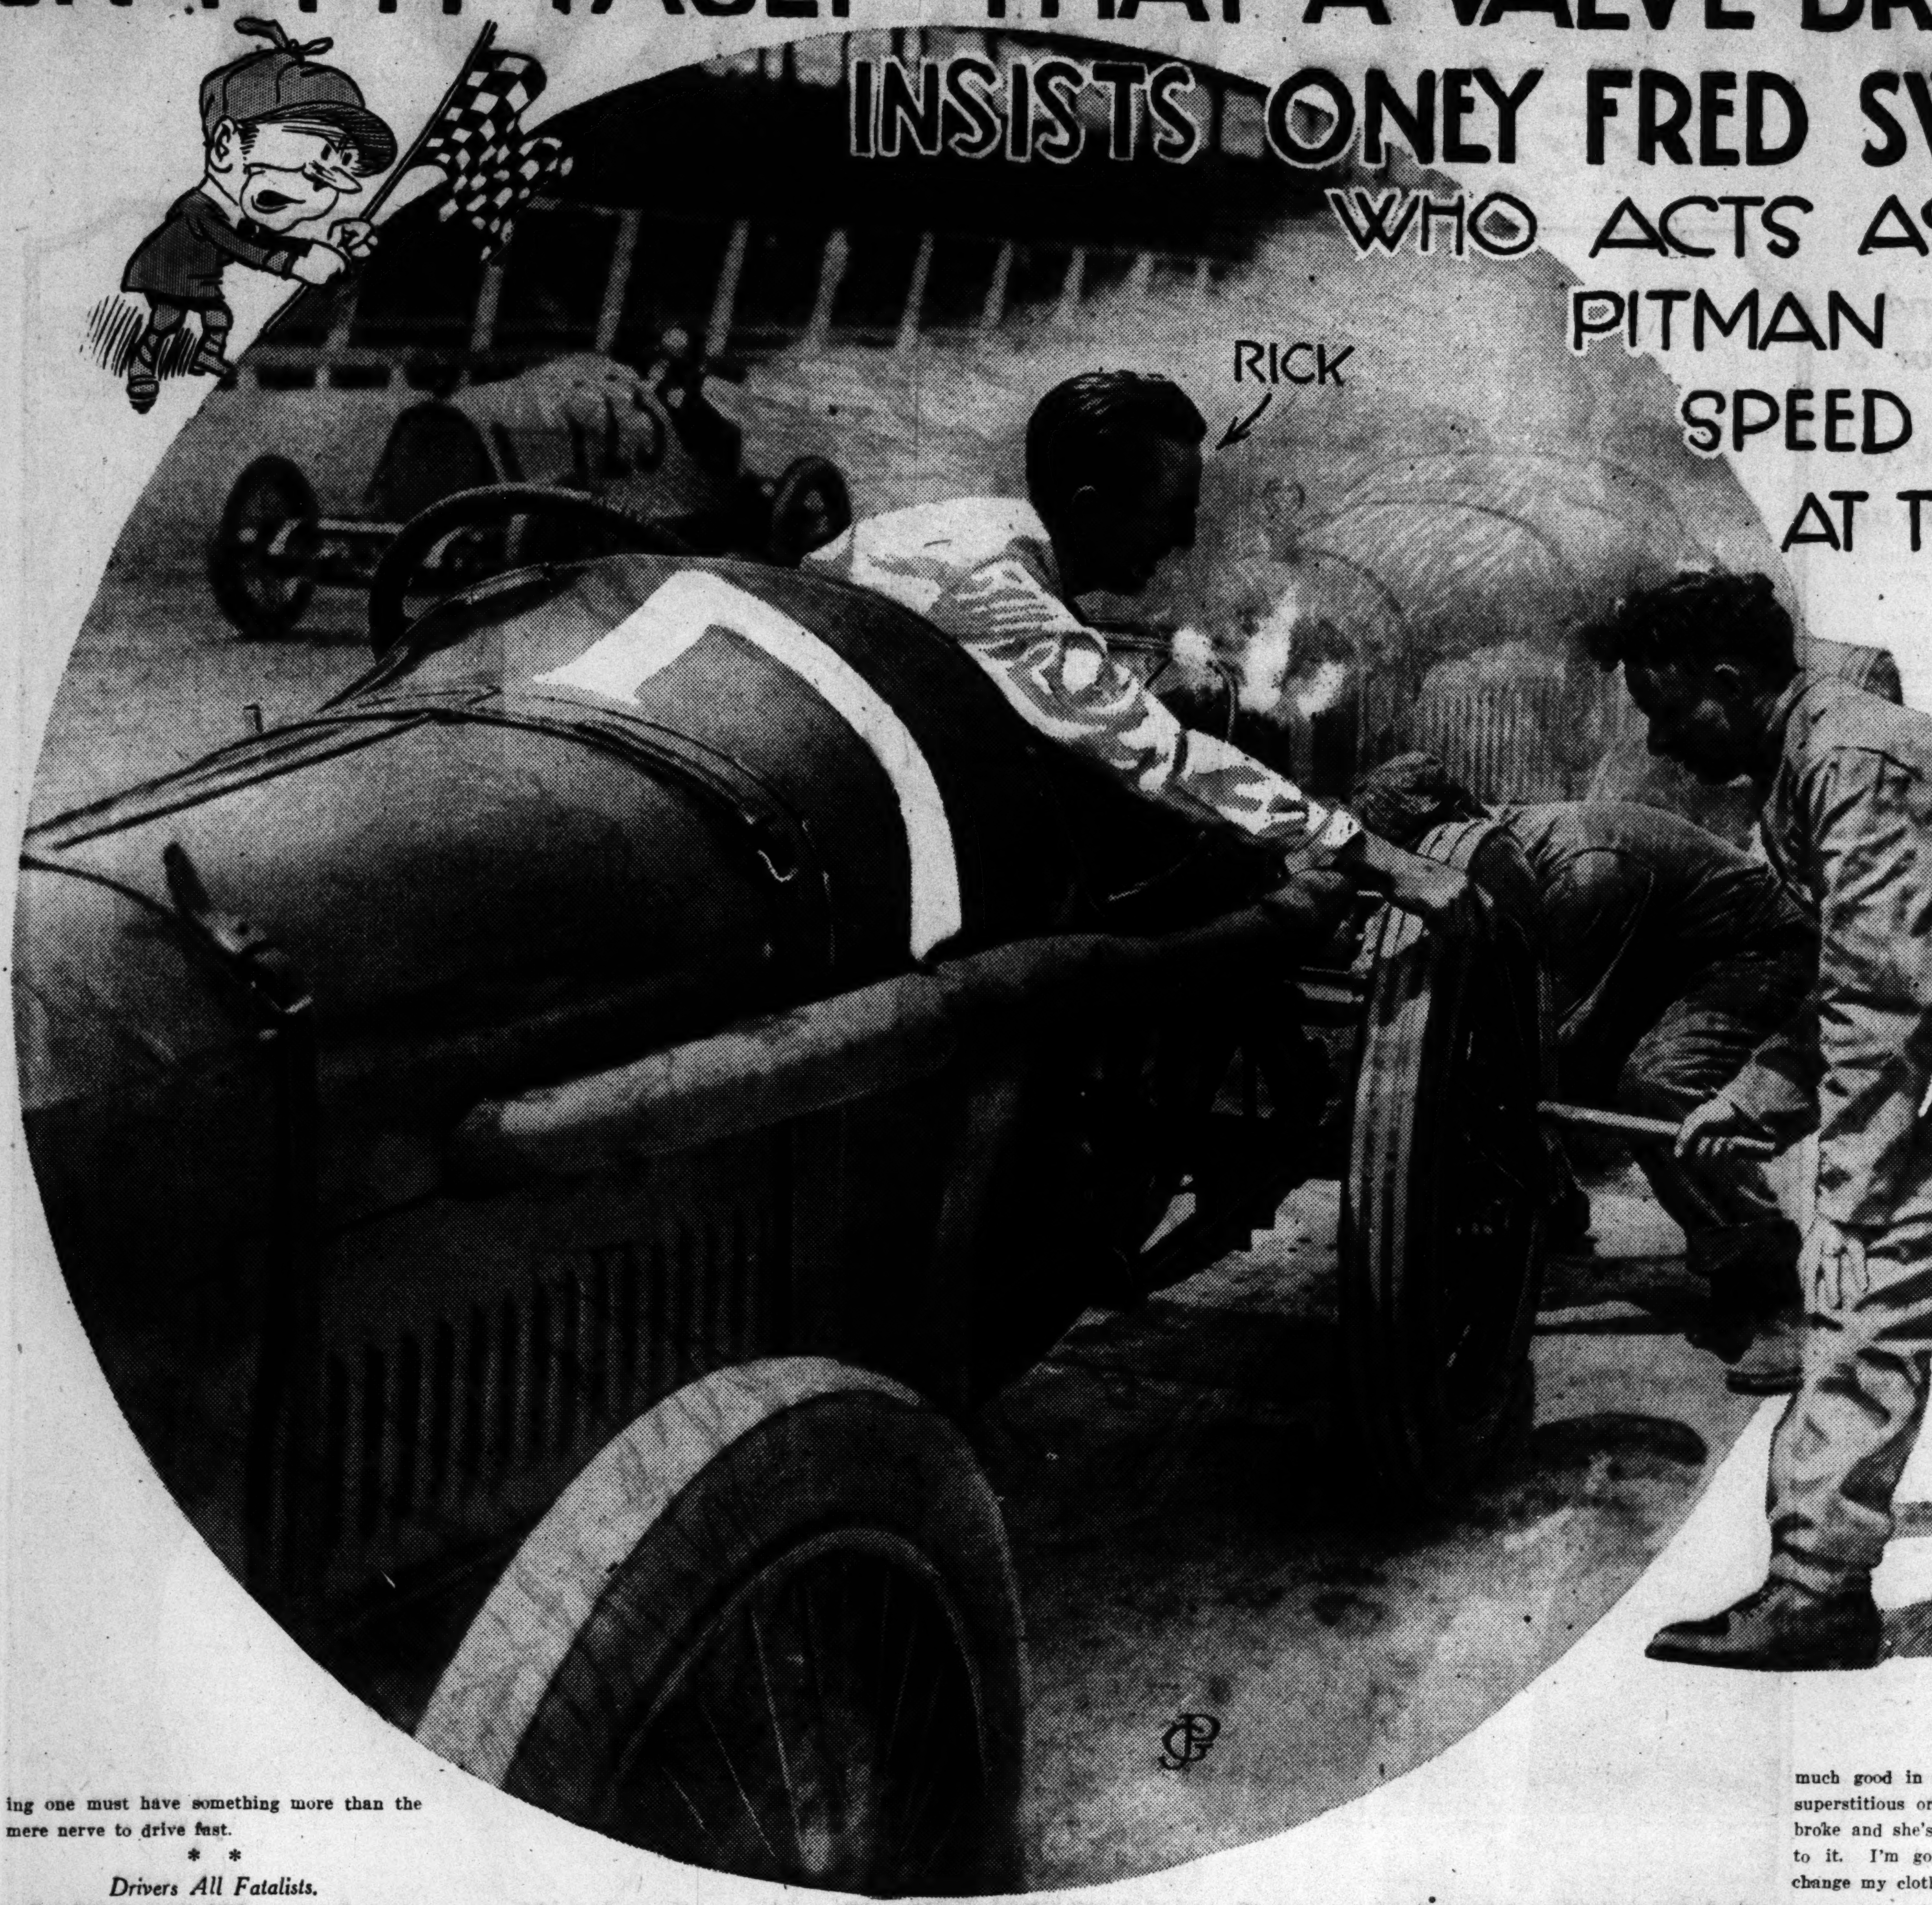
The once stately tiara, however, is no longer a leader of leaders among expensive decorations. Frequently nowadays we go to the opera with nothing more showy in the hair than a jeweled Russian bandeau. These are attractive little ornaments and a simple pattern may be had for $1,000. They have been considered quite the thing this year, particularly the more expensive designs.

Pearls are still a favored badge of wealth, newly begotten or long established. A strike in a mine, a lucky flyer in war stocks, an order for munitions, the sale of a country place, a sudden increase in salary—let any of these things happen and some member of the family is sure to buy pearls. Just now the jewelers report that the larger and more expensive the string, or the separate pearl, the quicker the sale.

There are in the old Knickerbocker families that line these river banks of ours some of the finest strings of pearls owned anywhere; pearls that are pedigreed, registered, and famous the world over. But even these, it is said by the men who deal in expensive jewelry, are rivaled in magnificence by the new strings being sought this year by those who have come suddenly into wealth and are seeking some way to be rid of it.

"IT WASN'T MY FAULT THAT A VALVE BROKE"

INSISTS ONEY FRED SWEET: WHO ACTS AS A PITMAN FOR A SPEED DEMON AT THE AUTO DERBY



FOUR abreast, accompanied by a dull roar, the twenty-one cars have crossed over the painted white line and are passing the pits. The horns of ordinary automobiles along the track's edge begin to toot: that portion of the 90,000 spectators seated in the grand stand begins to cheer. The great international auto derby is on!

Those of us in Eddie Rickenbacher's pit keep our eyes on number 7 as she goes past. Number 7 is "Rick's" car. She thunders before us in the front row, second from our end. We follow her course until, at the far side of the track, she appears like a flea climbing the limb of a tree. The cars of red and yellow and white and blue are stretched out now and their engines are emitting noise and smoke with increasing vengeance. A tenseness has come over our pit. The "kidding" has ceased. The cars are already passing us again.

"Twenty-five, twenty-three, seven!" megaphones our pit caller, announcing the order of the cars as they pass, and the two clerks beside him get busy at their long score sheets. Van Hoven, our pit manager, refuses to be bothered further with what he terms my fool questions. It was enough, he feels, that Rick should let me join the team at the last minute. First prize means $12,000!

What a morning it had been for me!—a morning spent along the row of galvanized iron garages that reminded me of a row of stables in the old horse race days. Jockeys and swipes then; drivers and mechanics now. It had been no easy matter for me to get acquainted with the bunch in Eddie Rickenbacher's garage. I really had not felt like one of them until I had donned a one piece khaki suit, turned the peak of my cap to the back of my head and smeared my face with grease. All morning we had been engaged in oiling and painting and adjusting the half dismantled car as she stood quivering with artificial life.

Rick himself had not been so distrustful of me as the rest. They had called him "Rick" as he first appeared in the garage doorway, and I had quickly taken the cue. A tall, thin youth was Rick. He was probably 27 years of age. Maybe he wasn't that old. The lines in the breeze beaten faces of these speed demons are apt to be deceiving; De Palma is gray and he is but thirty. Rick had listened to the story of the others about my persistently hanging around and I had explained to him hurriedly how I desired to work in his pit that afternoon and change tires or help take care of anything that might go wrong with his car during the race.

Rick's Book of Rules.

The leading cars have just finished their tenth lap. Rick goes by either first or second most of the time, taking turns at supremacy with Resta. Each car has its pit; each pit has its team of five men. The pits are like trenches, separated from the elevated wooden track by a concrete wall and separated from each other by a board fence.

I wonder if I will be able to do the right thing and do it quick enough when Rick pulls into the pit. I wonder if I have remembered all the rules which he has so carefully dictated for his men. I open the home made book of rules and shuffle through the pages. Knowing nothing about cars, I skip the instructions which have to do with checking up the various parts of the mechanism previous to a race. But here is the warning against losing one's temper. Here is the page that cautions against bragging or kicking, with the paragraph at the bottom advising pit men to be sure to get to bed early at night.

Near the front of the book I find these typewritten lines: "Above all, I want my men to keep cool during any pit work, regardless of trouble, and there must be harmony in the pits during a race, regardless of personal feeling." One entire page of Rick's book of instructions is given over to a general rule which orders his team to get injured drivers and mechanics to the best hospital in town in case of accident.

I realize from what I have heard during the morning that this rule about hospitals is apropos. Of the eight boys in Rick's team at the Vanderbilt races in Frisco a year ago February, five have since met tragic death on the tracks.

Rick is depending a lot on his team in the pit. He knows how much they have to do with his success. I have come to the conclusion that all these star drivers are good executives and that to succeed in racing one must have something more than the mere nerve to drive fast.

Drivers All Fatalists.

But Rick is surely driving fast. He is hitting it better than a hundred miles an hour. Half the time now he is setting the pace. Over in the grandstand the band is playing "My Mother's Rosary," the strains reaching us but faintly in the pits. The sun sizzles down upon us. I can understand better now what Rick's fast driving means, because of some of the things he told me over in the garage.

"When I'm in a race," Rick told me, "I realize that I am traveling through life in an awful hurry. You can't tell what steel will do and I'm always conscious of the fact that something may happen to dash me into eternity. We drivers are all fatalists. Once last summer when I blew a tire going at a hundred miles an hour and my car turned over three times, I stuck to the wheel until the last turn, consigning myself to the worst, yet holding fast so that if it wasn't meant to be my time to go I would be doing what was expected of me.

"You've no idea how the breeze forces a fellow's cheeks back and distorts his face when he's going good and fast. And you take this track out here; it's as smooth as a boulevard when you're going at sixty miles an hour, but when you get up to 105 it feels like a rough road beneath you. I always relax on the straightaway and put on tension at the curves. When seven cars are coming around a curve wide open and one of 'em blows a tire, the whole seven are pretty apt to pile in a heap, and when you see a driver skidding on the curves you can count on it that he's nervous.

"When I'm going fast, the steering wheel constantly jiggles in my grasp, but it wouldn't do to hold it still. With every lap a man tires just a little and his brain fags along with his body; many's the time my mechanic beside me has to kick me to keep me waked up. The position we have to take in the car is not a comfortable one, though of course I bandage myself thoroughly before a race to keep my insides from jumping and giving me acute indigestion."

Ready for Emergencies.

They have just made the twentieth lap. The crowd is growing more and more enthusiastic. The weather is ideal for a gala day. The sun is beginning to sink and the grandstand is beginning to throw long shadows across the track.

A car pulls into a neighboring pit.

It is the same car in which Bob Burman was recently killed. The faces of the driver and the mechanic in the car are black. The mechanic waves his right hand over his shoulder to indicate that it is the right rear tire that needs changing. The old tire is off and the new one is on in twenty seconds of time—a frayed, sick, worn out tire, the old one is "Go on!" yells a pit man before he has hardly removed the jack from the new wheel, and the car is off again at a terrible speed.

They speak in the pit of "changing tires," but it is really entire wheels that they change. I practice at lifting one of the wheels in our pit so as to be as handy as possible in case Rick should need it. The wheel weighs seventy pounds, but Van says that I should be so interested in helping get it over the concrete wall when occasion arises that it would seem no heavier than a feather. We have over fifty wheels in reserve, and along the top of the concrete wall Van has laid out all sorts of tools to be used in emergency.

"Keep Rick behind Ralph; let Resta go," yells Van, and he commands me to draw the number "12" with a ring around it on the pit blackboard. Van is making use of me in the signal work. I have already familiarized myself with part of the secret code. The number "12" with a ring around it means "You are going at 1:12." A zigzag lines means "Something is dragging under your car; if you don't know what it is, find out immediately." We have twenty-five signals in all, but they can be combined to form at least a hundred different messages.

Though traveling like a rocket, Rick catches the signals and answers them with certain nods of his head.

Rick a Cheerful Loser.

Laps follow each other so fast that it does not seem possible the two mile track can be circled so quickly. Yet there are three hundred miles to go before the race is done—enough distance to carry the drivers across many states were they traveling in a straight line. Fifty times the cars have passed us like bullets out of a gun.

"She don't sound right," I hear Van comment. He is referring to Rick's car. Those in the pits have their ears primed for any message the car may give as she whirls by. "I thought we had all the 'bugs' out of her," says Van, "but if I'm not mistaken there's a 'cuckoo' showing up. You never can tell when a car's going to 'turn to cheese.'"

Yet Rick stays in the lead with Resta. It looks to me as if Rick would win the race and the $12,000 purse. I begin to wonder if he is ever going to be obliged to pull up to the pit. I want to do the right thing when he does pull up. I fight with my nerves to keep cool for the occasion.

At the close of the sixty-first lap Rick does pull in. I leap over the wall of the pit with the rest. Rick climbs out of the car and removes his helmet and goggles. There are deep red lines on his smeared face where the goggles and helmet have pinched. I begin to jump around like a jack rabbit in an effort to do something to help. I do not realize that Rick's chances for winning any part of the $30,000 purse have gone glimmering. He turns toward me, laughing.

"I guess maybe I didn't make Resta hurry," he jokes, slapping his knees with his hands and doubling over like a mischievous boy.

Even at this demonstration I have no other thought but that he will soon return to the race. I continue to jump around the car with a wrench in my hand.

"The valve's broken," explains Rick, still smiling. "I knew at fifty miles that she was gone, but I stuck on to make things as merry as possible. Looks to me as if it was going to be a nice day if it don't rain."

"If you'll show me where that valve is," I offer, "I'll——"

Rick grabs the wrench out of my hand and lays it among the other tools along the top of the concrete wall.

"Do you mean you're out of it for good?" I gasp. "Well, you certainly take it cool."

"I hope I do," answers the youth from Columbus, Ohio. "If I didn't I wouldn't be much good in this game. I trust I'm not superstitious or temperamental. The valve's broke and she's broke and that's all there is to it. I'm going over to the garage and change my clothes."

Thrill at the Finish.

The tenseness in our pit evaporates with the elimination of our driver. The strained looks of the mechanicians and the megaphone caller and the signal man and the clerks fade, and they begin to kid each other again. We remain in the pit, however, until the last lap has been finished, and Resta, worried by Rick's tactics until he was out of the contest, has driven across the white line—winner.

It is when the race is really finished and the crowd is maneuvering to leave the park that I see Van leap to the top of the concrete wall, intent upon something that has happened at the far end of the track.

"Calvin's blown a tire on the turn," Van exclaims. "He's just finished in sixth place and hasn't slowed down yet. Look, his car's on her feet again after turning over! See, she's running empty up the track and now she's settling down. I thought we were going to get through without anybody being killed."

The crowd that has been headed toward the gates scents an added thrill, and shifts its direction toward the scene of excitement. A couple of ambulances clang past the pits. Over the pits there falls a pall.

And then—the lapse of time is really but a few minutes—a racing car draws up along in front of us and in it are the driver and his mate, who have been spilled. The grimed faces of the pair are deathly pale, but they wave toward us fellows in the pit as, unhurt, they are driven past to their own quarters.

And the fellows beside me in the pits—the fellows beside me in the pits clap their hands in a chorus of glee.

A LITTLE BROTHER OF PIPPA

By BERTON BRALEY

Poetry, Love, and Wealth Clash for a While, Then Combine in a Way Too Good to Be True.

Here's a song for you, my dear,
Something simple, sweet, and clear.
Not a trill or frill to mar
Notes as plain as bird notes are.

THE voice—young, vigorous, full toned, but with a winsome boyishness in it, came gayly through the foliage veiling the winding path to the house. Nell smiled, a bit wistfully, as she heard it, and laid down her book. But she didn't uncurl from her position on the wide porch divan. Nobody ever put on company manners for the Poet, but everybody's face lighted when he came, and Nell's eyes sparkled a welcome as he swung around the last turn of the path and took the veranda steps at a bound.

Lady most beautiful,
Tender and dutiful,
How I would—Ah, but you—lovely and——

"Confound those triple rhymes, anyhow, all I can think of is tutti-frutti-ful and I'm sure you haven't been eating gum or ice cream just this particular minute or hour, have you?" The Poet curled himself up in another corner of the divan and gazed inquiringly at Nell.

"No, I haven't," she replied, "but you may consider that I have if it helps the rhyme scheme at all. I would not willfully obstruct the muse."

"'Tis naught—a mere trifle—a bit of fluff floating in the air—a vagrant fancy well forgot, that song. But why should I make melodies and lyrics when you are here for my gladness and delight. You are a song—a blithe, sweet song of youth and joy and loveliness—why should I sing?

"But then again, why should I not sing. When I am with you I scale the heights of joy—I am beatified, content. Indeed, I am rich, rich in impalpable possessions, in my capacity for felicity, in my fortune of being where you are. And when a man is rich and happy, he sings, or at least I sing, being rich—however poor I may chance to be in gold and gear. Lady, dear, your hair is a chanson, your lips a lyric, your eyes are songs of spring."

Here's a song where love and dove
Rhyme with sunny skies above—
Where the words just trip along
To the measure of the song.

"Poet," said Nell, "don't be absurd! It's not good for my disposition or my character for you to flatter me so. I shall grow conceited and egotistic and nobody will love me. Besides, I'm not a song, and I'm not blithe or sweet, I'm just a hard, sophisticated, worldly woman who's going to—to—well, that's all I am."

But the Poet was not listening, or seemed not to be. He was singing again, softly, and Nell caught the words.

Notes as plain as bird notes are,
When from sylvan throats set free
In a woodland melody,
All to tell you, straight and true,
How I can't help loving you.

"Beautiful lady," he said, but without the little whimsical smile which usually accompanied the phrase, "whatever you may think of yourself, or whatever you may believe you are going to do, you are not hard, or selfish, or anything but the woman I know you to be.

"Why, lady, dear, it is you who bring me peace and delight so that each night I go from you singing and wake up at day with a laugh and a lyric on my lips. Whatever songs I have sung, have been to you—always, though you had never met my eyes until a week ago. You are the dreams I have dreamed, the brave romances I have read, the magic I have longed to see; you are spring and life resurgent, and you are youth, deathless youth, and unquenchable joy—and you are sunshine, and blue sky, and the breath of fresh flowering fields, and—Nell, I need you, I want you, I love you!" He leaped to his feet, bent over and kissed her. For an instant her lips lingered on his, then she drew away, gasping.

"No, no! You mustn't. I can't. I don't love you."

The Poet looked steadfastly at her.

"Raise your eyes," he said quietly. She hesitated, swallowed, then lifted her eyes to his.

"It is not true, beautiful lady—you do love me. And I love you, truly and dearly. Will you be my wife?"

"I can't," said Nell, "I tell you I can't. I'm bound to another man—but that isn't so much; for such a pledge may be recalled, but I'm bound, Poet, to Things. O, I want you to know what a beast I am—I've been all my life a bond slave of luxury and soft living. Once, I remember, something went wrong with father's business and we had to economize and lived on little—and, O, I hated it so! The petty savings, and the skimping on clothes, and the riding in street cars, and giving up dances and theaters—I made up my mind I never could bear such a life.

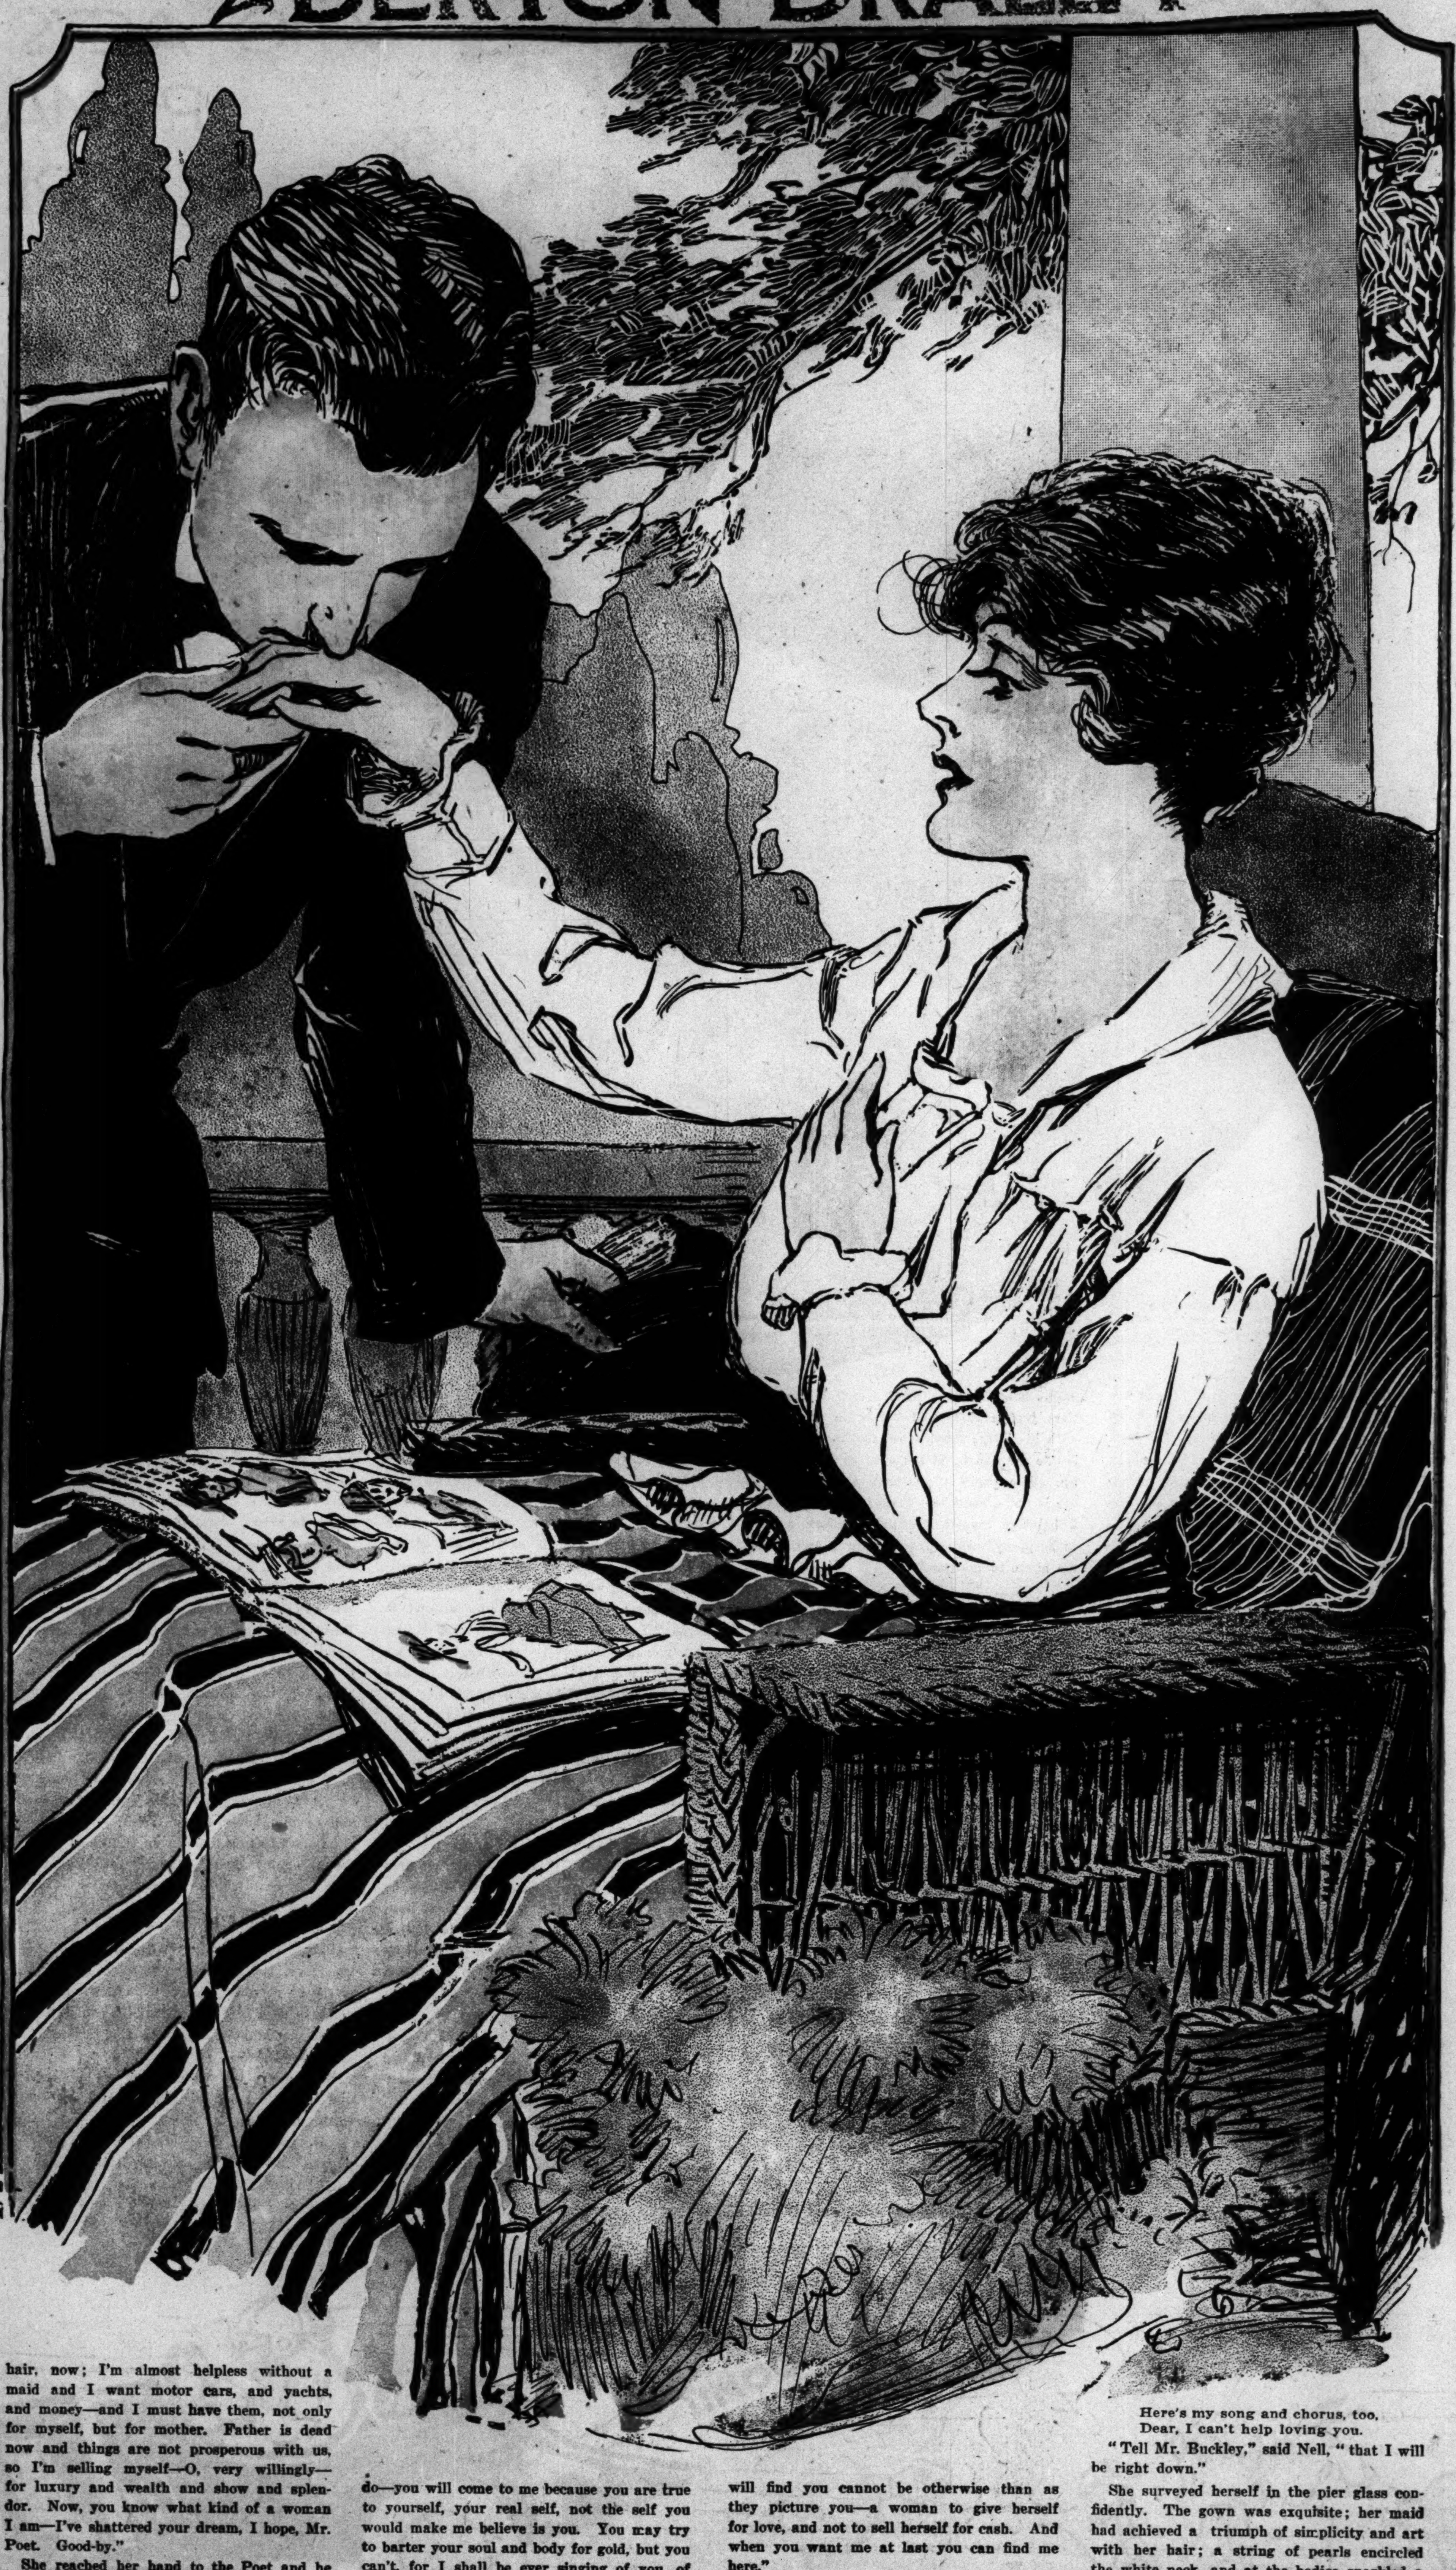
"Why, Poet dear, I'd drive you mad. To you poverty is an adventure lightly borne and not of consequence. You live in a world of fancy and so long as there is enough for food and shelter and clothes life is well with you. But I wouldn't be content with those things. My dear, I can't even do my own hair, now; I'm almost helpless without a maid and I want motor cars, and yachts, and money—and I must have them, not only for myself, but for mother. Father is dead now and things are not prosperous with us, so I'm selling myself—O, very willingly—for luxury and wealth and show and splendor. Now, you know what kind of a woman I am—I've shattered your dream, I hope, Mr. Poet. Good-by."

She reached her hand to the Poet and he took it in both of his.

"Beautiful lady," he said gently, "my dream is still my dream and it will come true. If you love me—and your eyes tell me you do—you will come to me because you are true to yourself, your real self, not the self you would make me believe is you. You may try to barter your soul and body for gold, but you can't, for I shall be ever singing of you, of how you are fair and lovely and tender and true, and my ballads shall so beset you and my songs shall so surround you that, though you do not hear them in words or music, you will find you cannot be otherwise than as they picture you—a woman to give herself for love, and not to sell herself for cash. And when you want me at last you can find me here."

He bent and kissed her hand, then sauntered down the path singing:

Little skill have I to please
Ears that long for rhapsodies



Here's my song and chorus, too,
Dear, I can't help loving you.

"Tell Mr. Buckley," said Nell, "that I will be right down."

She surveyed herself in the pier glass confidently. The gown was exquisite; her maid had achieved a triumph of simplicity and art with her hair; a string of pearls encircled the white neck, and at the bodice sparkled a cluster of diamonds and pearls.

"It was very wise of me to come back to the city when I did," she mused, smiling at the girl in the glass; "the country air had threatened to make me romantic. He was a nice boy, the Poet, but"—she glanced about at the luxurious chamber—"these are the things which make life worth while and love will not buy them." She held up the ring on her left hand and flashed it in the light of the electrolier. "The first payment on account," she mused cynically; patted her hair, and humming gayly, put her hand upon the knob of her door, preparatory to going down.

She hesitated an instant, pondering. The air she had been humming brought back something to her. What was it? Ah, now it was fitting words to itself.

All to tell you, sweet and true,
How I can't help loving you.

A slow flush spread over her shoulders and her face. She had been humming his song—his song on her way down to meet the man who had bought her—for the price of the Things she desired above love or truth. She blinked doubtfully, turned slowly, and went back to her dressing table. Two big tears rolled down her cheeks. She caught them with her handkerchief and powdered their path lightly.

"Coward," she whispered to herself, fiercely, "sentimental little fool. Can't you go to the market without crying about it? You wanted your price and you've got it—don't quarrel with your own bargain."

It was as if the Poet's arms had stretched out for her and his eyes had looked again into hers, trusting, believing, hoping. She choked, sobbed, flung across the room to the couch and lay there, weeping brokenly. Presently the maid appeared.

"Mr. Buckley says, Miss Nell, that if you want to hear the first part of the opera you will have to hurry a little. He says, he knows you hate being late and——"

Nell sat up suddenly, tore the ring off her finger, and thrust it at the maid. "Here," she said, "take it back to him and tell him—no, of course, that won't do; tell him I've got a dreadful sick headache, or that I just fell and broke my leg, or something like that, and that if he'll excuse me I'll write him in the morning. And you wrap up this ring and put it in a box and remind me to write and send it back to him in the morning—no, I'll do it now. And as soon as you get back from telling him I can't go tonight, you pack my simplest tailor made suit and a few other things in a suitcase and take these"—she threw the necklace and the brooch on the dressing table—"back to the jeweler and tell him to credit 'em to our account, and then you tell mother I've gone out of town and that maybe I won't ever come back, and that she'll have to learn to economize, because I won't marry Buckley, and—O, I'm crazy, I guess. Hurry now, send Mr. Buckley away and come back and pack my things. No, don't come back, I'll pack 'em myself. I might as well get used to it.

You're the old love and the new,
Dear, I can't help loving you.

. . . .

And so," said Nell, "I could just see you—and I heard you singing that song somehow, and your eyes were so faithful and your arms were so empty that I—well, I just came, that's all. And the funny part of it is that I thought I couldn't bear the idea of poverty and doing without things, and all that—but I guess that was because I'd never had anybody who really took the place of Things. You're all the luxury and splendor I want, dear."

She kissed him.

"Beautiful lady," said the Poet gravely, "are you quite sure you aren't regretful or sorry about anything? Are you quite certain you won't blame me for poverty, or question, sometime, the wisdom of losing so much for love?"

"I don't say," Nell demurred, "that I won't miss having Things, and that I won't wish now and then that I could have a perfectly splendiferous time buying clothes and spending money, but I am sure that I won't care much when I think that I've got you, and I know that I'll be glad all my life that I heard your song."

"Of course you heard it, lady fair and most beautiful," said the Poet, "for I sang it to you day and night. I never let my thought leave you for long. I beset you with ballads and surrounded you with song as I promised, and if you did not hear them all, at least you heard the one that brought you here. So that it is well. And I'm glad you are quite certain there will be no regret and no doubt, because—Nell, darling, did you ever really know my name?"

"Why, why," stammered the girl, "why, no. I never did. You were just the Poet to me ever since the night Harry introduced us. What is your name?"

The poet laughed, heartily.

"And I've lived next door—or almost next door to you for years," he said, in matter of fact tones. "Permit me—my card."

With a flourish he presented the bit of cardboard, and Nell read:

"Mr. Curtis William Valentine."

She gasped. "Why," she exclaimed, "you're not poor, you're rich. You're—you're awfully rich. And you deceived me so. I was in love with a poet, and now you're only a rich man."

"Beautiful lady," said the Poet, with an indignant air, "I am mainly a poet, and only incidentally a rich man. If you will, we may leave the dross gold to charity and live in a cottage in the woods, a frugal pair."

Nell met his boyish grin with one as genuine and then kissed him rapturously.

"I think a Newport cottage would suit me fully as well," she said.

Herewith is presented the twenty-second installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter Nellie, engaged to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, engaged to Agnes Ware. The elder Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of impending danger to the United States. Out of a clear sky a league of former European enemies gives cause of war by sinking an American scout cruiser and proceeds against unprepared United States. In a naval engagement, Bob's ship, the Arizona, is sunk and Bob narrowly escapes death. Jim, despite the break it causes with Agnes, enlists and goes to New York, where he helps in a gallant but vain effort to resist the invaders. Beatrice Logan, a beautiful girl, finds him half dead, puts him on a raft which the tide takes up the river.

Mart Ware, Agnes' brother, changes his commanding officer's report, thinking the latter's estimate of the enemy's numbers is false. The United States army meets the enemy's invaders pushing westward and a terrific battle occurs. Jim entering a farmhouse slays three of the regent's officers who have locked up four girls in a room. The girls had turned on the gas to escape their libidinous captors. Jim rescues the girls and revives them; one of them is Beatrice Logan.

MART.

A LITTLE later he led his men downstairs. "We are going to leave here as soon as we can. I think two of those girls will be able to sit in a saddle, with some watching; we can carry the others, and that baby, on saddles with us; so we will ride eight horses and lead two more. We will burn this house when we leave. Carry in those men who were killed outside; the snow will cover all tracks and blood marks. If we burn the house no one can tell exactly what happened here; they may think it possible that the house caught fire and their men were killed sleeping."

Thus within the hour Jim led his party away on horseback through the storm. The horses were strong and in good condition; so, in spite of the storm, they rode almost twenty miles and escaped; and so the regent's men took vengeance on others. Jim heard of that vengeance the next day and the next night as he rode again toward the American lines.

His part of the battle line, he swore to himself over and over again now, was going to hold the next time or he and his men were to die in their places. He was going to shoot his men if they faltered; far, far better to shoot men failing in the battle line than to abandon more women and children to the invader.

Ten days later he kept his oath.

He was captain of a company now—a company now formed from refugees of his old battalion and individuals from other Illinois regiments which no longer existed. Along with the infantrymen of his company there were men who, when they had had horses, had been cavalrymen. Mart Ware was among them. The company was quite nondescript, but all had been under fire before, so they were stationed at a vital point in the first line trenches above Cayuga lake.

The lake was miles longer than previously, all the valley on the north being flooded; Jim's section of front was just beyond the flood; there were two more trenches behind him—three little lines of ditches each with a man every yard or so, just those three little lines between invasion, as Jim had seen during these recent days, and security and sanctity for honor, life, and possessions. Behind those three lines was Beatrice Logan and the three rescued with her; behind those lines, probably, was Agnes—where, Jim could not guess—behind them was Nellie and his mother and Mart's mother and the sweethearts and sisters and mothers of the other men in that company. Jim talked to them all frankly before the battle began. Every man was to stand and fight as long as he had strength; if the order came to leave the trenches and advance the company was going to advance or the officers would shoot the men who failed.

During all the forenoon, for five hours following the dawn, that section of trench was shelled; there was nothing within rifle shot of the men there; there was nothing at all to do but to flatten against the side of the trench, to burrow into holes and be buried, perhaps, instead of being blown to bits; but the men in that trench were told to stay. A few of the men went mad that morning—two from head wounds which made them maniacs for the inhuman hour before they died; the others splattered no blood about, but they some way were more terrible in their madness, unwounded.

Then, during a snow flurry in the afternoon, the shrapnel ceased and the assault came—the charge of thousands of yelling, white coated figures—and the American guns could not even make a gap in their line. It was all up to the men in the first line trenches; they were ordered, after they had emptied their rifles uselessly into that charging line of thousands, to jump up in front of the trench and face them with bayonets when there was no possibility of their stopping that line. And the officers knew it; they weren't making good on their bluff to shoot men who wouldn't jump up to be murdered; only Jim Ashby, the captain of a company, kept his word. Wild, frantic as the madmen, he struck at the men who crouched and wouldn't get up; he dropped one, shot another, and the men beyond that one jumped out of his way and fought. Another balked and defied the captain; Jim screamed at him, struck him, and shut his eyes as his revolver went off at the blow.

He leaped up in front of the trench, then, seizing a rifle which some one had dropped, he straightened and offered the bayonet when a bayonet flashed before him; the opposing bayonet entered his body and bore him back and he fell and tumbled into the trench upon the body of the soldier of his command whom he had just shot.

More bodies piled above him; then the battle was far beyond. Jim Ashby, captain of volunteers, moved his head and, after a struggle, was able to touch with his lips the brow of the boy he had shot. The bullet had gone through his head and death had been instant.

"Mart!" Capt. Ashby whispered. "Mart!"

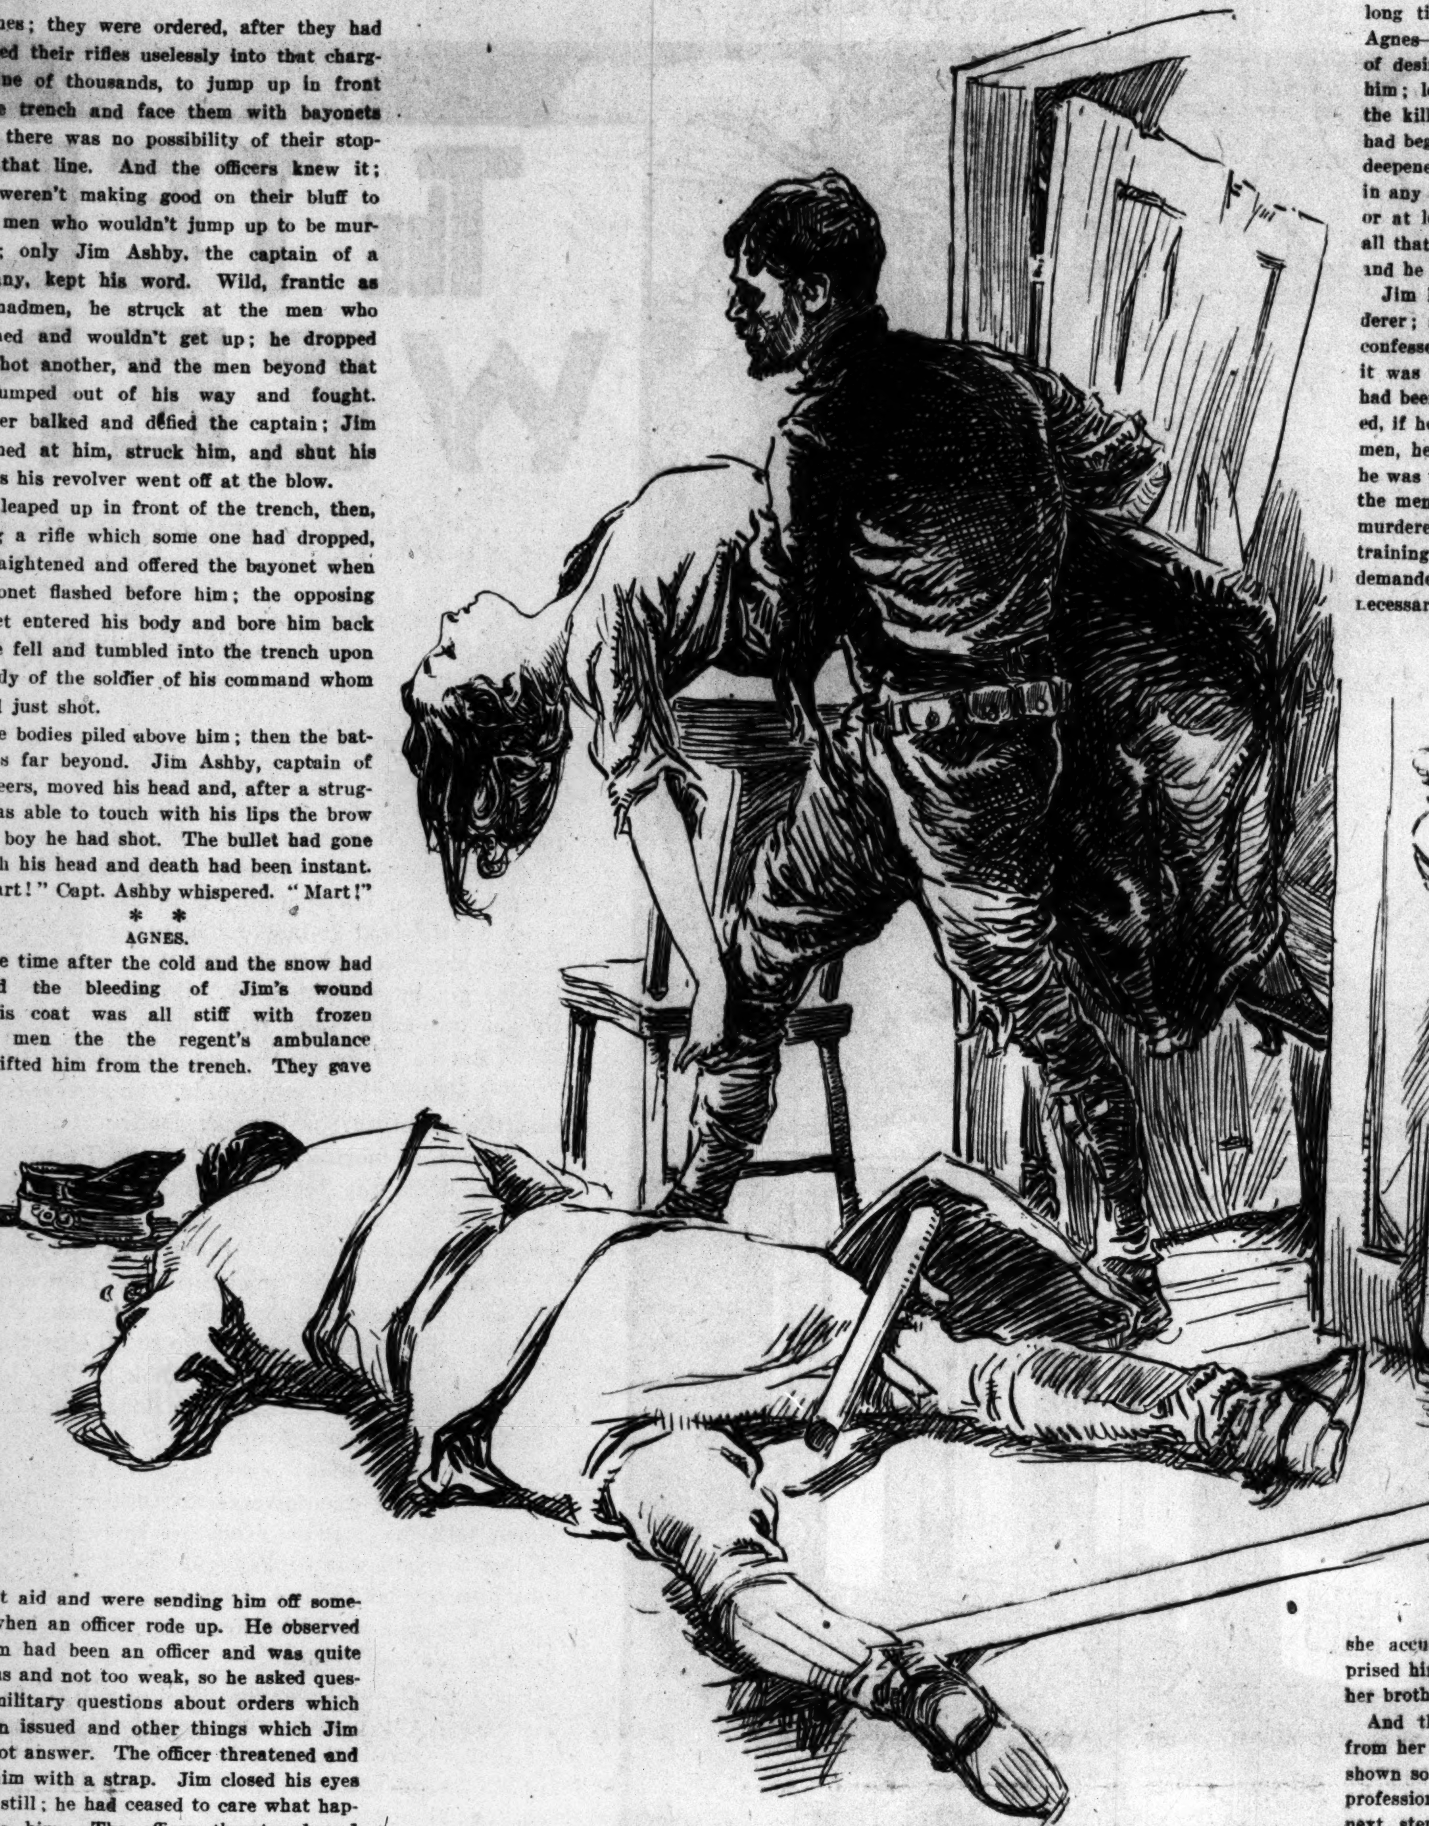
AGNES.

Some time after the cold and the snow had stopped the bleeding of Jim's wound and his coat was all stiff with frozen blood, men the the regent's ambulance corps lifted him from the trench. They gave him first aid and were sending him off somewhere when an officer rode up. He observed that Jim had been an officer and was quite conscious and not too weak, so he asked questions—military questions about orders which had been issued and other things which Jim would not answer. The officer threatened and lashed him with a strap. Jim closed his eyes and lay still; he had ceased to care what happened to him. The officer threatened and blustered; then another American prisoner was brought up who was not so weak and not so stubborn. Stretcher bearers picked up Jim again and carried him to an ambulance in which, between wounded men of both armies, he was brought to a church at Auburn, where rows of cots replaced the pews and nurses were moving about.



-he carried her out of the gas filled room-

The wounded in that hospital were nearly all Americans, and as the hospital was filled with men found on one part of the battlefield, they were mostly men from Illinois. The doctors and women who cared for them either came from the conquered country round about or were volunteers from other sections who had come to the hospitals there when the city was still within the American lines. Jim turned his eyes in dread toward each slender, white clothed girl who approached. Agnes, if she had come east, undoubtedly would have come with a detail of nurses for such hospitals as this; she naturally would seek the stations where the Illinois men were taken.

The bayonet, Jim was told, had broken two of his ribs and shattered his collarbone; it had left a great hole through his shoulder; but the steel had missed his lungs. After he was brought back to his cot from the operating room, where they had given him an anæsthetic while they "fixed him up," a surgeon waited to assure him that, with good luck and if no infection developed, he could recover. Jim stared past the doctor toward the door where the nurses and visitors to the hospital entered.

It was the twelfth day later when, as he lay on his side staring at the door, he cringed back under his bedcovers and shut his eyes. That girl who had just come in was not merely one who was like Agnes, she was Agnes. That was Agnes' way of looking about quickly; that was Agnes' way of halting, indecisive, and then forcing herself on; that was—O, beyond any doubt she was Agnes!

Jim's cot then was the twenty-second from the door in the row to the right. Agnes glanced once all along the row; but it was long and many of the men were bandaged so as to be almost unrecognizable. Agnes was approaching slowly now, gazing at every cot in her search for—Mart.

She bent over every cot. They were putting a screen about one of the beds—the screen brought to shield a dying boy from the eyes of others and to give him his last moments alone with a priest. Agnes halted beside this screen and asked the nurse a question; then she came on.

"Jim!"

He had put back the bedcovers from his face, so she saw him from a few feet away. Her cry was scarcely more than a whisper, now she was beside his bed.

"Jim!" she cried again, but her eyes, instead of staying upon him, glanced now down the line of cots beyond. "Jim! Mart—is he here, too?"

Her hand had seized Jim's; hers was cold even to his, and she clasped his fingers tight. Her eyes gazed into Jim's now and her face, pale before, became more white.

"Jim!" she repeated again.

He had tried to speak before, but he could not; he wet his lips and tried once more. "Agnes, Agnes," was all he could say.

"What is it? Mart, Jim? You know something of Mart?"

She stared again toward the other cots; further on another screen was about a bed; it had been there for some time. The man or the boy behind it was a long time dying.

"Mart isn't there, Agnes," Jim succeeded at last. "He—he isn't here at all."

"Then—then what——"

She stopped. That Jim knew something of her brother she now was certain; his manner had told that to her; he could not deny it now if he would. He knew, and he must tell her.

"Mart—Mart's dead, Agnes."

"Dead!"

"Yes." The fingers clasping his let go; Agnes' eyes closed; she caught the side of the cot to steady herself. "Dead!" That was not all, she knew now; there was something else. She recovered after a moment.

"When?"

"You know that?"

"Yes, I know."

"How?"

"I saw him."

"You mean he—was with you?"

"Yes; he was with me, Agnes; he was in my company there."

"So—so you saw him before—he was killed?"

"Yes."

"And—afterwards?"

"Yes."

The horror of remembrance was in his eyes; he shut them and tried to hide his vision from her; but she seized him.

"You mean—he was—he suffered before he died as—as——"

Jim opened his eyes again. "No, Agnes, he did not suffer. He was—was——"

"What?"

"Killed instantly."

"Instantly?"

"Yes; I—I shot him."

"You!"

He told her all; he had to tell her, but she did not understand for many minutes. His words meant to her, at first, that he must have killed her brother by accident; then, it was because Mart had been terribly wounded and in agony, so Jim had ended his pain; next, she began to understand.

When the nurses had taken her away a doctor gave Jim morphia to make him sleep.

While he remained in that hospital Agnes did not appear again. His recovery, as the American surgeon had assured, promised to be complete; accordingly, during the next week he was separated from those certified by the regent's surgeon as "disabled and unable again to bear arms." These were discharged from the military hospital to the care of relatives, friends, or strangers who would shelter and feed insane or maimed men. Jim was sent from the hospital with the other convalescents who, still having mind, sight, and arms and legs, might rejoin the American forces; accordingly they were escorted to a great stockade surrounded by barbed wire barriers charged with electricity and commanded by machine guns. There, given a blanket, a bunk in a long board shack, a tin plate and cup and spoon and a number to distinguish him, military prisoner 142694—recently James Ashby, assistant superintendent of the Ashby Brass works, Elgin, Ill., and more lately captain of American volunteers—continued his convalescence.

"THE SABINE WOMEN."

There were something over two thousand soldiers in that stockade, and within another just like it a few miles away were about four hundred civil prisoners; these men had not been soldiers, but they were of military age. They came mostly from the farms and towns in the immediate vicinity of the stockade.

When there was work which the regent's military authorities wished done, these men were led out, like felons or like slaves, to perform the task under the watch of soldiers; the military prisoners were forced to work in the same way, but they at least were honored with a stronger guard. The only young men outside those stockades were the American maimed and helpless and the soldiers of the regent.

It was not strange, therefore, that stories began to circulate about American girls who, of their own choice, went to the conquerors. No one understood it better than the American men themselves—those herded like slaves within the stockade. They had failed completely to protect their women; they had failed so miserably that many of the girls, at least, must see them only as cowards and inferiors in comparison with the conquerors; their instinct of admiration toward the conquerors, their contempt and distrust of the conquered, was not only as old as the Sabine women, it was as old as sex itself. What was human nature at the fall of Troy, and at the founding of Rome, and in Britain seventeen centuries after, and in Poland and Belgium a millennium after that was still human nature two years later in America.

One of these stories, circulated among the prisoners in Jim's stockade, concerned a girl from the west who, from her description, most certainly was Agnes; the report was that she had become or was to become the wife of one of the enemy's captains.

Military prisoner 142694 lay awake for a long time that night. It was not love for Agnes—that is, it was not love in the sense of desire of her for himself—which agonized him; love for her had altered in him after the killing of Mart—and perhaps the change had begun before—to solicitude; now that had deepened to responsibility for her and to guilt in any fate which befell her. They had loved, or at least they had stood to each other for all that love and loyalty had meant to them—and he had murdered her brother.

Jim knew that she considered him a murderer; she had called him that after he had confessed what he had done. And in a sense it was true; he had murdered Mart. If he had been really an officer whom the men trusted, if he had learned in other ways control of men, he would not have had to kill; because he was weak, incompetent, he had had to drive the men the only way he knew; yes, he had murdered Mart. But it was from lack of training in the professsion which Agnes had demanded that he abhor; and when it became necessary for him to practice that profession she accused him because the necessity surprised him unskilled, and so he had murdered her brother.

And that result revolted Agnes not only from her former lover but from all the others shown so cowardly, weak, and helpless in this profession which she had cried against; the next step in that revolt obviously was to turn from the weaklings to the strong.

No; Jim did not try to convince himself that the girl, of whom the prisoners were talking that day, could not be Agnes. If they had said that Beatrice Logan had gone over to the conquerors he would have had no basis of believing; he would have refused the thought; it could not be so.

He did not realize till later what that comparison meant to him. Beatrice! Dared he think again of her! Of course it was not chance—that is, it was not all chance—that he had found her after they had become separated back along the Hudson. He admitted now that during the flight after the fight on Serrell's hill he had chosen the road toward Utica because of her. But he had meant merely to go to her uncle's house, which she had described to him that first night on the river, and find if anything was known of her, if she was safe. He had been looking for her uncle's house that night he came to that other house in time to save her. He had told her that during their second flight together. He had brought her safe again behind the American lines and then that line in which he fought had broken again.

There were no "lines" now which were held by American forces; there were only lines beyond which the regent was not yet ready to extend the regions of occupation. The new American army was massing—so the military prisoners in the stockade heard—in Ohio now and was preparing positions south from Sandusky or Toledo to the Ohio river; but the prince was not yet pushing his conquest that far. Unless he advanced in some force, he was being harried; cavalry raids from West Virginia were confusing his communications when they became extended; but he was stopped now only because the armies already in America could occupy safely no more territory. And simultaneously the orientals, who had landed in California, had been defeating the forces sent against them; they were seizing as much of the coast as their armies could occupy; the American forces, driven inland, were holding only to "watching positions."

These circumstances—and they were true—the captors were willing that the prisoners in the stockades should know. But they spread no knowledge of the cumulative effect upon the invading armies of the tactics which the American armies invariably had practiced in retreat—the burning or destroying of all stores and supplies of every sort which could not be removed by the Americans and which possibly might aid the invader. These tactics were delaying the conqueror, who had planned to live off the country, by making him use his ships to transport food and supplies and arms and ammunition for the regiments already in America and preventing him from bringing reinforcements as fast as expected.

The situation in the occupied territory was made more terrible, of course, for the Americans as well as more difficult for the soldiers of the regent; but as supplies were always seized for the use of the military forces of the invader first, the general staff of the American army saw to it that absolute embargo remained against movement of supplies to the coast from the granaries of the central states. And throughout those states, young men by the million were in training—all the young men who were physically fit—and they and the nation working with them were beginning to understand the way to victory and to set their feet upon its paths.

"We are fighting," said Stone, the chief of staff, "as Washington fought. He lost New York and Philadelphia and Charleston, but he kept an army in the field and so at last he won. This we will do if every city in the nation must be desolated. Every day we are growing stronger and better prepared; every day the enemy extends his lines to seize more ravaged regions; he is growing weaker."

THE AIR RAID.

The regent's generals realized that winter, firmly established, added to the difficulties of their campaign. Chicago, Gary, St. Louis, Minneapolis, and St. Paul, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, and Denver had become monstrous munition centers; satellite cities, almost unknown before, grew into great factory districts for the supply of the millions of Americans in training. The regent could not safely push cavalry raids to these places yet, so he attacked the nearest of them by air.

Almost daily a flotilla of his planes or a squadron of his dirigibles flew over one or another of the cities in the Mississippi valley. Thus Elgin again and again was attacked.

The little city was thrice its former size, some guessed; others said five times; no one knew. Factories were going up in the fields all about, and the old buildings and those just completed were humming day and night with war industry. The Ashby Brass works had become the Elgin ammunition works; besides the former buildings there was a great brick and glass structure stretching for more than half the distance from town to the old Ashby home.

It was this building, fitted with the rifle machinery brought from Springfield, Mass., at which the regent's dirigibles were directing their attack on a cold, clear winter night in January.

It was near midnight, and Nellie Wendell was in bed in Bob's room at her father's house; she still called the room Bob's, and all his little personal possessions were kept where he had left them. The window was open, and Nellie lay awake, gazing out at the stars. Now and then the broad yellow beam of a searchlight swept slowly around the horizon and slanted up into the sky; then, suddenly, the beam steadied; another searchlight glazed out and paralleled it, and Nellie heard the "boom" of a gun on the ground, now the burst of a shell high over head. Other anti-aircraft guns opened. Nellie pulled the blankets from her bed and, wrapping them around her, went to the window to see better.

The door from the hall opened and her mother came in. "Nellie, child!"

"It's another raid, mother; dirigibles, this time, not the planes. Come here and you can see one of them; the searchlights are on it. It's coming this way."

"Nellie, you must go back to bed at once; nothing must disturb you now. Child, don't you know you must be quiet?"

"Quiet, mother? O! O! . . . That's one of their bombs, mamma. Look; they're dropping their bombs now! . . . O! O!"

"Nellie, child; Nellie!"

"They're coming closer, mamma. O! O! . . . That was another of them dropping those bombs—see, the searchlights are on it now! Those were down by the new factory! Yes, mamma, there goes—O! O! Father's down there, isn't he? He didn't come back yet?"

"O, our good Savior! Pray, Nellie; pray with me! O! O! My child! Nellie! They're—come, run! Come with me! O, our Savior! . . ."

Nellie fell forward, thrusting her arms before her to save her; now she no longer fell; she seemed to be floating in space. There were flames before her, and she was stunned by a tremendous detonation, which was followed by a crashing which continued and continued. Now she was on her hands and knees somewhere in the dark and choking with smoke. She called for her mother again and again, but got no answer; so, on her hands and knees, she crawled out of that dark, choking place. She was out of the house now in the snow; it was terribly cold and like metal grains about her wrists and about her knees. She crawled quite a way, for there seemed nothing else to do, before her wrists let her down into that cold, sandy snow, and, as she fell, she heard her father's voice calling her name and her mother's.

Now her father found her and tried to pick her up, but, for some reason, he could not; so he sat down in the snow and put his coat about her and held her in his arms, gasping and crying out endearment to her one moment and awful, terrible imprecations the next. He called again and again for her mother; then, when some one else came, he cursed that one because he was a man and yelled to him to run—to run as fast as he could anywhere and get a doctor or a woman, any woman who had had a child. Then, from new, strange, enravishing torture, Nellie cried out.

And Nathan Ashby was alone with his daughter. And there in the snow, a hundred yards away from the burning house, his daughter's son was born. The child's cry aroused Nellie, and she looked up and smiled at her father.

"It's all right, papa. The baby's not going to die or I, papa. Bob is going to be with us first. I—I saw him with us again. He is coming back to us—first."

The TEENIE WEENIES

MAKE BLACKBERRY JAM

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies were kept busy for some time repairing the boat they had found. A great deal of work had to be done and everybody labored as fast as they could in order to get the boat ready for the trip the General had promised them when the task was done.

"Men," said the General as the tired little workmen sat around the Teenie Weenie dinner table sipping their after dinner coffee, "we'll have to leave off work on the boat to-morrow in order to help the Cook. He tells me that blackberries are ripe and if we expect to have any jam or jelly this winter we've got to get busy right away. So everybody that wants jam and jelly will have to get out early to-morrow morning and help the Cook."

"Betcha I'll be on the job," announced the Dunce.

"I should think you would," laughed the Cook, who knew better than any one the quantities of jam the Dunce ate.

The next morning several of the Teenie Weenies went out in search of berries, while the rest helped the Cook bring out the many pans and kettles that were to be used. Two small bottles were brought up and the Chinaman, crawling inside, scrubbed them until they were spotless.

"Ah, say, Cook," grumbled the Dunce as he helped the Cook carry out the big iron kettle, "why didn't you make the jelly on the stove in the kitchen and then we wouldn't have to go to all this trouble?"

"Couldn't," answered the Cook. "The bottle we are going to put the jam in is too big to get through the door, and besides it's such a messy job we'd get the kitchen all mussed up."

"I've got an idea!" exclaimed the Dunce, dropping the kettle and squinting up at the bottle that towered above him. "We could move the bottle nearer the house and run a straw from the kitchen out through the door into the bottle. When the jam was cooked you could pour it into the straw and it would run out into the bottle."

"The jam would be too thick to run through a straw," said the Cook, "and besides it's a silly idea."

"I don't think saving work is silly," grumbled the Dunce.

When the blackberries were brought in the Teenie Weenie ladies cut them into very small pieces, which were put into kettles and made into jam and jelly. One bottle was filled with blackberry juice and put away to be used only on special occasions and on Teenie Weenie holidays.

It was quite late that night when all the work was done and the tired little people sat down to a cold supper.

"S-s-say, Cook," said the sleepy Dunce, as he curled up into an easy chair before the fireplace, "h-h-how m-m-many berries did you put up to-day?"

"Well," answered the Cook, "I made four berries into jam, five into jelly, and it took fourteen to make the juice. Now let me see; that's ——"

"Twenty-three," put in the Doctor, who was quick at figures.

"Shimminie!" exclaimed the Dutchman. "Dot's vot I call a bretty much big day's vork!"

By JEAN SEIVWRIGHT.

Equally beautiful is the gown at the left, although in the illustration it is hidden by a coat of tete de negre satin. Turquoise blue charmeuse is chosen for the dinner gown, which is trimmed with wide gold galons. The coat is a splendid expression of the designer's art. Fulled at the sides below the waistline, it is pointed at the back and there is just the inclination of a train. The wide cuffs are edged with plaiting, while the collar and muff are of silver fox. Cords and tassels are used to fasten the coat. The hat, untrimmed and depending solely on its beauty of line, is made of cloth of bronze that harmonizes perfectly with the sumptuous wrap with which it is worn.

In the center of the page a charming afternoon gown is depicted. Originated in beautiful velvet in the favored shade of midnight blue, it possesses a deep steel gray satin underskirt that is bordered with steel embroidery. A grosgrain ribbon girdle encircles the waist and is used to outline the wide cuffed sleeves. These are quite short, but the undersleeves of steel embroidered net add somewhat to their length and give a dainty finish to the costume. Gray is the color chosen for the shoes, while the hat with pleasing rolling brim is originated in the dark blue velvet.

At this time there is much to interest women, especially those who are sojourning by the shore or in the mountains and require new touches for their holiday dress. The sports skirt, which is usually quite full, may be finished in a rather pretty style. The fullness is set in tiny box plaits and a narrow belt embroidered in wool at the edges is attached so that the plaits flare outward around the shirtwaist in pleasing style. The hem, too, is ornamented with long, loose stitches of the rough yarn.

Another skirt is finished with a belt that immediately suggests the waist coat, only the long pointed ends are placed at the sides, while at front and back the girdle is no wider than a man's leather belt. The sections that flank the sides, however, contain skillfully concealed pockets and the points are held in place by the affixing of mother of pearl buckles.

Embroidery is much in vogue, while ribbons, too, is important in milady's attiring. A gayly colored girdle, for the afternoon frock, is made of turquoise blue ribbon picot edged. On the ends wild roses are embroidered in delicate pink and green beads, while a fringe of green silk, tipped with turquoise blue beads, gives the needed finish. Silk fringes are frequently seen, although the bead and ball varieties are perhaps better suited to hold the sash ends in place.

While coarse wool embroidery is decidedly smart on the silk scarf for the girdle, similar trimmings are also chosen for the ribbons that adorn the summer sports hats. One of the newest additions, however, in the realm of millinery is the engraved leather band, which accords well with the prevailing simplicity in outing attire.

Bands of taffeta in two or three vivid shades are also used. These may be finished in many different ways, simply crossed at the sides with loose ends tacked flat on the brim or loosely bowed at the front.

Quaint styles in collars seem to indicate that the cape will be a prominent characteristic of fall dress. One lovely piece of neckwear is made of dainty white tulle with rich embroidery. A high collar encircles the neck and to this is attached a smart little cape that extends well below the shoulders.

MEN AND WOMEN

If the thermometer registered 70 or even 80 degrees as I write on Diana of the Dunes, so-called mystic nymph and September morner, I should be tempted to categorize her with the "Nobody Homes." But, writing this in the shade at 98, my soul is filled with no small portion of envy for one who can shake the big city with its grime and rent earning worries for a hut by the side of the lake and nothing to do till tomorrow.

Diana of the Dunes.

Abnormal conditions breed abnormal desires. In the last analysis I expect there is only a difference of a few months between folk who wait for the hot weather to breed them and those who are possessed as early in the season as the aforesaid Diana.

The shortage in housemaids, for which the war is to blame, brings the servant problem to the fore again.

Shortage in Housemaids.

"There has been no immigration in two years," says the manager of a big employment agency. "It was from these immigrant girls that house help was obtained."

The trite question is raised again: "Why do girls prefer factory and shop work to domestic service?"

In arguing the advantages of domestic service for young girls "the good home they secure" is the first point advanced. Not infrequently are the households in which girls find service anything but good homes, and again, no matter how good the home, the girl rarely shares more of it than the kitchen and her bedroom. She is the pivot upon which the house revolves and still is not a part of it. And the more the family uses the home for entertaining acquaintances the less a part of the life of that home is she going to be.

The result is the answer as to why girls prefer work other than domestic service—the aloofness and the loneliness of the average "place." Together with this reason is the well known social stigma attached to the work.

Strange it is that no other honest work in the country so belittles a woman socially as housework performed for money.

"It is the only field of labor that has not known the touch of modern labor improvements, the only one where the hours, conditions, and wages are not attacked regularly," says Ida Tarbell; "the only one in which there is practically no organization; no standardization, no training, no regular road of progress. It is the only field of labor in which there seems to be a general tendency to abandon the democratic notion and return frankly to the standards of the aristocratic régime."

What a field for social effort and for accomplishment akin to that of the Consumers' league or the Woman's Trade Union league! What an opportunity to apply individually in the home the principles for which many women leave their homes to meet and act upon better working conditions among other classes of working women!

The solution of the servant problem is much a matter of mind—applying both to mistress and maid. If minds are changed, methods naturally will be. Since domestic service is merely the delegating of her own duties to an aid, the housemother must look upon it with interest and respect. And since, further, it is the center of human life and the source of all human happiness, both must look upon housework as indispensable, honorable, and desirable.

The faults and troubles of the housemaid are 50 per cent hers and 50 per cent her mistress'. "Housework is tiresome and discouraging and lonesome," says the maid. "There are lots of mistresses ready to ask for good work and few ready to give good conditions. Lots of them do not know how to manage well and most of them do not want to deal fairly. They all want to get much and give little."

"Says the mistress: "Housekeeping is wearisome and disheartening. There are many maids ready to demand good pay and few ready to do good work. Many do not know how to work well and most do not want to work well. They all want to get much and give little."

Perhaps the threatened revival of the gentle womanly art of domestic duties, which during the last quarter of a century has fallen more and more into disfavor, may be a start in the right direction toward the solution of the servant problem.

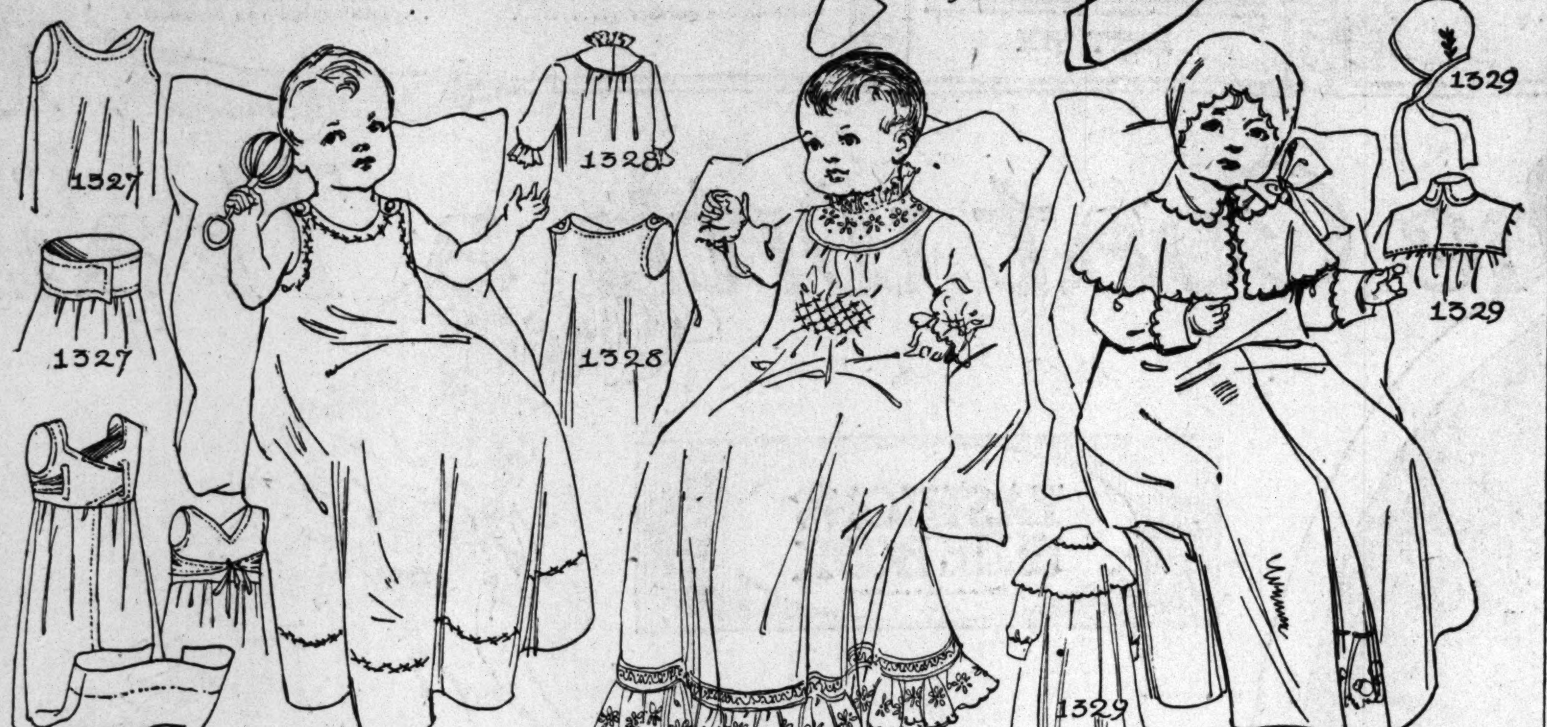
PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

Practical Garments for the Family's Youngest Member

Drawn from Exclusive Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



1327—Infant's petticoat and barrow coat. For the barrow coat will be needed 1½ yards of material 27 or 36 inches wide, with 1⅞ yards 36 for the body or band; for the petticoat will be needed 1¾ yards 36 or 1½ yards 44.

1328—Infant's dress and petticoat. Two and one-half yards of material 27 or 36 inches wide, 1⅞ yards 44 for the dress, with 3½ yards of embroidery for the frill and 2½ yards of insertion; 1⅞ yards 27 or 36, 1¾ yards 44, for the petticoat.

1329—Infant's coat and bonnet. Three and one-eighth yards of material 27 inches wide, 2¼ yards 36, or 2 yards 44, for both the coat and bonnet.

All of these patterns for the family's youngest member are of one size. They will be found to be practical and satisfactory and the quantities quoted in each description are the correct quantities for each garment.

The barrow coat and petticoat in No. 1327 are an excellent combination. They may be made in dainty, delicate material or in firm, substantial goods, according to the expense to be involved and the practicality and viewpoint of the mother in question.

The infant's dress and petticoat are a pretty combination, simple enough to entail no intricacies of cutting and yet attractive in design.

The infant's coat and bonnet are both indispensable garments in the baby's wardrobe, and these two garments are made to suit all the baby's outdoor needs and fit all the baby occasions that arise.

Art of Popular Hostess.

A POPULAR hostess always has one especial gift, the art of making her guests feel at home. No matter how costly her entertainment, nor how gorgeous her house, it counts for nothing unless back of it all there is a sincere pleasure in having guests and a wish to put them at their ease. It is not a mere mask to be put on when one's guests arrive and put off with their departure. It is a quality springing from a truly kind heart and a desire to make others happy and at peace.

AGNES: It is always proper for the man who is acting as your escort to pay your carfare; if he has been asked to do so, you might with propriety offer to pay your own way, but under no consideration should you offer to pay his, as there is nothing more humiliating to the average man.

I. L. H.: The only things about a wedding for which the bridegroom is responsible are the bouquets for the bride and bridesmaids and the carriage for the clergyman. He usually consults the bride as to the flowers for the bouquets. The bride's bouquet is always made up of white flowers. Those of the bridesmaids may be of colors to match their gowns. With frock coat, gray trousers, a similar hue in socks and tie, a white waistcoat and patent leather shoes should be worn.

In Love with a Voice.

I have occasion to use the telephone a great deal. Ours is only a small town, so one gets to know many people and becomes accustomed to voices over the telephone. One morning I noticed that the central girls had been changed; at any rate the hello girl who had answered my abrupt calls seemed somehow different, more musical, more unacquainted with the brusque, burly world, and after several of the early calls were over I got to wondering what sort of girl it could be who had such a sweet, winsome voice over the telephone. I resolved that when I used the telephone in the future I would be a little more considerate of the feelings of the girl who, I imagined, seemed to be so dainty and delightful. You see, I had already fallen in love with a voice and could hardly wait for the regular time of making my calls.

It started at first by my merely asking how she was this morning, and while I did not get an answer from her the first few times, in a few days she gave me a short reply, and from then on it was the best part of the day when I had some telephoning to do. I had occasion to call 553 a great many times during the day and she got used to that number. But to all my entreaties for a meeting she was obdurate, and I had never seen her, nor when I went up to the telephone office on other business could I tell which one of the girls at the long switchboard was the one I was talking to every day.

One day I passed several girls on the street, some of whom I knew to be telephone girls, and after I had passed them a few steps I stopped and, turning, called out, "Five five three," and the prettiest girl in the world, who is now my wife, turned round quickly, thus disclosing her identity. It was then just an easy matter to secure an introduction and affairs progressed smoothly.

Courting a Husband.

SHE was a brilliant musician whose ability was great enough for a manager to influence her to leave her native land and come to this country to tour. She dreaded leaving her husband and little son, but as they were poor the lure of much gold finally tempted her.

Her manager, a man well on in years, did everything to make her happy in her new surroundings. He introduced her to charming and interesting people, sent her candy and flowers, and finally began to make love to her.

At first she was indifferent, although being lonesome she liked the little attentions and the flattery. Her tour lasted several seasons and she at length began to reciprocate the affections of her manager. She thought she was much in love, so much so that she wrote to the far away country asking the husband to allow her to get a divorce and marry this man she was so wildly in love with.

He replied that he might concede to her wishes if it were any other man—for this traitor never. Determined to make him consent, she sailed away to her own land to plead with him, and as she had become rich to give him gold in exchange for freedom.

Arriving, she went to her parents. She saw her little boy, now a sturdy lad, and heard her parents' pleadings to desist from her madness. But, no, nothing could swerve her now. She met her husband, who was cool to her; in fact, hardly noticed her. When she and her parents traveled she had to ask this silent man for his permission to take the lad with her. When away a few weeks he joined them, ostensibly to visit his son. His wife he never even noticed.

Womanlike, she was much piqued that he was so indifferent to her and her charms that he acted as if she did not even exist. This annoyed her so much and hurt her vanity to such a degree that she felt she must make him care, if only for her satisfaction.

She set about to try to rewin him, and suddenly realized that seemingly her power over him was gone. After weeks of real effort coming upon the realization of what she was losing, they made up; but she had to do all the courting, and she says it was hard work.

Many years have passed. She is famous. They live in this country, and he, too, is prosperous. They are happy and are a loving and domesticated family. Only his indifference saved her from herself and, as she now says, probably untold misery.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Adaptable.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

SUPPOSING your birthday falls during the week beginning July 30, then you will probably meet with success as a physician, musician, actor, vocalist, florist, designer, or military commander. Surely a wide field for your talents!

You're one of those fortunates whose intuition is so highly developed that you are often given credit for having far greater reasoning powers than you in reality possess. But you do have a discriminating mind and are keen and subtle in your deductions.

One of your characteristics is to maintain a perfectly calm, impassive exterior at times when you are passing through great trials. The only way at these times to make you show your colors is to arouse your temper and thus throw off your guard. You can conceal the truth if you wish, and more than once you may try this little game.

You are wonderfully adaptable, seeming to fit into any position you happen to occupy, and if you partake of all of the self-control that is the heritage of any one born in this sign who wills to have it you will make this place a leading one by the magnetic attraction of your nature. Impetuous and rash you may be, springing headlong at the thing you want, regardless of consequences, but withal so lovable that you are always forgiven.

Your aims and aspirations are high, and with your natural perseverance you usually obtain what you wish. If you are continually thwarted in your purposes it may result in a complete stifling of all your ambition, and a breakdown physically. Your estimate of human nature, though usually correct, is sometimes wrong, and it is in these rare instances that you are led on to your undoing.

You are intense in your affections, with a love for your family, especially your children, that knows no bounds. You may be harsh and exacting with them, but no one else dares attempt their discipline in your presence. You will work hard to get money, but you do not hoard it; on the contrary, you spend it freely on yourself and family. Indeed, you will sacrifice much to earn it, and it is also true that what you get you usually earn by your own labors. Sometimes a rather abnormal sense of curiosity gets you into difficulties.

You are quick to see the "mote in thy brother's eye," but your own observant nature and great adaptability help you cover up your own faults. "How a thing will look," is your law, and good form the breath of life to you. For this reason some of you Leo people marry unhappily because you estimate your mate too much by outward appearances. 'Tis well to remember that you should never marry until you are sure of your heart.

Neatness with some of you Leo people is well nigh an obsession, and harmony is absolutely necessary to your existence if you would retain your health. Harmony is medicine to your nerves, and if you get it the warm, sunny geniality of your nature is in striking contrast to the irritable nervousness which you develop under opposite conditions. The keynotes of your nature being faith, love, and harmony, one can readily understand, when harmony is lacking, what contradictions will result. Your salvation comes through your love nature and your desire to sacrifice everything for your loved ones.

It is probable that you will find marital happiness with Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, or possibly with Aries, March 22-April 20. Gemini, May 22-June 22, and Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, are both congenial, but Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, will quite likely prove the most harmonious mate of all, due to its quiet, negative strength, and steady, unexcitable nature.

You will be most fortunate during your own sign and during the week beginning Jan. 27. Your colors are yellow, red, and green; birthstones, ruby and diamond.

How Long Does It Take?

"Dear Miss Blake: How long do you think a boy and girl may keep company with each other before they become in love with each other? How can they tell? Do you think a boy who tells a girl he loves her when he has been with her but a few times is sincere?

X. Y. Z."

Telling doesn't always make it true, sad, to say, and you might as well come to his realization now as later. As to time required to fall in love, no one has ever been able to say; sometimes but a glance is needed, again it is a matter of weeks and months. When you are separated for some time and the days seem like years, then the signs are good that you are in love. "Keeping company" isn't synonymous with falling in love, so get that idea out of your head.

* *

Wants to Tell Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would like to know how I can let a girl know I love her.

C. H."

By always treating her with respect, taking her to places of amusement that she will enjoy, being nice to her family, and making yourself generally agreeable all the time you are with her. Isn't that some task to lay out for you? After keeping up this course of action for several months, and finding that your attentions are always acceptable, you can surely draw the inference that you are "in strong," so then, if your age and finances permit, you might be safe in asking the question. Keep me posted as to results, won't you, please?

She Gets Candy and Music.

"Dear Miss Blake: This is the first time I have had to appeal for help, but had to this time. I am almost 16, and I would like to know whether it would be improper for me to accept candy and music from a boy. I have gone with this boy for over a year, and some of the girls tease me for accepting candy and music. Also, is 10:30 too late for me to keep company, and is twice a week too much for me?

E. F."

If your parents have had no objection to your going around with this boy, young as you are, then surely a few flowers and a bit of candy aren't going to be condemned. Certainly there's nothing wrong in your accepting these offerings, but keep away from jewelry and expensive gifts. Ten-thirty Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights may be permissible; personally I think it's a half-hour too late; but week days 9:30 at the latest. Twice a week is p-l-e-n-t-y often enough for youngsters of your age to see each other.

HOW I'M MAKING INEZ HAHN'S SICK HAIR WELL

says Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THREE months ago Miss Inez Hahn was losing her hair so rapidly she was afraid to brush it for fear of the sight of another big handful of hairs being left on the brush. Five weeks ago I took her in hand, and as result of the strict following of instructions as laid down to her in the care of her hair, today she can brush and comb her hair with the pleasure of knowing that no more than the normal shedding will be the result.

Miss Hahn's hair was excessively oily and she had much dandruff. Today her hair is only normally oily and the dandruff has almost entirely disappeared.

As I explained in the two previous articles on this subject, shampooing, massage of the scalp, and the application of a tonic for oily hair and dandruff have been the means of acquiring this present gratifying state of scalp and hair on my model.

With the twice daily massage of the scalp [movements for which are so simple that any woman or girl can accomplish them without professional knowledge] and semi-weekly shampoo Miss Hahn's hair at the end of five weeks' work looks like an entirely different tonsorial feature from what it did at the beginning. A sunny, clean, and "lifey" look to the hair is the result, and the scalp has no longer that dead, white appearance which denotes unhealthy circulation and diseased and neglected hair roots.

In five weeks' time, of course, it can hardly be expected that a noticeable growth should be discerned. But with the scalp clean and kept continually so, and circulation started healthfully, there is no possibility that the hairs which have been lost will not be replaced by stronger, healthier ones in the course of a few months.

As I said before, the scalp is comparable to the soil in that neither hair nor plants will grow luxuriantly if the quality is poor. A scalp which is thick and pliable and moves freely over the bones of the skull beneath is favorable to the growth of hair. If the scalp is thin the blood vessels contained will be few in number. And if it is drawn tightly over the skull it will tend to constrict the blood vessels, lessen the supply of blood to the scalp, and cause atrophy of the roots from pressure.

The two principal causes which are responsible for the thinning of the hair are a deficient circulation of the blood in the scalp and the constant presence of dandruff.

Attention to the general health is most important in the treatment of sick hair. For hair, like every other structure of the body, gets its sustenance from the blood. And the condition of the hair is influenced greatly by disorders of the general health. But, of course, hair is also influenced by local disorders, just as the skin in general is.

If your system is run down and your hair is falling out, start in to build up your health by blood building foods and right living. At the same time local treatment is necessary to rid your haid of dandruff and to stimulate the oil glands.

If you missed the instructions for the daily massage and the tonic for dandruff and oily hair, and instructions for shampooing, which I have given in previous articles of this series, send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall be happy to mail them to you.

There are many popular fallacies concerning questions of hair hygiene, but that of shampooing involves the most. There is little danger of shampooing a healthy scalp too often, notwithstanding the opposite statement so frequently made. For shampooing, like brushing, removes some loose hairs, but by cleansing and stimulating the scalp it forms a most important means of preserving a good head of hair or aiding to restore it after a temporary falling.

When the hair has begun to fall out prematurely, due to long neglect or following an illness, it is well to begin shampooing the head twice or even three times a week, and to gradually lessen the intervals to once a week or once in two weeks.

The use of soap on the hair agitates many persons who, though employing the best soap in cleansing the skin, consider that shampooing is a dangerous procedure unless the soap is recommended by physicians. Any good toilet soap upon the market will answer the purpose, and more harm is done by refraining from the use of the shampoo than by using an inferior quality of soap on the hair. In cases of oily hair especially, the addition of alcohol to shampooing lathers and liquids will greatly assist the thorough cleansing of the scalp and the ridding it of excess oil.

I have been asked repeatedly about the value of electrical treatments for the hair. In the hands of one who knows the indications to be met it is serviceable in extreme cases. It acts as a local stimulant only. But it should not be used without intelligence. I have known several cases where in the hands of an expert electrical treatments produced a growth on heads that were almost bald.

However, under ordinary circumstances falling hair may be given home treatments which if practiced with the regularity of meal eating will result to the greatest satisfaction of the patient.

Curling the hair with hot irons cannot be too deeply deplored. It makes the hair dry and brittle, causing it to split and break. It is distinctly bad for the hair.

Sun baths for the hair are highly recommended. It needs sunlight just as the body needs it. Be warned, however, that continual exposure to the direct rays of the sun will affect the coloring. My model gives her hair a sun bath frequently, and if the sun is not shining the air bath alone is excellent for it. Spread it out widely with both hands so that sun and air may get right in at the scalp.

Next week I shall continue with the sick hair series. In an early future article the treatment of dry, thin hair will be explained.

Answers to Beauty Seekers.

RUTH: Yellow vaseline will in time darken the eyebrows. It takes time, of course; maybe several months. You can use an eyebrow pencil, but of course you will have to use it carefully and artistically.

MRS. G. H.: Your falling hair may be caused from dandruff. The first thing to do is to build up your general health, for disturbances of the general health are nearly always reflected in the hair. Then take steps to remove the dandruff. I have a formula for dandruff which I shall be glad to mail you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

WORRIED GIRL: There is no special height or weight for a girl of 14. She is still at the growing age, and her height and weight would vary with her growth. A simple and pretty way for a girl of your age to wear her hair is in a braid or curls down her back, with a bow at the neck or a simple barrette to hold it in place. Don't assume any of the exaggerated styles of coiffure. It is not becoming to young girls.

This Does More Than Remove Hair

The razor, pastes, rub-on preparations and liquid imitations of De Miracle act in the same manner. They merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, is the only logical and scientific way to remove hair. It alone contains certain ingredients which are antagonistic to hair and which are quickly absorbed. Therefore it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from the limbs to prevent it from showing through stockings. Also for removing hair from under arms. Avoid disappointment; buy De Miracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. A-8, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York

PICTORIAL REVIEW says "It has been many years since I have had occasion to speak with such praise of any article." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

The Too Cheerful Girl.

IN a department store the other day I overheard one saleswoman tell another that she had been vainly trying to squelch one of the girls whose cheerful but too familiar manner got on her nerves.

The scrap of conversation brought to my mind a type with which most working women are acquainted. It represented the young woman whose mission in life is apparently to make the people with whom she works happy by her bright and cheerful personality. And not the least part of her work is to instill a similar cheerfulness into others. She is employed in every office, store, and workroom; no place of business is complete without her.

But alas, her idea of cheerfulness is all wrong, and the quality she develops is often a too breezy familiarity, than which nothing is quite so objectionable in a business associate.

Her occupational duties are to her a mere interlude in the day's achievement; nevertheless, she feels she is one of the firm's assets, as the cheer and sweetness which emanate from her presence make it possible for all about her to put every effort into their work and lighten for them the burden of the long working day.

From the time she enters the building in the morning with a breezy greeting to the elevator man until she bids everybody a hilarious good night she never for a moment forgets that she is the one bright and shining light in the office, and it is up to her to keep everybody else in high spirits also.

I do not mean to disparage a genuinely cheerful disposition, but it is so rare a quality, and sometimes this poor imitation is mistaken for the real thing, especially to the possessors thereof.

The "cheerful in spite of everything" girl has haunted the normal working woman from the beginning of her career, and in spite of efforts to suppress her she still goes smirking on her way, shedding her especial brand of sunshine on all with whom she comes in contact.

Cheerfulness in moderate doses and delivered at the right time undoubtedly makes for a wholesome and happy atmosphere in the workroom, and there is no greater blessing to her associates than a woman of pleasant disposition, whose judgment is nicely balanced by a happy sense of humor on the one hand and a proper dignity and reticence on the other.

Unhappily the young girl whose mission is to keep everybody smiling and cheerful recognizes no such proportion.

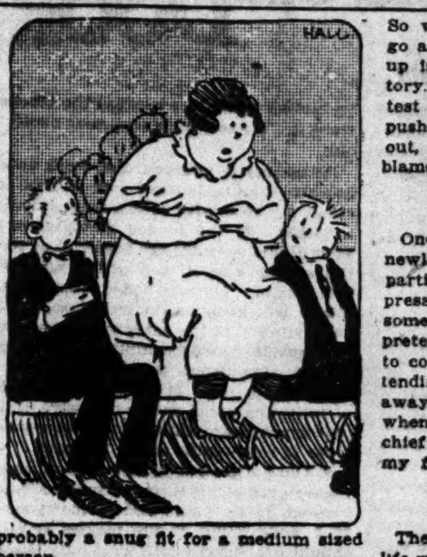
Arms and the Woman.

It happened the other day when I visited a downtown theater, which is showing moving pictures.

I am one of those unfortunate beings who are blessed with a superabundance of flesh. Indeed, I may say, I am sometimes cruelly referred to as "stout."

The theater was crowded and I was obliged to crowd past the knees of five or six people to reach the only empty seat in sight. I reached the seat and tried to occupy it, but alack and alas! It had little arms at the sides and was probably a snug fit for a medium sized person.



So when I reached the arms I couldn't go any farther, and there I was, sitting up in the air like an overseer in a factory. I didn't wait for the howl of protest which would have come next, but pushed past those people again and got out, while everybody tittered. Can you blame 'em. M. A. S.

She Took the Wafers.

One afternoon I was calling upon some newly acquired friends upon whom I particularly desired to make a good impression. They served afternoon tea and some small wafers which I disliked. I pretended to nibble at them, but managed to conceal them in my handkerchief, intending to dispose of them after I went away. Imagine my embarrassment as, when leaving, I dropped my handkerchief and the contents went rolling to my friend's feet. L. M.

She Dreamed of Eggs.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was on the street car as I was coming home from a weary day's shopping. Sinking into a seat, I closed my eyes. The rumble of the train soon lulled me to sleep. I started to dream, thinking I was preparing my husband's breakfast. I asked him, "Will you have your eggs boiled, scrambled, or poached?" Imagine my embarrassment on opening my eyes to see every one in the car laughing and hear a young man opposite say, "I'll take mine scrambled." S. B.

An Organ Recital.

One day in high school physiology class we were making drawings of the organs of the body. The instructor was putting a drawing on the blackboard. His drawings of the organs were original, but mine were taken from the book. I raised my hand without a single thought and remarked: "Mr. Doan, my stomach isn't the same shape as yours." Of course, that broke the silence of the room, and I became almost angry at myself when the students became almost uncontrollable with laughter. Miss L. V. R.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

REQUESTS for pickle recipes of various sorts are coming in, and people who think they have fine pickle recipes want to sell them. Let me say why I do not believe in pickles and why I wish they could be banished from the diet. And, by the way, they are eaten with poorly cooked foods far more than with well cooked.

To begin with, a pickle has practically no food value. The materials used have the lowest food value of any we eat, and certain valuable qualities which they possess when fresh, independent of their fuel value, are lost in the procss of pickling. A whole pound of fresh cucumbers averages only eighty calories and a pound of cucumber pickles only seventy, but even this tiny amount it with difficulty leeched out of them by the digestive juices.

Second, if pickles are strong they are actually irritating to the digestive canal.

Third, they hinder, no one knows how much, the digestion of such foods as sandwiches, with which they are so commonly eaten. In many cases the regurgitation following, say, a pickled onion is proof enough that the digestion is disturbed. The child having strong eating muscles often throws up a too acid meal, which cannot be acted upon by the digestive juices.

Vinegar is strong stuff. Let a piece of "mother" stand on the best white enamel for a little while and see what happens. Or rather I beg you not to spoil your enamel in any such way.

Cheap crocks of the kind much used for cucumber pickles, and for the easiest kind of all, a good recipe for which I used to print, are dangerous in a sly way. The vinegar eats into the enamel, in the manufacture of which poisonous materials are used. The amount of this in one pickle will not act quickly enough to be noticeable, but frequent eaters of such pickles soon lose color, and never are they quite up to the mark in health. The manufacturers of beers (which will turn to vinegar) have spent a good deal of time and money to get utensils which cannot yield a mineral poison by corrosion. Not many months ago I perused one of their journals which had a long article on the subject.

The real reason for cooking vinegar for pickles is to sterilize it. It will pickle without this cooking. There are more bacteria in it than in poor milk, probably, and if it is not sterilized the bacteria will spoil the pickles. They attack the material pickled and soften it, but rarely does putrefaction take place because the vinegar stops it. We seal pickles to keep bacteria out.

Better bestir yourself and work up an appetite than to deprave your natural instinct for food with such an appetizer as a pickle. If the mucus membranes of your digestive canal are sensitive or sore the strong acid of the pickle will irritate them. Once irritated, less strong things will keep up the irritation, and if your vitality is low after weeks an ulcer may result. Acids complicate digestion all the time when people do not know how to eat wisely. It is the constant wear of irritating foods on our digestive canal that uses up our vitality until we are prostrate in nine-tenths of our illnesses.

So I do not give, except by request, these rather good pickle recipes I have collected through many years and formerly used. If I were going to use pickles at all I should use those which were only two or three days old, such as pickled beets, pickled red cabbage, pickled peppers, pickled celery, onions, or carrots. Some pickles of the latter vegetable are eaten on the day made. Celery cut into inch long pieces with a bit of salt, a crushed clove or two, and a bit of garlic or not, as you choose, then covered with vinegar which has been boiled and cooled and shut away tight, will be pickled in two or three days. Ripe small tomatoes in a French dressing are not bad.

Uncooked Chili Sauce.

A little of the following sauce in a mayonnaise may be used for a sort of Thousand Island dressing, which may always be seasoned highly if, regardless of consequences, we eat what we like. This sauce is most palatable with baked beans, but I would not eat it with them now, although I did so in my anemic youth: Twelve ripe tomatoes, six onions, six small peppers, one-third or less for health of a cup of salt, one cup of sugar, two cups of the best cider vinegar sterilized and cooled. The salt is only to aid in the keeping qualities, and it is better not to keep it long. Peel and chop fine the tomatoes, onions, and peppers, and add to them the seasonings, mixing well. Will keep well in a cold place in sterilized bottles with tight stoppers.

Pepper Sauce.

A kindly reader some years ago sent me the following, introducing it thus: "Here is a delicious recipe for pepper sauce or meat relish which is not common." Probably such sauces do not hinder the digestion of meat and possibly may aid it. "Ten large white onions, twelve red peppers, twelve green peppers, three tablespoons of salt, three pints of vinegar, one and a half cups of sugar. Chop peppers and onions fine and pour boiling water over them. Let stand five minutes, then drain and pour boiling water over them again. Let stand ten minutes, then drain well and boil fifteen minutes in vinegar, sugar, and salt."

Green Corn Relish.

When I was in search of a reliable green corn relish to save myself the trouble of experiment some years ago a friend famous for her table gave me the following: Part One.—Four large onions, one large cabbage, eight red peppers, twenty ears of corn, one and a half cups of sugar, one-half cup of salt, one quart of vinegar. Bring these to a boil. Part Two.—Three tablespoons of mustard, one tablespoon of turmeric, one-half cup of flour, one level tablespoon of celery seed, one scant quart of vinegar. Dissolve mustard, flour, and turmeric in the vinegar until there are no lumps, add to the other ingredients, and cook all for thirty minutes. Makes six quarts.

Answers to Inquiries.

Note: No prize and no pay is given for recipes by this column. But a word of general advice, seemingly, may be worth while to those who send away recipes to papers and magazines. Always send stamps for their return, as in the case of any other manuscript, if you want to relieve your mind about whether they will be used or not.

CATHERINE: You addressed your letter to this department, but inside it was addressed to some one else. Perhaps the recipe for dill pickles you refer to is one in the Milwaukee cook book with the name "The Settlement Cook Book." It has recipes for winter dill pickles, summer dill pickles, small dill pickles, and dill beans.

MRS. J. E. M.: Your request for the outline of so many meals at so small and definite a price involves more work than I can afford to give to any one correspondent. If you would frame your request so that I could answer it in an article which would be profitable and interesting to many people I could meet it, perhaps.

L. C. F.: It is hardly the season for candies, and I cannot publish five or six recipes for them in answer to one request, but I can tell you how to make many candies from the one recipe (a good fondant). To make this is no more work than to make a fudge, but unless it is as smooth and soft as velvet it is not a success. As it will keep several weeks with proper precautions it is good to have in the house. You can melt it up for icing, dip fruit in it when melted, etc. Sweet grapes are good covered with it, especially the Tokay.

To two cups of sugar add one-half cup of water and stir over the fire until the sugar is fully dissolved, but not a moment after the mixture begins to boil. Set a half cup of glucose or corn sirup in hot water and heat it until it runs readily, then pour it into the sugar when it begins to boil. Skim if necessary. With a wet cloth on a stick wipe away any sugar on the sides of the saucepan above the gently boiling liquid—fire at lowest point after it once boils up. Cook to 238 degrees, or the fudge stage. The only way to be sure of getting the right stage is to use a thermometer. If cooked too much it hardens too soon when worked or beaten; if too little it will not harden. Pour out in a thin sheet and when it is nearly cool commence to knead with a wooden paddle until it is white and creamy. Be sure not to commence when it is hot. Or you may leave it in the pan and when it is cool enough beat just as you do fudge. Cover it with a damp cloth and let it ripen for at least an hour or for a day or two before using. The damp cloth is essential to its keeping soft.

For dipping warm it up in a double boiler. If too dense add a tablespoon of boiling water or of a stock sirup at a time, beating and stirring it until it is smooth and flowing.

Two or three drops of oil of peppermint added to the melted fondant and you may make delicious peppermint drops of it by dropping little portions on waxed paper. You may chop up fruits and nuts and knead them into a portion of it. You can dip blanched almonds half their length in it for a sort of acorn candy. Melted and chocolate colored and flavored it is perhaps best for this latter purpose. You may melt some cinnamon drops in a bit of water and flavor and color some of it with this. You may prepare three or four portions of it in different fashions and put them in layers which you may slice across for a Neapolitan candy.

If you want to know all the other things you can do with it buy a book of candy recipes. There are two or three good ones.

C. H. L.: True wine making is an exacting and long process. I have never made any of those you ask for, nor do I expect ever to have the time to give the care and attention to the subject that is needed. Such wines are not ripe under a year, and you need a good deal and the proper storage room as well as the right utensils. There are books on wine making to be purchased. I have one curious and ancient one which I mean to study some day.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"IN response to an appeal you printed in the Corner for books and toys for my children I received some nice books from several nice people and such pleasant letters and good friends I have made through the Corner that I just want to write and express my thanks. The friends and words of cheer came at a time when I needed them, as I lost my dear mother just one week before Christmas and then after Christmas I had a long illness and the children had no Christmas at all. My mother had been sick for six long years and it seemed doubly hard to lose her just at Christmas time when every one should be happy. The children have enjoyed the books so much and I am most grateful to the Corner and will help when I can. I have another favor I would like to ask. Do you suppose I could get an old pair of heavy portieres, such as are used in double doors? It would make no difference if they were faded, for I could wash them and dye them. I want to use them on an old couch and an old cot to make these look a little better. If some kind friend had a pair no longer in use I would be glad to pay the parcel post on them. MRS. H. G."

I hope there may be some one who has the portieres wanted. I am glad the other appeal made such satisfactory response. I know well how gratefully received are letters and kindly words when one is in affliction and I add my sympathy to the rest which I know will go out to Mrs. H. G. in her bereavement. I shall supply her address to applicants and trust to receive with the request a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Employment for Women.

"The letter under the title, 'Must Earn Her Living,' attracts me and I want to suggest that to my thinking an employment agency for women seems a way by which a woman might maintain a home and self-respect. It would take some business training to make it a success. A nurses' registry might also prove successful if one mad any acquaintance among physicians. A rooming house might pay, but the investments and surplus in this work would have to be larger. "J. E. A."

This is the kind of letter I am glad to receive and print, because the suggestions it contains are not only practical but unusual and even if they do not help the one for whom they are primarily intended they may put ideas for self-support in the minds of others who need these. I am grateful to J. E. A. and so will others be.

Work to Exchange.

"I have just about 300 magazines and good stories already cut out ready to send to some one who wishes a few of them, or I will send a large package to any one who is ready to pay postage on them. I would be glad to get in touch with some one who does tatting or crocheting and who would exchange work with me. I make English mat work, something entirely new to America. I wish to correspond with some one who appreciates hand work. I will just add, God bless the work of the Corner and may it long continue! If invalids or lonely women will write to me I will try to make life more cheery for them. I am 22 years old and several hundred miles from parents, home, and friends, so you can see I am often lonely, too. MRS. G. M."

Such an offer as either one of these is likely to be appreciated and accepted. I shall give her address to any one writing for it and sending a self-addressed and stamped envelope.

Learned Lip Reading.

"I saw a notice in a recent issue of a deaf woman, Mrs. A. M. H., who would like to learn lip reading. I am deaf myself and can scarcely hear a sound. I have gradually lost my hearing. But somehow, thanks to our Heavenly Father, it has come natural to me to read lips. I cannot understand any other way, as I cannot hear the voice, but I am able to make my own living. If you will send me the address of Mrs. A. M. H. I will write to her and tell her what I know about lip reading, and if she has friends who have time they can help her to learn. It will take time and patience for her, but it will pay. "M. C."

The address asked for was sent at once, and I hope most earnestly that the afflicted one may receive advice that will help her. Although M. C. did not give me permission to use her name, I shall put it on file, and it may be that she will consent to help a few others by her counsel. If any one writes for this name and address, please send a stamped and self-directed envelope for reply, and recollect to follow the same course if writing to M. C. for information about lip reading. Since she is self-supporting it is not fair to put upon her the burden of answering letters and of paying postage on them besides.

Preserving Fruit to Exhibit.

"Can you tell me how to prepare fresh fruit for exhibit, such as real estate offices show—strawberries, raspberries, plums, apples, etc.? I want to keep the natural color of the fruit. J. A. M."

Personally I know of no wholesome method for preserving fruits in this way. They can be put up with salicylic acid or other chemicals which keep the natural color of the fruit but not only impair the taste, but render the fruit indigestible, if not practically poisonous. If any one can tell our housekeepers of a harmless method for putting up fruits so that they will present the fresh and highly colored appearance desired by the correspondent I shall gladly print it here, provided no proprietary article is mentioned in the process.

Hard to Get Along.

"I am the mother of five small children. My husband is a laborer and earns small wages. I find it hard to get along and have even the necessities of life for my little 'gang.' Has any little girl a doll or a doll buggy that she has outgrown? I have two little girls who would enjoy such things so much and an older girl who would like bright quilt scraps or silk pieces. I have nothing to offer in return at present, but trust I may have something later on. S. E. C."

Has any one the articles she desires for her children? Sometimes I am sure it is easier to get along without necessities than without pleasures for one's children, and I think this is a case in point. I hope the toys and pieces she asks may be forthcoming, and I will be happy to give her address to any one writing for it. I am sorry not to be at liberty to give the address of "Unhappy" that is requested by the correspondent, but her identity is not to be made known. Her letter indicated a morbid tendency, and it was only natural that she should wish her name withheld and be approached only by letters printed in the Corner.

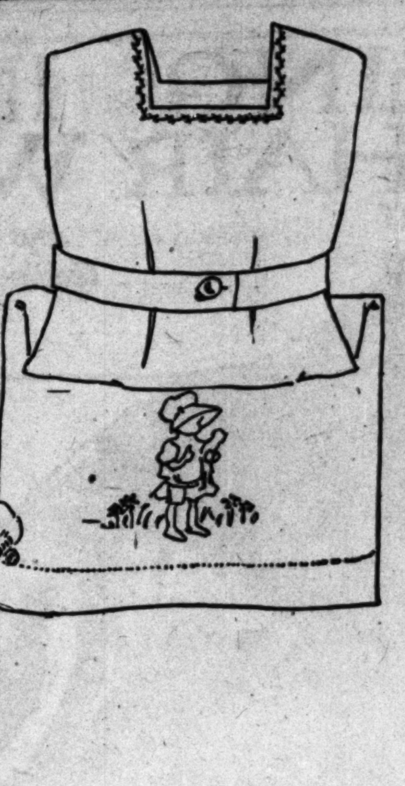
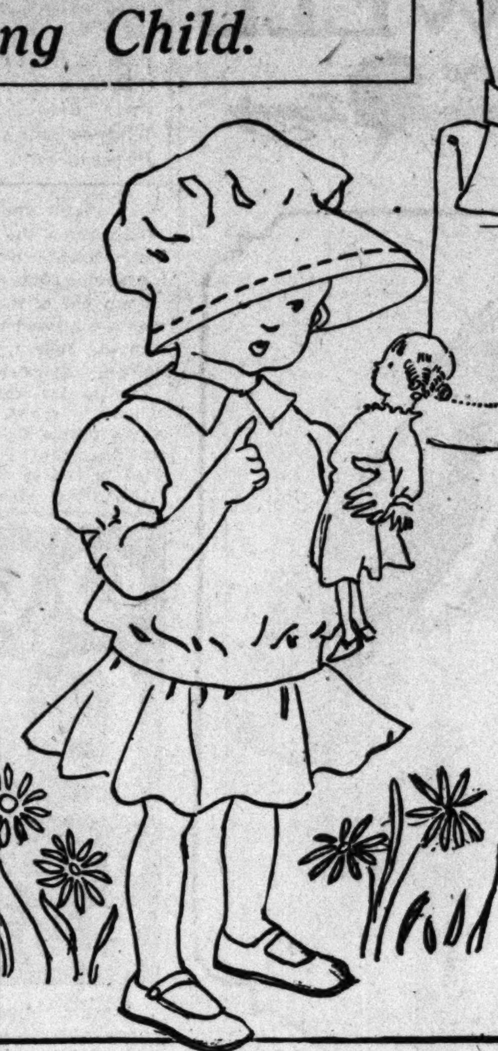
Plans Difficult Problem.

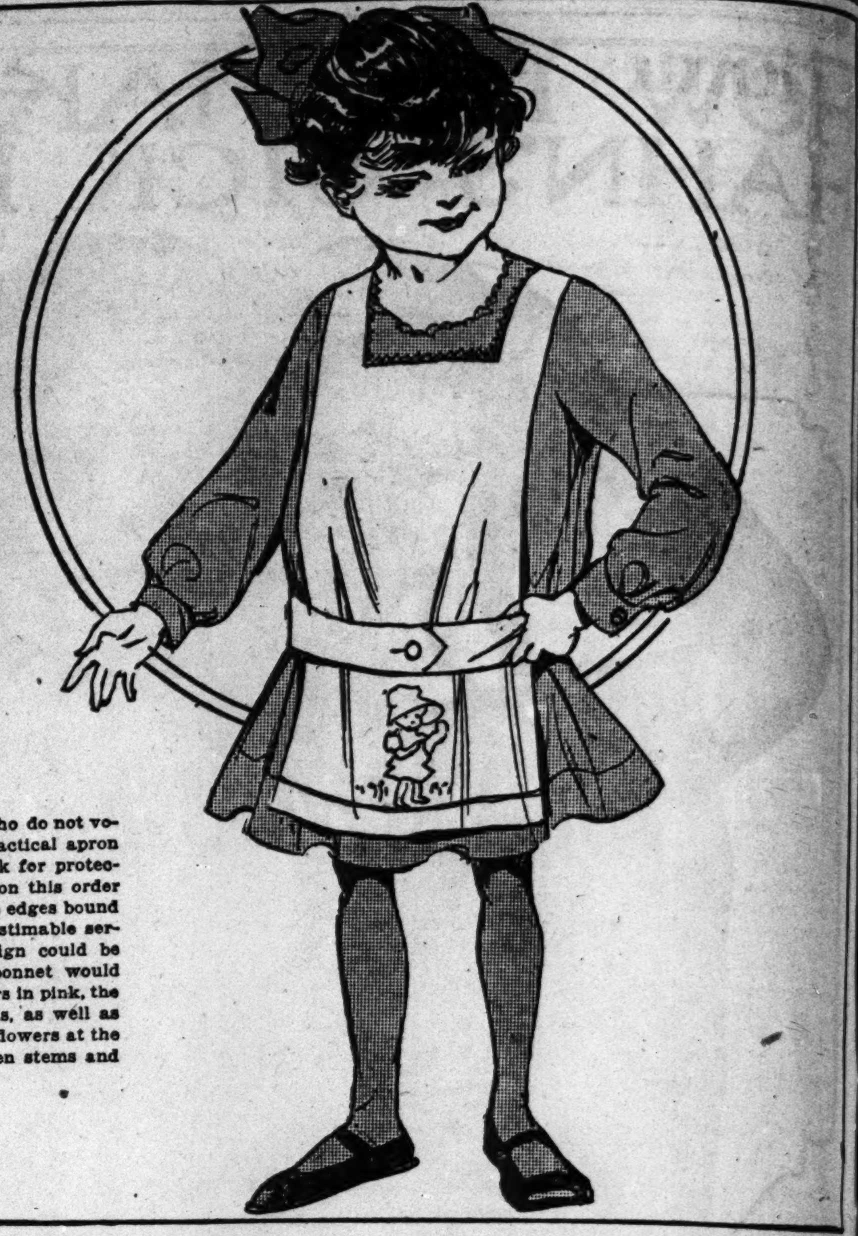
"Perhaps some reader of the Corner can solve my problem. I am both an orphan and a widow, 34 years old. I am not strong, so work is not a matter of choice, but is the lightest I can get. I work as a cashier in a picture show from 10 o'clock in the morning until 3 in the afternoon. Then there is two hours' relief for lunch and shopping, and I come back again at 5 o'clock and stay until 10 in the evening. As I work seven days a week I have no time or chance for amusement or to meet people until after 10 p. m., and then all parks and theaters are closed. I don't go to cafés, so how can I find some place to hear music or something else to break the monotony? Before I begin my day's duties it is too early in the morning for anything but a street car ride, and the early cars are crowded with people going to work. A woman cannot go for a walk alone after 10 o'clock at night without being molested. In the little room I occupy in a small hotel I cannot entertain. Can any of the readers help with suggestion for a good, clean amusement after 10 o'clock at night? M. H."

I do not know what advice others may have to give, but the problem sounds rather difficult to me. So far as the exercise is concerned the early hours of the morning are the best for walking, and I should think that by taking a car going in the opposite direction from that which leads to the shops, etc., it might be feasible to get a ride now and then without being too much crowded. Also it might be possible to slip in for part of a concert or something of the sort in the time between 3 and 5 p. m. One does not wish to shop every day or to give the entire two hours to luncheon. When it comes to entertainment after 10 o'clock at night I do not see how the question can be met and I shall be happy to grant space in the Corner for a reply. Newspapers workers whose duties hold them all the evening have the same sort of difficulty in finding opportunities for social relaxation, and this trouble is one which must afflict nearly every one who has a position in a box office or other place of the sort. I should think that one who has worked from 10 in the morning till 10 at night with only two hours off would desire nothing so much as to go home to bed at the end of the time, and would prefer dispensing with any entertainment except such as she can find in the early morning hours.

An Embroidered Apron for the Young Child.







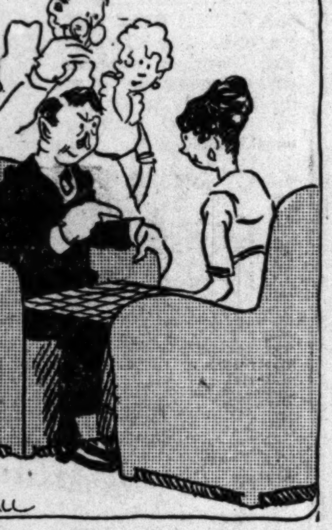
There are few children who do not vociferously object to the practical apron worn over the festive frock for protection. An apron something on this order of white poplin and with the edges bound with white braid is of inestimable service. The embroidery design could be done in colors. The sunbonnet would look well in blue, the rompers in pink, the face, arms, shoes, and socks, as well as the doll, in tan. As for the flowers at the side they should have green stems and blue or pink tops.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Any Way to Get Him.

They were playing checkers one rainy evening. She was winning, as usual. His next move would force him to give away one of his three remaining men. So, in order to gain time and plan ahead a little, he said, with a wink to the rest of us: "O, you wouldn't be so cruel as to take me like that, would you?"



With her mind intently on the game and her face sober as a judge, she said: "You bet—any way to get you."

He declares she proposed. She says he did. They are married now, and the happiest couple I know. But—who proposed? E. R. T.

She Would and She Did.

She was a vivacious young woman, somewhat wilful and headstrong, but lovable, too. When she would, she would. Her snapping black eyes could tell you that.

One summer a carnival came to town, and among the attractions was a high wire performer, who was to walk a wire stretched from the hotel, a three story affair, to a building across the street. At the time set the feat was gracefully performed, and this young woman, who happened to be among the watchers, exclaimed: "I'm going to marry that man!"

She followed him to his hotel, and by some hook or crook met him. When the carnival left town at the end of the week she went, too, as Mrs. High Wire Performer. M. E. W.

CUTICURA HEALED ECZEMA IN 30 DAYS

Had Been on Hand Three Months. Itched Causing Constant Pain.

"I was affected with eczema on my left wrist. It began in pimples and the skin was red and sore, and crusted and scaled. The pimples got white and itched causing constant pain, and looked awful bad.

"I began to treat it and it spread over half my wrist and the side of my hand. It had been on my hand about three months when I commenced to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days it was better, and in thirty days I was healed sound and well." (Signed) Chas. O. Baker, Shoals, Ind., April 22, 1916.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are not only most valuable for the treatment of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, dandruff and irritated scalps, but their great mission is to prevent such conditions. Cuticura Soap used exclusively for the toilet and Cuticura Ointment occasionally as needed guard the skin and scalp in most cases against any troubles of this kind.

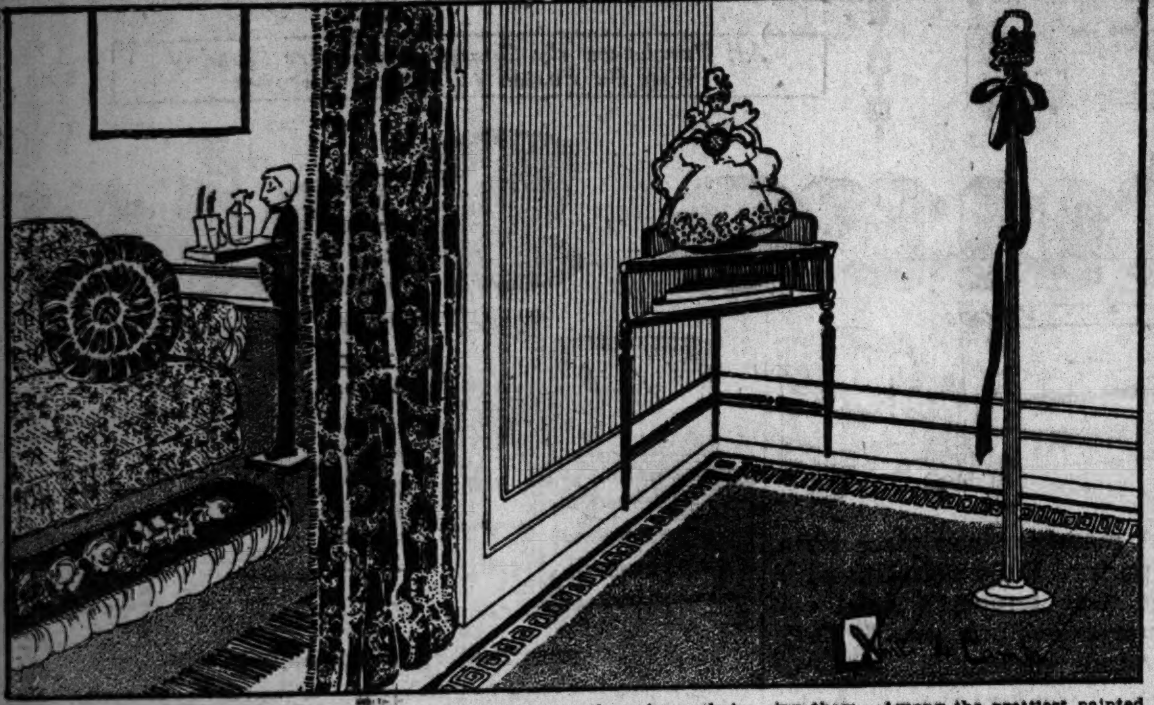
The Home Harmonious

NOVELTIES IN ACCESSORIES

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

EVERY season brings its own special quota of novelties in the way of accessories to home furnishing—some good, some bad, and some indifferent. Some, too, have an ephemeral sort of quality that make them good "for the moment."

When drawing rooms, for example, have donned their linen or chintz slip covers for the summer, the rooms take on an air of simplicity that makes expensive bric-a-brac, rich draperies, and elaborate cushions seem almost out of place. It is pleasant to substitute real summery looking novelties for a while, to pack away certain rich embroideries and objects of art, and to replace them with inexpensive baubles that are of little use excepting as bits of color and that we will probably be glad to give away or sweep out at the end of the season.

Flat little wooden figures, "hand painted"—unpardonably so, in most instances—have sprung up like a mushroom crop of pigmies all over town. The majority of these figures are so badly drawn and so monstrously colored that they are downright amusing. They are mostly female figures and come like a miniature suffragist corps, all "armed with a purpose."

One smiling lady, scroll sawed from thin piece of good and painted in a voluminous pink dress and bonnet, has a large round hole in her chest. Her "purpose" is to have the mouthpiece of the telephone unscrewed and to have it screwed back on to the instrument through the hole in her chest. She then hangs down suspended by the mouthpiece and forms a screen to hide the telephone. There she is in everybody's front hall—queen of the telephone stand.

Of course, it would be much easier to amputate the lady's diaphragm if you cut her out of cardboard instead of holly wood. Any child could make such a telephone screen and paint it up like a paper doll.

The accompanying sketch shows several of the season's novelties. The tall stick in the foreground surmounted by a basket of flowers is to hang a hat upon. It is a decorative trifle enameled in any light or dull color to match the color scheme of the room.

The little compo basket is in imitation of Italian carving. It is first gilded and then painted in polychrome. A pair of these hat poles makes a charming addition to a woman's bedroom. They are placed at either side of the dressing table and the maid, in laying out her lady's clothes, places upon the poles a choice of two hats.

Among the most practical pretty things of the summer are the long, narrow floor cushions, as shown beyond the curtains in the sketch. These cushions are stiffly stuffed with felt and covered with any desired material. They are finished with ornamental handles at either end. To young people who like to sit out on the front steps they are really joyful perquisites. Originally designed to be used full length before the living room davenport, it is easily seen that they just exactly fit the length and width of a front step.

The one shown here has a top of black velveteen, appliqued with chintz, flowers, a dull gold cord, and dull green silk puff. Covered with a slip of chintz or linen, it would be the nicest sort of thing for the children to sit on when they are tubbed and dresser for the afternoon.

The little wooden butler standing on a square block is ingenious. His costume is soberly painted black and his flat wooden tray can be used for either smoking or drinking equipment. He stands awaiting orders respectful and patient—really a most exemplary servant.

Birds and butterflies figure largely in porch and garden ornament. Some lifelike celluloid butterflies are on thin wire sticks, so that their weight makes them bob with the least breeze. Birds of all kinds are used, from the ugly, realistic, stuffed looking imitations to Copenhagen wares, exquisitely glazed and tinted. Cubist birds on plant sticks add their bit of color to many a flower bed this year.

But the stick of the day is the lady's garden stick. These slender walking sticks so prettily affected at garden parties in summer homes are made in black and colors. The handles that surmount them may be either simple and amusing or extravagant, according to the taste of the owner. A stick that has won its way into popularity has a round crystal head, into which the owner is wont to gaze and "see" for a friend the mysteries of his future.

The mystic ball is not confined to cane heads. Large gazing balls of highly glazed silvered crystal are placed on pedestals for indoor use and out.

Door stops, instead of being heavily weighted, are backed with a wedge shaped piece of wood with a rubber bottom. The door is held by the wedge and the upright piece in front of it is purely ornamental.

Attractive little baskets, made up for garden use, are of wicker, glazed in color, and further painted with peasant flowers. They are filled with garden tools, all having handles to match the basket. In addition to the tools the basket contains a pair of garden gloves, having the glazed and colored gauntlets also adorned with painted flowers. With this set comes a kidney shaped wicker tray, on which is a thin cushion covered with cretonne. On this one is supposed to kneel while weeding the flower bed.

So innumerable are the attractive tricks produced for the straw hat season that space allows of barely mentioning them. Among the prettiest painted things are black tin trays, black tin bungalow camp lanterns, watering pots, with extremely long spouts, mail boxes, and flower pails.

Electric fans are enameled and made on long or short stands, in old ivory or color. The long ones are as high as standard lamps.

Wicker troughs are made for holding books, and wicker flower boxes have cunning trellises made to them upon which vines can be trained, forming a charming screen to place on the porch railing or the window that is too close to the sidewalk.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. W. H. B.—Consoles or side tables are frequently used in preference to sideboards. Do not hesitate to press the table that you have into service in this way, but do not use the mirror in conjunction with it. Put your mirror in one of your bedrooms instead. Allover carpeting is now being used, particularly where the floors are not all that they should be. If you have an automatic cleaner, use the allover carpeting. A carpet that has come back into favor is the old fashioned Brussels, that is inexpensive and wears like iron. Personally I prefer the Wilton.

PAUL D. B.: Yes, it would be well to have the rugs in your two adjoining rooms alike. The color you have selected would be in good taste.

* *

MRS. M. E. L.: All pinks tinged with yellow and cream color are harmonious together. See that everything else used in the room where you use these colors is also key to yellow. Cream color and pink stripe sunfast would be nice for the windows.

* *

MRS. A. T. K.: Yes, figured cretonnes are very popular. If your upholstery is figured, however, select plain portieres instead. Not knowing the sort of furniture and curtains you have, it is difficult for me to advise you.

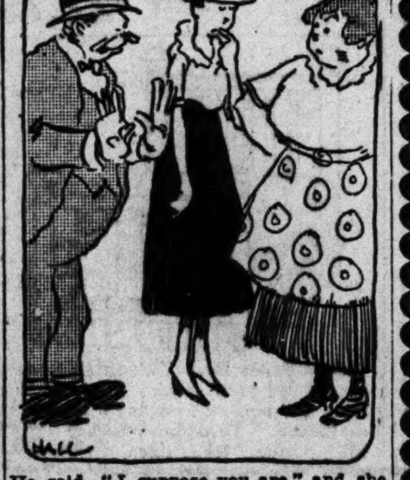
Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Home to Mother.

The morning after they were married the husband got up and built a fire and put the teakettle on the stove. He then went out to do his chores, as they live on a farm.

When he came in his wife was still in bed. He went to the bedroom and his wife asked him who was to get breakfast.



He said, "I suppose you are," and she said, "I never got breakfast in my life and I don't know how."

Then he went out and finished his chores. When he was through he came in and got breakfast, called his wife, and told her breakfast was ready. After breakfast he told her to get ready, as he was going over to her mother's. When he got there he said to her mother: "Here is your daughter; you can keep her till she knows how to do something." The AMATEUR GARDENER

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to the Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

The Freesia.

AS a winter bloomer the freesia has of late become popular, its dainty and delicately colored flowers being in great demand for the better class of bouquets, along about holiday time, at which period it is generally at its best. As a table decoration a vase of it is ideal, combined with a few fronds of Adiantum fern or some branches of asparagus plomusus nanus.

It has not been grown to any great extent in the winter window garden, where other bulbs are used so effectively. It well deserves a place there, however, and those who grow it will be so well pleased with it that they would not willingly be without it thereafter.

The freesia is a native of the Cape of Good Hope. It was introduced into this country many years ago, therefore it is not what may be called a new plant, but for some unaccountable reason it seemed to drop out of sight shortly after its introduction, and in all the years that have elapsed since it was brought here it has been neglected, and few except a small number of professional gardeners have known there was such a plant until recently.

Our up to date gardeners are always on the lookout for something new and novel, and some of them happened to recollect having seen this plant, shortly after its introduction, and the idea occurred to them that it might be worth giving a trial as a winter bloomer, and the result is that it is now a standard flower for forcing in winter.

While the freesia is related to the Irid family, which includes the iris, the gladiolus, the crocus and the tigridia, it requires a treatment quite unlike that which is given those plants. Being tender it cannot be used in the outdoor garden, and its cultivation must be confined to the window garden and the greenhouse.

It is easily brought into bloom in the window garden. But it should not be treated as we treat the hyacinth and tulip. Instead of being potted and put away in a dark place to form roots, it can be potted and placed in a warm light room at once. I would advise using half-dozen roots of it in a six inch pot of turfy loam and sand. Planted singly, it would not be satisfactory, as it is of such slender growth that one plant would not give a pleasing effect.

Water it well at planting time, and then set aside in a warm corner to get a start. Do not apply more water until growth of top is seen.

After the flower crop has faded expose the pot to full sunshine to ripen the roots. When the foliage turns yellow set the pots away in a moderately cool place without disturbing the roots. Let the soil dry out almost entirely during summer. In September shake the roots out of the old soil and repot them.

By planting at intervals a long succession of bloom can be obtained.

The flower stalk of the freesia is slender and must be tied to supports of wire or something else inobtrusive as it reaches up. If this is not done it will crinkle down before flowering time arrives, and the crop of flowers will be in danger of being spoiled.

In color the flowers of this delightful plant are pure white, or white with a blotch of pale orange on the lower division of the perianth. In shape they somewhat resemble the gladiolus, but they are so much smaller that the two can hardly be compared. They average an inch and a half or two inches in length, and are borne in spikes which are depressed at the extremity, as if an accident had happened to the stalk and half broken down the flower spike.

The flowers stand nearly upright on the horizontal stem. The foliage is sparse and grasslike. All the beauty of the plant is in its blossoms, which have a rich, fruity tropical fragrance that will fill a room when a few of them are used in it.

The flowers of this plant last well after cutting, and on that account they are popular for table decoration and corsage bouquets. If those who have never grown it will give it a trial the coming winter I am sure they will not be willing to go without it afterward.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Vera was taken on a fake trip and carefully stowed away in a berth without being wakened. Sometime during the night she did wake up and realize the unfamiliarity of her bed. Her mother was disturbed by a perplexed little voice saying, "What is dis? Baby wants to get out o' dis." M. S. P.

Mary, writing a letter to her father, after mentioning the various members of the family told about the dog, Frisky. She said: "Frisky is as well and as frisky as ever and I hope you are the same." M. G.

* *

Sam and Tom had been fighting and Sam, the aggressor, was shut in the bedroom until he was sorry. He bawled loudly for a time and then was silent.

"Is mother there?" he asked, cautiously.

"No, but I am," Tom replied.

"Well, you'd better get ready," said Sam, "for I'm beginning to feel awful sorry." Mrs. P. I. L.

George was often sent to look after baby in her buggy. One day, hearing her cry, I said, "O, there's baby!"

He was playing, and, fearing to be interrupted, said hurriedly to me what I was in the habit of saying to him: "See how smart you can be; run and give her the bottle." E. D. C.

Louise and her mother were expecting grandma and Aunt Marie for lunch. Louise's mother had rather a late start in getting dressed and said to the youngster, "Dear me, I'm afraid I'll never be dressed by the time grandma and Aunt Marie get here."

Louise quietly remarked, "O, what do you care, mother; you know them so well?" W. H.

My 4 year old niece has recently had her first sleeping car experience. Yesterday she came with a distressed look, saying her tooth ached.

"Which tooth is it?" I asked.

Opening her mouth, she said, "Here, in the upper berth!" L. B.

Housekeeping Experiences.

Did you make absurd mistakes when you first started housekeeping? Of course you did. Every bride has. So tell us about it. And if you are a man—well, surely you can remember what your wife did. The funnier the experiences the better. For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Keep your story on one side of the paper and within 300 words and address it to Housekeeping Experience Editor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts returned.

One Leg Short.

We had been married but a week and were in our honeymoon cottage. Wishing to be friendly with our neighbors, my husband gallantly volunteered to kill a chicken for a housewife whose husband was gone.

He had a cream colored linen suit on, this being before the days of the popular Palm Beach variety. His kindness resulted in the acquisition of a number of spots of blood from the fowl splattered on one leg of his pants while he used the hatchet on its neck.

Then me to the rescue. "I can wash that out in a minte," I volunteered. He gladly changed his clothes, proud of my accomplishments, and I washed out the stains, taking care not to get the other trouser leg wet. After I ironed out the trouser leg he again dressed in summer attire and went downtown.

How the boys at the drug store kidded him, for one trouser leg was six inches shorter than the other! And I laughed, too, when he came home, and then we had our first quarrel. A. H. S.

She Held It Down.

The first breakfast I prepared for my husband I served soft boiled eggs.

The table was daintily arranged, but when he opened his eggs, the first one was utterly bad.

I said, in all my youthful wonderment: "Why, that was the very egg that caused me so much trouble; it kept coming to the top while I was boiling it, and I was obliged to hold it down with a spoon." O. M. L.

August Furniture Sale

contains news of other sales at The Fair tomorrow. Don't fail to read both of these ads.

WITHIN the last six months furniture prices have advanced from 20% to 30%. Expecting this rise we filled our warehouses with furniture at the old prices. Besides, we kept factories busy during dull seasons—an old story, probably, but never a truer one than in the case of this August furniture sale, accounting, in a great measure, for the extraordinarily low prices that we quote.

ESTABLISHED 1875 BY E. J. LEHMANN
THE FAIR
The Store of To-Day and To-Morrow
STATE, ADAMS & DEARBORN STS., PHONE PRIVATE EXCHANGE 3

WE have built up our enormous furniture business upon the solid foundation of "quality." We realize that when we sell you a piece of furniture we are placing, in your home, a permanent advertisement of this store. We want that advertisement to be favorable—we want that furniture to give you satisfaction every day of the year. We know that all furniture bought in this big sale will support all of our "QUALITY" claims.

Charge Notice

Upon request at the Credit Department, 3rd floor, tomorrow's charge purchases will be entered on August accounts.

Chicago Behind in Relief Work for War Victims.

By Mme. X.

THESE midsummer doldrums are an annual actual and psychic condition sent us for the good of our souls and bodies. While, without any exertion on our parts, our pores are eliminating long collecting poisons—hug that thought to yourself if you feel inclined to grumble at the heat—our minds are halting for the moment those steadily grinding wheels which direct our manifold energies.

Think what these same energies have accomplished in the last two years—for it is just two years since the horrible storm in Europe burst on the world. America's part has been that of the sympathetic bystander offering help to all of the victims of the continuing catastrophe. Chicago alone has contributed in that period $1,009,000, and that is without abating contributions to local philanthropies.

Nearly half of this million and more has gone to the German-Austrian Red Cross, $250,000 to the Belgian relief, $112,000 to the Italian relief, $50,000 to French war orphans, $32,000 to the Poles, $20,000 to the American Fund for French Wounded, $15,000 was collected by Herbert Ward for the War Relief Clearing house, $12,500 was donated to the American Ambulance hospital at Neuilly, $6,500 to the Appui aux Artistes, $3,500 to the war orphans [a different enterprise from the French war orphans], $5,000 to the Serbian relief, and $2,500 to the Appui Belge.

This does not include contributions to England, which were considerable; also those to Russian, Armenian, and other sufferers. Nor does it take into account the innumerable cases of personal subscriptions or of smaller funds sent to individuals abroad in all the warring countries.

Mrs. Russell Tyson reports that from the French war shop, in East Washington street, there have been shipped to France 1,170 cases of hospital supplies, besides, direct from New York, great quantities of anaesthetics, and, from here, the two ton motor truck for the conveying of such supplies from the Paris headquarters to the outlying hospitals.

And yet Chicago is said, by those familiar with the war relief work in other cities, not yet to have done her share. So, we must be up and going, not forgetting that our own Red Cross should head the list of our responsibilities.

Scatter for August Holidays.

Letters from our sweltering troops near the Mexican border tell us that the roof garden on the hotel at San Antonio is a source of comfort to those of our khaki clad men who can attain it. Eighteen dollars per month does not permit of much roof gardening, however. The why of this whole Mexican border business grows louder, larger, more insistent.

Meanwhile, others less unlucky in their expression of patriotism than those plucky ones camped along the Rio Grande are beginning to scatter for August holidays. The third section of the 8 o'clock train on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy tomorrow night is to be devoted to a party of fifty-seven Chicagoans, all going out to the Rockies—though not all to the same place—for recreation and sport.

Among this fifty-seven are the Charles Garfield Kings, with their three children; the William E. Clows, with a party of fifteen; the Francis Johnsons and Miss Mabel Linn; the Howard Eltings and their two children; the Robert Hotzes and their son and daughter, and the F. C. Lettses and their children.

The fifty-seven go together as far as Sheridan, Wyo., where they separate, part going to the H. T. Bar ranch and the rest to Tepee Lodge.

Scenic Spot in Big Horn Range.

The latter is a most picturesque spot, nestled in a cup near the top of the Big Horn range, and is run by an Englishman, Michael Evans, a nephew of the late Lord Portsmouth. It consists of a collection of roughly built log houses along the bank of a merry little trout stream. Pine woods climb the steep slopes of the mountains that rim the settlement.

The place is reached by one of the most beautiful drives in the west. The road, after it leaves the Big Horn valley, zigzags up the face of the rather abrupt mountains, each turn giving a more superb view of the constantly widening valley and the distant Rockies. The air is so clear that one can see almost down to the entrance to the Yellowstone park, which lies some fifty miles to the south. And so dry is that region that you get the same rich pink, rose, and lavender tints you get in the sunburned parts of Italy and Spain.

In summer Teepee Lodge is full of life and changing groups of people. In winter the Evanses live there entirely alone, buried in deep snow drifts, most of their provisions stored in the various caves Mr. Evans has constructed in nearby rocks. Once or twice a month he goes down on snow shoes to the little village of Big Horn, itself fourteen miles from a railway station, for mail and such few supplies as the little family up on the heights may need. O, you, whose telephone bell rips the air without intermission, whose motor horn snorts to warn the world of your swift passage, whose days and nights are filled with human intercourse, think of what life must mean in that lonely, silent, snow stifled mountain nook!

Diversion for Deserted Husbands.

There are many ameliorations to a summer in Chicago of which the deserted husbands of a generation ago never knew. There were no country clubs then to give them asylum from the city's sounds, smells, and dirt; no motors to carry them swiftly hither and yon; no open air gardens where music, food, and cooling beverages made an ideal combination. They sat on front steps and, for fearful dissipation, sent or went to a nearby ice creamery and brought back, in paper cases, ice cream for home consumption.

Not so today. The Saddle and Cycle club offers so grateful a haven for its members that many contemplate a sojourn in the nearby Edgewater Beach hotel, so as to be near this most delectable of clubs. Its big, cool, pale green swimming pool is the most popular rendezvous for its city bound patrons.

Nearer town, the Bismarck garden nightly draws great crowds. Its picturesque windmill, its beautiful, many colored fountains, its two big open air dance platforms, and its excellent music lure not only city folk, but even the more fortunate dwellers in the nearby country.

Apropos of the constantly changing, iridescent fountain and the music, which are such features there, why couldn't the former be trained to accompany the latter? A single jet, glowing pink, could spurt up into the darkness when flutes and violins shrilled high notes. At deeper tones the whole seething mass of glowing spray could settle down to soft, dull hues, to blaze forth in a mass of varied color when the whole orchestra bursts into tumult. It would be the ideal combination of color and sound of which poets, musicians, and artists dream. Try it, moving spirits of Bismarck delights!

And speaking of these gardens recalls the story of one of Chicago's prettiest, richest belles of two decades ago, who, when she heard that Bismarck had died, said: "Oh, I suppose, then, they'll close the garden."

Cozy Retreats from the Heat.

Nor are all summer joys in Chicago confined to clubs and public gardens. There is many a quiet secluded nook constructed by householders or flat dwellers which goes far to compensate for the drawbacks of city living in the warm season.

There is no more delectable spot in Chicago than a certain little ménage on the north side where, on a stone paved terrace raised a step from the ground, a big, gayly handled umbrella at one end shelters a table, and low, comfortable couch and seats, while at the other end of the terrace, under a fringed and striped awning, the three daily meals are served. A quaint balustrade of ancient design separates the terrace from a charming and tiny garden where paths meander among little but flourishing flower beds. A rim of poplars and screening shrubs shelters this lovely nook entirely from observation, though through the poplars' quivering leaves the softly brilliant lights of nearby Lincoln parkway provide perpetual moonlight effects for the inhabitants of this garden. At night Chinese lanterns illuminate the terrace and it takes a strong searching breeze to disturb them or the shaded candles on the dinner table, so well recessed is this miniature paradise.

Another Picnic for Children.

The lucky youngsters within the sphere of activities of the social service committee of the Children's Memorial hospital—of which committee Mrs. George Halleck Taylor is chairman—had their second picnic this summer on the north shore last Wednesday. The first one was a month ago at Mrs. Augustus Peabody's place at Winnetka. Mrs. Mark Cummings was hostess for this second affair.

Both times over fifty little boys and girls were brought out from Chicago's poorer districts and given a day on green lawns with a good luncheon, motor rides, and a parting gift of flowers to take home to fill their cup to overflowing. Games are arranged for them and it's always a radiant, though weary band, that returns to town.

Among those who helped entertain them on Wednesday were Mrs. Allen Haines, Mrs. Edward Cudahy, Mrs. William P. Martin, Mrs. Bertrand Walker, Mrs. Augustus Peabody, and Miss Martha Wilson, while the Mesdames E. F. Carey, George McKinlock, W. P. Martin, A. S. Peabody, Reuben Donnelly, E. I. Cudahy, Walter Brewster, Mark Cummings, and Frederick Upham lent their automobiles to take the children on the motor rides, which were their greatest joy that hot day.

What else is there, anyway, that gives the joy to rich or poor this fervid season that a swift run in a good car over smooth roads does? What equals a night ride in an open machine under the stars, with the headlights' glare turning the wayside shrubbery and commonplace groves into tropical jungles and mysterious forests, and the wind of your speed whistling past your ears? Who says machinery has destroyed poetry and romance? It has renewed and given new form to both.

Miss Higginson Engaged.

Many who met Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson's cousin, Miss Juliet Higginson of Boston, during her various visits to Chicago, will be interested to hear of her engagement to Frederick Goodwin, also of Boston.

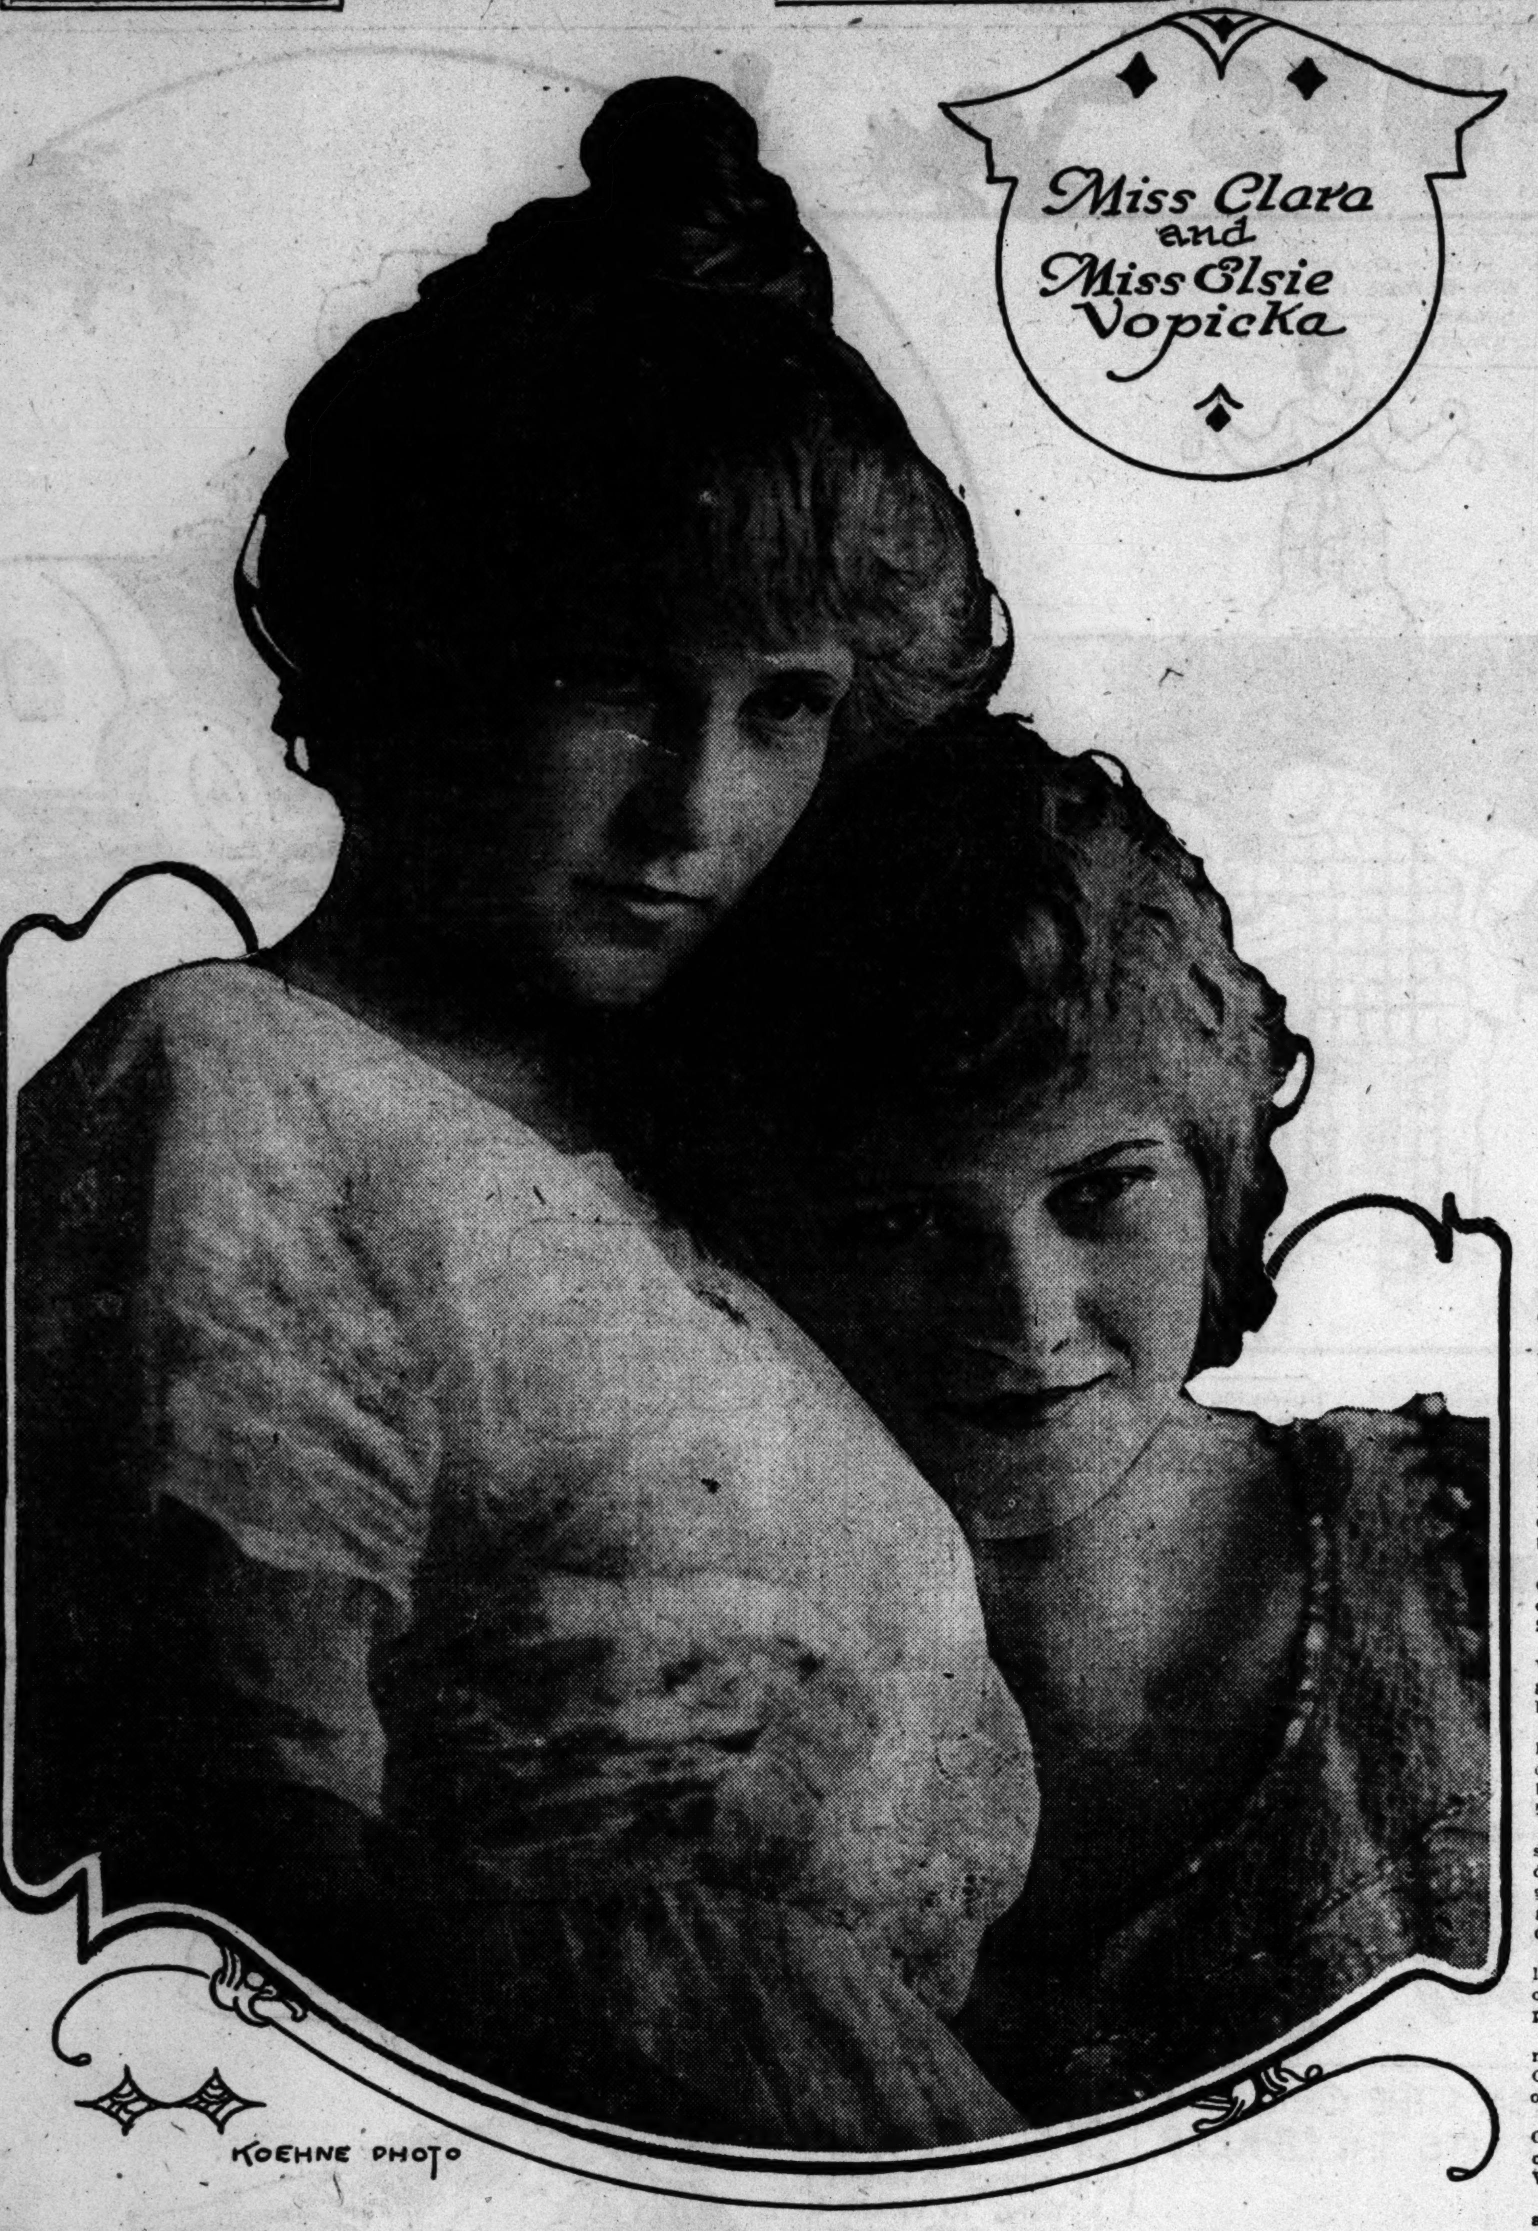
Miss Higginson is a niece of Maj. Henry Higginson, who might almost be called Boston's most distinguished citizen—except that superlatives are always perilous. He is widely known for many activities, chief among which is his support of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Miss Higginson herself is tall, dark, good looking, and of an unusually attractive personality. Mr. Goodwin is a young lawyer of promise. They are to be married in the autumn.

This column being eager to merit and sustain a reputation for accuracy hastens to correct an error as to Miss "Polly" Root, who was wrongly reported to us as having gone to France to run a motor ambulance. She is not doing anything so Amanzonian, but is quietly doing clerical work in the Paris headquarters of the association working for the smaller French hospitals. Her experience here in the Chicago committee of the American fund for French wounded having especially fitted her for such a task.

Mrs. Peter Dudley is daily on duty at a military hospital at Sceaux, just outside of Paris. She leaves Paris at 7:30 in the morning, works all day at various tasks in the hospital, and doesn't return to her own rooms until 7 or 8 o'clock at night. Peter Dudley is now on the sea headed for Bordeaux to do what he can to aid her and other Americans working for France.

Daughters of American Minister to Roumania; One of Them Engaged.



Miss Clara and Miss Elsie Vopicka

KOEHNE PHOTO

The Misses Clara and Elsie Vopicka, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Vopicka of 3251 Washington boulevard, have recently returned from two years at the American legation at Bucharest, Roumania, where their father is American minister. The engagement of Miss Elsie Vopicka to Edward M. Kralovic was announced last week at a house party at the family summer place on Lake Cora, Michigan. No definite arrangements for the wedding have been made, but it is understood that it will take place in the fall if Mr. Vopicka is able to return then from Europe.

New Fashion in Haircut Creates Some Excitement.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Newport was just beginning to take an interest in its precious flock of debutantes last week, most of whom are preparing to debut shortly, when more important news arrived from the front. Major Cornelius Vanderbilt had, the dispatches read, instituted a new style in haircuts.

At this particular stage of the season, with the early affairs left behind and the August rush just setting in, a new style in anything, even a haircut, creates some excitement. And when it is as near headquarters as the curly locks of Major Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is accorded the importance of telegraph tolls, then it becomes of increased interest. One stops to talk of it as one is about to pass another one in one's car, and though one admits that it is supremely silly, one does wonder just how many fool men will try it.

The major, it appears from the dispatches, during recent attacks of heat, shaved the back of his head half way to the crown. Finding it a most comfortable change in the semi-tropical climate of the Mexican border he advised his staff officers to go and do likewise, which they did. After which, as Ruggles might explain, it became decidedly vogue.

Newport Barber Not Sanguine.

Important news travels fast, and no sooner was it reported in the streets of Newport that the major had started this new style than Barber John Merker, who has cut the best hair of Newport at the Casino club for more years than he can remember off hand, was interviewed on the probable popularity of the new cut. Barber John admitted, though with the understanding that he should not be quoted, that there were many men in Newport whose hair needed cutting.

It frequently made a man ill, said he, to walk along Bellevue avenue and take note of the conditions of the gentlemen's heads. But he did not believe the Vanderbilt cut would ever become a fad in the east, much as he loved the major and would like to help him toward fame, but the shaved head might become popular in Fall River and Jamestown, however, he admitted. But not in Newport. It was hard enough, as he was saying, to get the men to have their hair cut at all, and therefore it was most unlikely that they would ever submit to so pronounced a change in style. So, if the major really thinks he has started something new he may accept John's word for it that he has done no such thing.

Miss Flora Whitney a Debutante.

To get back to the debutantes, the first of the expectant young women to be introduced to her mother's friends will be Miss Flora Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, as reported last week. This event is scheduled for next Friday.

The evening of the 5th Mrs. William Disston of Philadelphia will give a dinner dance at which she will introduce her daughter, Miss Pauline Disston, and a week later, on Saturday the 12th, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman will introduce their niece, Miss Ethel M. B. Harriman, at the Clambake club. The Harrimans are just now guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelso Cassatt at Rockry Hall, which the Cassatts have leased from the Paul Andrews until Sept. 1.

It was also expected that the two elder daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Allen, the Misses Dorothy and Joan Allen, would make their formal debut at Newport this summer. But it seems this is not to be. Their parents, so says rumor, have more ambitious plans for them. The girls are granddaughters of the Duchess de Dino and there is reason to believe that they may be presented to London society under the auspices of the duchess before they are permitted to make their debut on this side. The prolongation of the present unfortunate struggle abroad may, however, interfere with these arrangements. The war has been so hard on society.

Carnival Among August Joys.

No date has yet been set for the midsummer artists' carnival, but in all probability it, too, will add to the joys of August. This year it will serve also as a sort of housewarming for the new home of the Newport Art association in the Griswold mansion, and although no one in the colony would think of doing anything so crass as to deliberately organize a cabaret club, as did the artists' set recently in Bar Harbor, in order to inject a bit of life into various festivities it is admitted between whispers that the carnival will be a regular party.

With the numerous affairs of last season in town, such, for instance, as the beauteous Beaux Arts ball, to serve as samples, there is no telling just what the local committee will or will not do. Preceding the opening of the carnival, the colony juniors will give an afternoon masque on the lawns of the Griswold place.

Flying Over the Bay.

Among the advantages that accrue to the sportsman who invades the air in an aeropalne is that of being independent of wet grounds. There has been no golf at the Newport club for days because of the rains, and only yesterday arrangements were made with the local fire department to take a steamer to the grounds and pump out the holes on the course now filled with water.

There has been precious little polo for the same reason. But nothing has stopped William Earl Dodge from going up in his flying boat and taking a trip over the bay to Jamestown and back, save an occasional bank of clouds or a particularly high wind. Neither has anything stopped W. E. D. from inviting the bravest of the fair ones visiting his hangar to accompany him. Three of them did last week, though for fear of the excitement it would create in their respective families they are saying a little less than nothing about it.

Mr. Dodge is quite the modern magazine cover hero in his new aeroplane toggery. He wears a dark blue jersey and breeches of heavy tan material, puttees and boots to match. When he has a passenger he slips a heavy ulster over her sports frock, draws it close about her ankles, adjusts an aeroplane helmet over her truant locks, and provides her with heavy gauntlets. Those who have flown predict that within another year, or two at the most, air ferries to different points on the bay will be the most popular of any.

Diversions in Summer Colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont gave a big dinner at Belmead Friday night. On Aug. 7 Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones will give a dinner and dance at Sherwood and on the same date Mrs. William Disston will be hostess at a luncheon. On Aug. 16 Mr. and Mrs. Jones are to give another dinner dance at the Sherwood and on the 17th Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan are to give a ball at Bonnie Crest.

In fact, from the 5th to the 17th of August everybody is to be quite busy hereabouts. The polo tournament is scheduled to begin at the Westchester Polo club on Bateman's point on the 5th, and this will be run in connection with a tournament at Narragansett Pier. In the midst of the tournament the boats of the New York Yacht club will begin to arrive. On the 8th the races for the Astor cup will be held and on the 9th those for the King's cup.

As though this were not quite enough, the annual Newport dog show, under the auspices of the Rhode Island Kennel club, will open on the grounds of Buckingham house on Aug. 12, and two days later the annual invitation tournament will begin at the Casino. With the tennis tournament out of the way, the horse show will follow on the 24th.

Since the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. John Hanan at the Towers a fortnight ago, the formal season at Narragansett Pier may be said to be well under way. There is to be a bridge on Aug. 4 for the benefit of the Village Improvement association, and a bal de chapeau scheduled for the near future at the Casino, is causing considerable anticipatory interest. Talbot Hanan is in charge of the arrangements. The proceeds are to be devoted to the establishment of the proposed emergency hospital at the pier. Mrs. John Hanan has donated land for the hospital site.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of John Kean Roosevelt, "Teddy's" cousin, to Elise Weinacht of Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. Roosevelt is the son of the Emlen Roosevelts and is quite successful as an amateur farmer. Miss Weinacht has been the recipient of considerable praise for her drawings

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY.

Mrs. Nathan William MacChesney of 568 Hawthorne place and her children, Alfred Brunson III. and Gordon, are at Lake George, N. Y., for the summer, where Col. MacChesney expects to join them after two weeks at Plattsburgh.

Mrs. Josiah E. Swaufield and children of River Forest, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. C. J. Latus, have gone to Mackinac island to spend the balance of the summer with Judge and Mrs. David Murray at their summer home.

Mrs. John Russell Winterbotham, who recently moved from 909 Lake Shore drive to 12 Scott street, is now at her summer cottage at Sugar Hill, N. H., in the White mountains.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Carr of Lake Forest are at Hyannisport, Mass. They will return early in August.

Mrs. George W. Child of Tallahassee, Fla., and her daughters will spend a couple of months with Mrs. Childs' brother, Henry Hull Hawthorne of Kimbark avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Vaux of 1520 Astor street will leave the first of August for the east to visit their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. De B. Whyte of New York, who are in the Pennsylvania hills for the summer.

Arthur Meeker of 3030 Lake Shore drive is staying at the Chicago club during Mrs. Meeker's absence at Beverly Farms, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Hampden Winston of 150 East Superior street are making plans for a cruise along the Atlantic coast in August. They will be the guests of Mrs. Winston's father, John Crosbie Breckenridge, on his yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Chandler of 744 Rush street are dividing their time between Lake Geneva and Chicago. Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart P. Young, and their baby son, Hobart P. Jr., are occupying the Selfridge place at Lake Geneva this year, and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler are with them for each week end.

Mrs. Walter Lytton of 60 East Chestnut street has returned from a motor trip to Vineyard Haven, Mass., where she visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Herbert Ware.

Mrs. Jules E. Lehmann of St. Louis is visiting her mother, Mrs. L. Fried of 511 East Fiftieth street.

Mrs. Marce H. Brown of 1407 Greenleaf avenue and her two children, Jack and Donald, have returned from a two months' trip east.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Harvey Lyon are making an extended trip through the east.

Mrs. Charles I. Ericksen is entertaining Miss Dorothea and Miss Theodosia Pister, Miss Esther Knapwurst, Miss Edna and Miss Florence Mai, Miss Bernice and Miss Arlene Procknow, Miss Gertrude Rice, Miss Margaret Schick, Miss Ruth Haring, and Miss Anita Fuhring at her summer place at Pistakee bay for her daughter, Miss Aletta Ericksen.

BATTLE CREEK SCHOOL OF HOME ECONOMICS Accredited MICHIGAN

AFFILIATED WITH BATTLE CREEK SANITARIUM

is the one science above all others that offers an unusual opportunity to young women: today it creates a vocation of the highest order. The thorough instruction in the many branches of this needful science, taught by efficient instructors, in the Battle Creek Sanitarium School of Home Economics, is valuable and practical. By it the student is fitted not only for successful home-making, but is prepared here for institutional service on a dignified and lucrative basis.

Through its affiliation with the Battle Creek Sanitarium the School affords exceptional, practical advantages. All the sciences relative to right and thorough living are found in the curriculum, which embraces two courses:

FIRST—a two-year course which graduates Dietitians for hospitals, sanitariums, industrial organizations, and public and educational institutions of all kinds.

SECOND—a one-year course which graduates housekeepers capable of applying scientifically, economically and tastefully all the theories of the culinary art.

Fall term opens September 13, 1916. Registration days, September 11 and 12, 1916.

AN ARMY OFFICER WRITES:

"I am more than pleased with what you have been able to do for the boy in the short time he has been with you. Every one speaks of his fine physical appearance compared with what it was when he came to you, and I know he is much more alert than he was before he went to St. John's."

This is unsolicited testimony from one who from personal experience recognizes the value of military training, and whose choice of a school would be correspondingly discriminating. He selected St. John's because he wanted a real military school. (Rated by the government as an "Honor School.")

Do you want your boy to grow more alert? Do you want him to have a fine, strong body? Do you want to properly develop his character? Send for our catalogue and let us tell you what we can do for him. Address Box 101, Delafield, Waukesha County, Wisconsin.

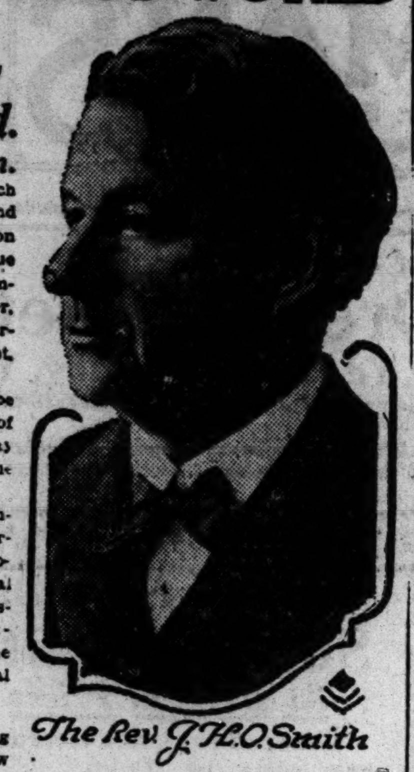
IN the RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches to Be Repaired During Vacation Period.

By the Rev W. B. Norton.



The Rev. J. H. O. Smith

TWO Presbyterian churches which will undergo extensive repairs and redecorating during the vacation period will be the Fullerton Avenue church, Fullerton avenue and Hamilton court, the Rev. F. M. Fox, pastor, and the Emerald Avenue church, Emerald avenue and West Sixty-seventh street, the Rev. Richard D. Hughes, pastor.

The Fullerton Avenue church will be closed for six weeks for the purpose of making the improvements. The Sunday school and prayer meetings will continue without interruption.

The Emerald Avenue church will install a new heating plant, new pews, carpets, and redecorating. Dr. Daniel Protheroe, director of music of Central church, the Auditorium theater, has assisted by organizing a choir at the Emerald Avenue church and singing at the Sunday morning service since the Central church has closed for the summer.

An example in Sunday worship among summer resorters is being set at Paw Paw lake, Michigan, by the Cottagers' Country club. H. W. S. Foreman of Chicago is chairman of the religious services. He has enlisted the services of the pastors at Watervliet, Coloma, and other nearby towns in furnishing speakers and singers. The Congregationalists, the Baptists, and the Methodists have each taken turns in rendering service. Walter H. Wienecke of Chicago, secretary of the Chicago Methodist Social union, superintended the Sunday school one session and the Rev. L. T. Foreman of Chicago preached. The Paw Paw cottagers say the effect of the instituting of religious services where formerly none were held does not take away from the pleasures of the day, but does exercise a restraining influence which is healthy.

Bruce W. Dickson of Chicago will take up his duties as state student secretary of the Young Men's Christian association on Sept. 1. He takes the place of W. W. Gethmann.

The Rev. Dr. John M. Moore of New York will preach today at the missionary movement conference at Lake Geneva, Wis. In the evening Miss Mary D. Uline will speak on the subject, "The Effect of War on Missions in Turkey." The conference opened last Friday and will continue until next Sunday night. Several denominations are coöperating in the conference. Among the deans from Chicago are the Rev. Herbert W. Prince, Protestant Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, and Miss Helen P. Patten of the Methodist Episcopal church board of Sunday schools, missionary department. William A. McKinney of Chicago is director of vespers and Miss Daisy Coleman of Chicago is chairman of the exhibit and demonstration committee.

Sunday, Sept. 3, will be Labor Sunday, and the departments of social service in the various denominations are ready to supply pastors with literature on the subject. The nearness of the date to the close of the usual vacation period has generally been found to be an embarrassment, but the date cannot well be changed owing to the fixed date of Labor day.

The Rev. J. H. O. Smith, after an absence of sixteen years, has returned to become pastor of the church he organized in 1897 and served for four years, the Metropolitan Christian church, South Leavitt and West Van Buren streets.

Dr. Smith is a graduate of Butler university and received from his alma mater the degrees of M. A., D. D., and LL. D.

The building first known as the People's institute, was erected by a stock company as a civic and community center. The building was sold. The Union Christian church was organized in the institute July 15, 1897, and Dr. Smith became pastor. The congregation paid rent for the use of the building. After four years Dr. Charles Reign Scoville became pastor and the church was reorganized and called by the name it now bears. Dr. Scoville received a gift of $30,000 and with that and other money gathered the institute was purchased. The church now owns and controls all of the property. It is adapted to institutional work on a large scale, having thirty-six dormitories and office rooms of various kinds. The auditorium seats 1,500 and has a stage capable of seating 500 when fully opened. Dr. Scoville, who is an evangelist, makes the church his headquarters and is coöperating in the new plans.

Dr. Smith is carrying on a thorough publicity campaign in the neighborhood of the church during the summer. It is the one large institutional plant of the Disciples in Chicago and Dr. Smith's return has put new hopes into the membership.

Union services of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Englewood, and the Englewood Presbyterian church are being held during July and August. Today the Rev. A. J. Francis, pastor of the Pilgrim church, will preach. He has preached during July, while the pastor of the Presbyterian church, the Rev. W. H. Robinson, was away on his vacation. Dr. Robinson will preach during August while Dr. Francis is away on his vacation. The meetings are held in the Presbyterian church. These two churches coöperate in maintaining the Englewood Sunday Evening club.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—I feel as if I had just taken intimate part in a wedding. One took place just an hour ago—in St. Margaret's, Westminster—and the bride spent the night in our hotel. Indeed, she was only three doors from me, and that is why I feel as if I had a hand in the wedding. All of the attendants were scampering through the halls and looking so excitedly pleased, and the bride had to have our help in getting hooked up, and we admired her bouquet, and told her we hoped she would be terribly happy—and everything; just as if it were not a wedding in war time! But it was.

The bridegroom had a leave of absence of three days from the front. That was all. He is, long before you read this letter, with his regiment, unless he is dead. It must seem awfully strange and unreal to him now to look back on that brief occasion, bounded on both sides by the hard experiences of the trenches, when he came to his own wedding, which was a perfectly society affair.

He and his bride are both awfully well to do. She and her parents came in from their country place for the occasion, and the groomsman and bridesmaid came from country estates. The bridal gown was of the conventional white satin and the bouquet consisted of little sprays of white lilies tied with airy white ribbons here and there.

O, it was a joyous occasion, as if earth contained no gloom. I keep wondering how it seems to him to look back on it. And the bride—I keep wondering, too, how it seems to her.

There was another occasion here in this hotel the other night, before the bride got here. I do not think she heard about it; at least I hope not. We were kept awake a large part of the night by women in hysterics. Every floor seemed to contain two or three, according to conversations of the next day. The reason for the widespread distress was that the women had all come in from their country places to meet their men, who were officers, and were due to come from the front on leave. They got as far as the edge of England, and were then turned back. A big engagement was evidently expected and the officers were needed at the front.

O, the irony, O, life's bitter cost! But why to try to comment on that which we can all feel but can never express. I was only saying that I hoped the bride did not know about this.

I kept thinking all during those little ante-nuptial preparations of this afternoon how it was that every one, especially the bride, could seem so happy. I think that if I had anybody at the front I could never smile. In vain have I looked in English faces to try to discover something of this gloom which I feel merely from being here. But I cannot see it. You would not know, except from the prices and khaki clad figures about and the women engaged in strange occupations, that the country was at war.

Perhaps you might guess it from the numbers of black bands displayed on the sleeves of khaki uniforms, and the number of men walking heavily on sticks. It has occurred to me, however, from the facial expressions of those wearing mourning that they are not deeply moved by their tragedy. On the arms of men it looks more like a badge declaring that their family has contributed its human quota toward the war.

At the Carleton the other night I saw two young bloods in evening dress get up from the dining table and arm in arm walk heavily on their sticks, when I am convinced they did not in the least need them. They "played up," as we say in newspaper phraseology, the fact of their connection with the fighting areas.

I was saying all this to an American who resides here.

"Well, you can't tell a thing about them," was his reply.

[Copyright: 1916: The Tribune Association (The New York Tribune).]

THE first year of the great war was marked by three well defined campaigns: the opening attack upon France, with its Belgian prelude, which began at Liege and culminated in the defeat at the Marne, and the engagements terminating in the battles of Flanders, by which the deadlock of trench war was made absolute from the sea to Switzerland; the Russian attack upon Austria, which began in the great victory before Lemberg, was continued by the subsequent victories in Galicia and the Carpathians, until in the closing days of April Russia stood at the edge of the Hungarian plains and but a few miles east of Cracow; the German attack upon Russia, which began with the overwhelming victory at the Dunajec about May 1 and was still continuing in victory on the first anniversary of the coming of Armageddon.

The history of the second year has been marked by five equally well defined major campaigns: the continuation and culmination of the great German attack upon Russia; the successful defensive stand of Germany in the west from August, 1915, to February, 1916, and her victorious resistance in the battles of Loos and Champagne; the splendidly successful Austro-German drive through Serbia to the frontiers of Greece and Bulgaria; the second German attack upon France in a campaign for Verdun; finally, as the year closes, the beginning of a grand concentric allied attack upon Germany and Austria, which has only just opened, but has already deprived Germany and her ally of the offensive on all fronts for the first time in the entire conflict.

Accepting these divisions as the basis for a review of the year and ignoring for the most part the minor and subsidiary operations, I mean now rapidly to survey these four great German campaigns and touch somewhat briefly upon the allied attack, which is just beginning and has as yet attained no decisive result in the larger sense, either in the east or the west, although in the former field its progress has been greater than any other advance on the allied side during the whole year.

Germany and Russia.

THE last days of July, 1915, saw the Austro-German drive against Russia in full swing. The fate of Warsaw was in doubt when the military critics were casting the balance for the first year, but it was not long to be in doubt. In rapid succession the fortresses that barred the advance of Hindenburg from East Prussia fell; Mackensen stormed on between the Pripet marshes and the Vistula. Warsaw fell, Ivangorod, Novo-Georgievsk followed the fate of Maubeuge and Liege, Warsaw was evacuated and the whole Russian line reeled backward to Brest-Litovsk and Kovno.

But there was no halting here. North and south the peril of envelopment continued, and so the Russian army went back behind the Dwina, behind the Pinsk marshes, and the Volhynian fortresses of Dubno and Lutsk fell to the central powers. Lemberg was lost, and there was left to Russia of all the fruits of her great Galician campaign only a tiny sliver of Austrian territory, the Tarnopol district.

August saw the whole world watching to know if the Russian army, the main army retiring from Warsaw by Vilna, would be enveloped and captured. A Sedan ten times magnified seemed imminent, and for a time German cavalry were across the only line of retreat of the greatest Russian army. But the Russians escaped, and in a few more weeks the eastern campaign had come to a deadlock, to a state of balance and a condition of trench conflict like the western.

Well might the Germans and the Austrians acclaim their stupendous achievement. A hundred thousand square miles of Russian territory, holding before the war over fifteen millions of people, had been conquered. Prisoners to the number of more than a million had been captured. Guns, supplies beyond estimate, had fallen into their hands. No campaign of Napoleon's had been on such a scale and no success of Napoleon's had won undisputed control of so much of the territory of one of the great powers of his own time.

Not unnaturally Vienna and Berlin proclaimed that the Russian phase of the war was over. Russia had received a blow from which it would take her years to recover and she had passed out of the reckoning for the term of the present war. Indeed, the press was filled with the reports that Russia was seeking a separate peace. At no time since the battle of the Marne had the fortunes of the central powers seemed so prosperous, and the German press promised its readers a victorious peace before snow flew.

Yet the truth was quite different. Russian armies had been terribly defeated, but they had retained their form and escaped destruction or capture. As for Russian purpose, in the hour of dejection the czar himself took the command of his armies, sent the grand duke to the Caucasus, and staked his dynasty on the continuance of the war and the restoration of Russian military power. Whether his act was spontaneous or the result of the impulse that sprang from the Russian people we cannot know, but the fact is that it was the first step in the wonderful renaissance of Russia, the consequences of which are now unfolded to a whole world and recognized by a Berlin that marvels as it confesses the mistakes of its calculations of the previous year.

And in this measure the German drive at Russia failed as the German drive at France had failed. France had parried the blow at the Marne and won the precious time necessary to reorganize her own military resources and obtain the help of a Britain still for long months to be unready.

Bloody battles at the Dwina, like those at the Yser, failed to change the eastern situation, and the effort to get Riga failed as the struggle for Calais had failed. Autumn saw the end of German offensive in the east. From the Carpathians to the Gulf of Riga the lines were to stand unchanged until the Russian flood, gathering behind this dike, should once more burst through and overflow into Galicia.

The real significance of the German failure against Russia was to be appreciated but tardily by a world justly impressed by the magnitude of the conquests in territory and by the splendor of the achievements of German generals and soldiers on the field. For many months France and Britain, quite as much as Germany, were convinced that Russia had shot her bolt, and a period of depression set in which was to endure for many months. Yet not impossibly the failure of the central powers in the summer campaign may be reckoned hereafter as the beginning of the end.

Germany's Western Stand.

THE closing days of September saw the long promised allied attack upon the German lines in the west. After many months of preparation, after a relative quiet which had lasted since the desperate and abortive French efforts in Artois in May and June, the French in Champagne, the British in Artois launched terrific attacks.

In ten days of bitter fighting the French advanced some three miles on a front of eighteen, took above 25,000 prisoners and many guns; they penetrated two lines of German trenches and at one point actually broke through the third and last.

But the result was nothing. The German line was restored, the French attacks were beaten down, the whole offensive was really over in three days, and in a week the world knew that the French had failed, although the considerable number of prisoners and the large capture of guns misled many into estimating as a victory what had been a defeat, for the German line had held.

In Artois the British fared even less well. Their initial success was considerable. There was a moment when the capture of Lens seemed inevitable, but old faults reappeared. The blunders of Neuve Chapelle were repeated at Loos; supports did not come up; ground won had to be surrendered; for great sacrifices in life there was little to show. The failure at Loos cost Marshal Sir John French his command and it condemned the British army to inaction, the British people to depression for many months. It was the beginning of a long series of disasters and reverses.

Here, then, was one more German success. The German lines had held, although masses of German troops had been sent to the east in the great attack upon Russia. Some of these had now to be recalled, and the failure in the east may have been influenced in a small measure by the allied pressure in the west, but only a little, for Russia had practically escaped when the attack began.

Allied failure in the west was a plain testimony to the fact that Britain was not yet ready, that France alone could not free her own territory; it finally denied all the hopes and claims of the allies that France would be freed, Belgium liberated, in 1915. The spring drive, so long forecast, came only in the closing days of September and had terminated in failure before October began.

German failure in the east had been strategic, her tactical victory had been overwhelming; that is, she had failed to capture or destroy the Russian armies, but she had beaten them in every battle and had gathered in great booty in men, in guns, in territory. The allied failure was both tactical and strategic; it was absolute, not relative; and conversely German success in the west was absolute because Germany had there obtained exactly what she fought for.

Germany Goes South.

MEANTIME a new situation demanded German attention. The allied landing at Gallipoli in the spring of the year had imperiled Constantinople. The Turk was making the finest fight in his splendid fighting history, but isolated from his allies by a hostile Serbia and an unfriendly Roumania, lacking in munitions and in guns, he was slowly giving evidences of an increasing weakness which might bring collapse.

Accordingly Germany and Austria planned and executed the most brilliant and successful campaign of the war. While allied diplomatists bargained with Greece and Bulgaria and restrained Serbian soldiers, who were eager to attack Bulgaria before she mobilized, Germany concentrated a great army on the Serbian frontier along the Danube and the Drina, gave the command to the ever victorious Mackensen, and prepared to open the road to Stamboul, to Cairo, and to India, as German prophets proclaimed.

At the agreed moment Bulgaria mobilized and attacked Serbia, Greece mobilized and remained neutral, Venizelos was ousted from power and the Serbian ally was left to perish under the threefold blow that was now to fall. And, brave as was the Serbian resistance, the fall was immediate. Austrian and German armies pushed south and east, Bulgarian armies entered Nish and swept Macedonia. An Anglo-French army arrived too late to cover the retreat of the Serbs by the Vardar and only a broken fraction escaped to the Albanian coast and found asylum in Corfu. Serbia and Montenegro were completely conquered and occupied, and the central powers paused only in sight of Salonica, where the allied army stood, as Wellington's army had stood, behind the lines of Torres Vedras when Napoleon swept the Iberian peninsula.

The immediate consequences of this successful campaign, which was as short as it was decisive, were enormous. The Gallipoli campaign came to an abrupt standstill, and the army, which had been, according to Churchill, within a mile of complete success, was now exposed to deadly peril, from which it was to escape with difficulty and only by ignominious retreat a few months later.

A British army, advancing up the Tigris valley, was presently to meet disaster and be compelled to surrender, because a great Turkish army, munitioned and captained by Germans, was freed to deal with it. The peril of invasion was to approach Suez and threaten Egypt, while Mahometan tribes in the desert behind were to begin the attack in the rear. Russian armies in the Caucasus were to be halted and turned back, and Teuto-Turkish activity was to extend to Persia and win brief success.

Berlin now proclaimed that Britain was to be brought to terms by the threat at Suez, the "heel of the British Achilles." British prestige in the whole east was to suffer, and the disaster of Gallipoli, the surrender of Kut-el-Amara, were to abase Britain in her own and the world's eyes as she had not been abased in a century.

For the moment, too, Germany had broken the ring of steel about her; she had opened her road to the east; she had bound Byzantium to Berlin and to Bagdad by the railroad she had been constructing in the years of peace. Napoleon at Wagram did not seem more sure of world power and European supremacy than did William II. in the days immediately following the Balkan campaign, when the prospectuses of his statesmen and his journalists dazzled the world and silenced, or all but silenced, the allied voices.

And yet the actual results of the Balkan success were pitifully small, measured by the situation nine months later. An allied army forming at Salonica acted as a restraining force and defended Egypt from the Chalcidice. A minor attack upon Suez ended miserably. In due course of time the grand duke stepped forward and, capturing Trebizond and Erzerum, threatened Anatolia from the landward side and swept through most of Armenia. Egypt was not conquered by invasion, nor did there come that internal revolution that Berlin so confidently forecast. Turkey was saved temporarily; the Gallipoli and Mesopotamian campaigns of the British were brought to nothing—to worse than nothing; Bulgaria was enlisted and Greece kept outside the allied camp; Serbia and Montenegro were transformed into new Belgiums, and Austria swept down through Albania and shepherded the Italian forces into Avalona. But this was all.

Germany had proclaimed that she would find victorious peace in Constantinople, as she had proclaimed that it was to be won in Warsaw and Brest-Litovsk. But there was no peace, and the allies at Salonica opened a new front, requiring fresh German and Austrian garrisons. The Balkan peninsula became for the Germans what the Spanish had been for Napoleon, and Salonica at the present hour continues to recall Lisbon and the lines of Torres Vedras, although Greece still refuses the rôle of Portugal.

Second Attack on France.

PEACE—victorious peace—having still escaped her, Germany turned all her energies to forging one more thunderbolt. Her hands were now free to deal with France again. Russia, weakened and bound by an Arctic winter, was out of the war for many months, if not forever. Britain was still unready, palpably and patently unready, Germany reasoned. Salonica was claiming British and French corps. There was time before Russia could "come back," before Britain could get ready, to make a final, supreme effort against France and deal with her and dispose of her.

So from November to late February Germany prepared that gigantic attack upon Verdun which in the last week of February suddenly claimed the attention of the world and for many weeks seemed certain to end in a crushing French defeat.

But Verdun, after the first chaos, indecision and blundering, held. The broken lines were destroyed; Castelnau, Petain, Balfourier came, and came in time. Before the old forts a second line was erected and the German advance was halted. The repulse of March 9 was fatal to German hopes for a sudden and sweeping victory, a piercing of the line, such as France had sought and missed in Champagne in September. The repulse of April 9 ended the possibility of success by any sudden and tremendous general thrust. Henceforth Verdun fell to the level of a siege operation and Germany advanced by yards over mountains of her own dead, while on the hills across the Meuse new French lines sprung up until the Verdun salient became the strongest sector in the French front.

Still Germany persisted and persists. Her generals and her statesmen reasoned, that France, wearied of the conflict, unaided yet by British counter attack, would give over the struggle; the battle for Verdun became an assault upon French confidence, endurance, nerves, and as such it endured for five months and continues; but now it has fallen from the highest estate in a world war, the focal point in the attention of a whole planet, and become an almost forgotten detail, as remote as Przemysl.

Coincident with the German attack upon France, Austria launched a drive at Italy, only less powerful and wholly similar in character. Stripping her eastern lines of men and guns, as Germany had stripped her Polish and Courland fronts, Austria collected a host in the Trentino and struck south along the Adige and Brenta valleys, the historic pathways of northern invaders, at Verona and Vicenza.

Austrian success was more immediately great than Germany's. Italian resistance crumbled; the mountains and valleys gained in the earlier attack were lost. Austrian troops victoriously repassed the old frontier and approached the plain of Venetia. For weeks the Austrian advance pushed slowly, steadily forward until Italian apprehension became great and an Italian ministry fell. It remains a matter for conjecture what might have happened had not Austrian troops suddenly been recalled by a new event which was to change the whole character of the war and serve as the opening move in the second allied offensive.

Never in the war had allied prospects looked darker than on May 1, when the Kut surrender, the Austrian advance, the slow but sure German pressure at Verdun all bore testimony to the strength and to the seeming invincibility of the arms of the central powers and the press talked of a coming German attack upon Russia that should carry to completion the work of the previous summer and achieve at Moscow what had been missed at Warsaw. The Irish rebellion added to the dismal face of allied prospects and even the French press began to murmur at the continued quiescence of British armies and the magnitude of the bloodtax levied upon the sons of the republic.

Germany Loses Initiative.

THE Russian victories in Armenia in the late winter, the fall of Erzerum and Trebizond, had been plain warning that Russian strength was gaining. But these events had failed to impress a world watching the terrible struggle before Verdun, and they carried no message to German and Austrian generals, who, confident of Russian exhaustion, continued to send troops from the east to the west and the south.

All through the first four months of the Verdun attack it was plain that Germany reckoned on precipitating a premature offensive by the British, and before their lines she massed most of the troops withdrawn from Russia. As the strain upon the French increased the British, as was natural, volunteered to begin, but Joffre did not count them yet ready and grimly held the French to the gigantic task on the heights of the Meuse.

But as Verdun held out, the time approached when Russia would escape from the chains of winter and the eastern field would be again fit for military operations. Still the world awaited, not a Russian attack, but that allied offensive which had been, in the minds of the uninformed of neutral and belligerent countries alike, scheduled for the spring; and when it did not come credit was given to German assertions that the Verdun attack had exhausted France.

On June 1, however, there came a sudden awakening. On a vast front extending from the Pripet marshes to the Roumanian frontier the Russian armies, heralded by tremendous artillery operations, stepped forward, broke the Austrian lines north and south, took the fortresses of Dubno and Lutsk, lost in the preceding summer, and began to sweep the defeated Austrian armies before them in a rout that recalled the worst of the Lemberg disaster.

In a month the total of prisoners claimed by the Russians passed 200,000; it has since reached 300,000. Guns, ammunition, supplies of every sort, fell to the victors. Bukovina was retaken. On the north Kovel was threatened and in the south Kolomea fell, and Cossacks again reached the summit of the Carpathians and began to flow down the Kirlibaba and Jablonitza passes toward the Hungarian plain.

Once more it was for Germany to come to the rescue of her Austrian ally, and fresh German troops pouring down from the north passed Kovel and halted the Russians, first at the Styr and then, yielding under pressure, retired behind the Stakhod, where they still hold. On the Strypa other German troops held firm, but to the south, across the Dniester, the Russians continued to press on, and have only recently slowed down.

Now, after seven weeks, it is too early to forecast the final achievement of the Russian offensive. It goes over into another year, as did the German attack upon Russia of last year, which advanced two hundred miles beyond its July limit before it finally halted. But it is clear that the Russian attack has not yet been checked, that it carries a plain menace for Lemberg, and that it has disclosed an Austrian weakness that may be the sign of an approaching collapse. A year ago Berlin talked of a separate peace with a defeated Russia; today Petrograd is talking of a separate peace with an exhausted Austria. Berlin was wrong; not improbably Petrograd is wrong; but the change is the thing to be noted.

In the seven weeks of fighting Russia has recovered between 10,000 and 15,000 square miles of territory lost last year, far more territory than Germany holds to ransom from France, a larger aea than Belgium. What the moral effect upon Roumania and Bulgaria will be when the Russian victory is finally established it is impossible to forecast; but it is possible to recall the effect in the Balkans of the German victories in Russia a year ago, and Bukovina is under the eyes and in the minds of all Roumanians.

Russian victories automatically ended the Austrian attack upon Italy and Italian armies leaped forward to recover lost ground and are still making progress. Austrian troops were promptly recalled from Albania and from the Balkans, and their going was the signal for new allied activity about Salonica, which has been accepted as the forerunner of an effort to dispose of Bulgaria, free Serbia and cut the railroad line that binds Berlin to Constantinople and the Turk to the Teuton. Unmistakably, we are soon to have a new campaign in the Balkans—a campaign directed north and south—an effort to restore the iron ring inclosing the central powers and isolate the Turk, who may not long endure if he loses the aid of his great German ally.

The Western Attack.

EXACTLY one month after the Russian armies had stepped out in Volhynia and Galicia the French and British armies along the Somme began a great attack, which at the present hour is going forward and still remains but a beginning.

The actual achievement of this western drive, still too small in the decisive sense to have any bearing, is in the minds of all who have read the recent newspapers. We must wait weeks and perhaps months before we shall know whether Britain—for the main work must be done by Britain—can repeat in Picardy the Russian achievement in Volhynia and, piercing the German lines, compel the withdrawal of the Teuton from French territory occupied now for nearly two years.

Should the British pierce the German lines for half the distance of the Russian advance upon Kovel by Lutsk, should they recover half the territory already taken by the armies of the czar, France would be substantially freed of German troops. But, on the other hand, should the British advance be stopped substantially where it now stands, the German success would be as absolute as it was a year ago in Champagne and Artois and in both instances the small area of recovered territory would have no military value and the minor successes on the firing line, trenches, prisoners, and guns taken, would not modify in any respect the absolute victory of Germany on the defensive.

Nor can we now form any estimate of the capacity of the new British armies just beginning their gigantic task. Superficially they would seem already to have done better than they did at Neuve Chapelle and Loos. We know that they have numbers, guns, munitions, things they have not before had since the great war began. But it is for another year to determine whether the British armies and officers are yet trained to the point of employing the resources now in their hands.

The French success along the Somme has so far been more considerable than the British and Gen. Foch has again sustained the great reputation acquired in the decisive phase of the battle of the Marne, when he defeated the Germans about La Fere, Champenoise. An exhausted France has blazed forth in a new victory, wholly local and without present decisive character, to be sure, but a victory making answer to the German claims that France had been put out of the war by the sacrifices exacted at Verdun and that France was now at the end of her resources in men.

Summary and Forecast.

THE measure of the meaning of the second year of the great war is perhaps best had by a contrast between the situation as it ends and the situation a year ago. We did not know then what the extent of the German victory in the east was to be. But the year closed while Germany was still going forward in the greatest campaign of the war, and the magnitude and extent of her conquests and victories filled the whole world and gave form to the words in which the comment on the end of the first year was made.

One year later the change is unmistakable. It is the central powers, Germany, for she is the heart and head of the war in her own camp, which are on the defensive and the allies who are advancing. In remote Armenia, in Volhynia, in Galicia, in the Baltic provinces, and in northern France, as well as along the Alps in the Trentino district, Russian, French, British, and Italian troops are attacking, and there is every promise of a new offensive from Salonica aimed at Bulgaria and designed to liberate Serbia.

It is no longer possible, as it was in 1914 and in 1915, for Germany to move troops from east to west or north to south as one field after another became interesting or unimportant in her calculations. On all fronts with equal pressure the flood is beating upon her battle lines, and in the southeastern field a breach has already been opened, which must be closed before long if the consequences are not to be serious for the central powers.

Three times, at the Marne, in Russia, and in the Verdun attack, Germany has sought to destroy one of her foes, by a single colossal blow to put one of her great opponents out of the reckoning, as Napoleon disposed of Austria at Austerlitz, Prussia at Jena, and Russia at Friedland, in the prosperous early days of the imperial drama. Failing in all three attempts, she now sees the third year of the war open with all her enemies standing, with France unbroken, Russia returning to the charge with numbers and efficiency which evoke unfailing wonder in Berlin and undisguised apprehension in Vienna and Budapest. Britain has now millions, where she had tens of thousands in August, 1914, and hundreds of thousands a year ago.

As the year ends we have a full measure of Germany's difficulties and dangers, but we have no information to prove her capacity to meet them, and only allied assertions to support the belief that her resources are exhausted, her economic situation desperate, and that the ever growing problem of food continues to worry her statesmen and weaken her people.

We perceive that Germany has lost the offensive, but we are not able to decide whether the loss will prove temporary or permanent. We see that the attack on all sides is made by the allies, and German and Austrian effort is confined to meeting these attacks, so far successfully in the west and unsuccessfully in the east. We have the allied assertion that German lines are now too extended for German numbers to hold. Of this we lack proof as yet. We have the parallel of the days of the civil war after Gettysburg frequently called to our mind, and Joffre, following Delacroix, has likened Verdun to Gettysburg. But of these things there is yet no proof, save only as we have the German confession that on all fronts German troops and the troops of Germany's allies are outnumbered. This, after all, must be patent, given the resources in men of the great nations combined against the central powers and the enormous casualty lists that Austria and Germany have suffered, lists that must now in killed, wounded, captured, and incapacitated, far pass the 7,000,000 mark.

Yet if the friends of the allies now turn to the parallel of the confederacy it is plain that with equal justice the Germans may point to the achievements of Frederick the Great and the heroic and successful resistance of Prussia in the seven years' war, when the odds were far greater and the resources of Frederick insignificant in comparison to those of his many foes. We may say with justice that in losing the offensive, the initiative, if it be permanently lost, in failing to put out one of her enemies before all were equally prepared, Germany failed to win the war on German terms, failed to conquer, and the second year of the war has seen the coming of the failure. But this is a long way from saying that Germany can be conquered.

Bernhardi forecast German defeat if Germany failed to eliminate one of her great opponents before all were in the field with equal preparation. But Bernhardi's prophecy is old, and the war has abolished many articles of faith in the minds of all observers, neutral and belligerent. What one can say with absolute accuracy is that as the year ends there is unmistakable evidence that a new phase has begun, the phase dominated by allied attack upon Germany, as the preceding two years have been dominated by the great German offensive combinations.

It follows that the year is ending without the smallest promise of peace. There is no prospect that the allies will be able between now and winter to win a victory that will bring Germany to her knees. There is no present promise that Germany will be able to regain the initiative and in the same time accomplish what she failed to accomplish at the Marne and about Vilna. Allied successes, small as they still are, will hold out the promise to the allies of a real victory next year. German resistance, maintained as it now is, will sustain the German belief that Germany should continue the war until she is able to make a peace conforming to the extent of the war map.

Every outward evidence that a reasonable man can accept points to another year of war, to the fulfillment of Kitchener's forecast of a three years' war. Nothing is yet decided save that Germany has failed to crush France or Russia and to compel Britain to ask peace by menaces directed on land at Egypt and India and on water at the seaborne trade of Britain by the submarine. Possessing Belgium, thousands of square miles of northern France, all of Poland, most of the Baltic provinces, and much of Volhynia, the central powers still have a tremendous booty, which is not yet counterbalanced by Germany's lost colonies and vanished sea trade.

Finally, holding Serbia and having enlisted Bulgaria and Turkey, Germany possesses the keys to that "place in the sun" for which her statesmen have long yearned, and no man can believe that she will surrender them and forsake her allies until she has suffered defeats which are not yet to be forecast. Until the gateway to the near east is bolted at the Danube again talk of peace is futile short of that hour when exhaustion comes, and that is still far away. It is more war, not peace, that the year-end promises—this is unmistakable.

NEWS of the THEATERS

"Irene O'Dare" is the name of a comedy by James Montgomery [author of "Nothing But the Truth"], which will be produced next week by Messrs. Cohan and Harris, with Miss Willette Kershaw and Miss Adele Rowland in the cast.

Harry J. Powers has deserted Powers' theater as the headquarters of the syndicated theaters here and is now directing them from the Illinois. Harry J. Powers Jr. will be manager and treasurer of Powers', Rollo Timpon of the Illinois and Edwin Wappler of the Blackstone.

Paul Conchas, a juggler of cannon balls in vaudeville, is dead in New York at the age of 49.

Mr. Dixey, the star of "Mr. Lazarus," will talk on "The Theater" at Miss Grace Hickox' studio in the Fine Arts building on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

"Little Orphant Annie," a comedy made from characters in the poems of James Whitcomb Riley, will be played next week by a stock company in Akron, O. It is the work of Robert McLaughlin, author of "The Eternal Magdalene."

Lee Kolmar, a favorite silent actor in Chicago and the surrounding territory, is to go to London to act in "Potash and Perlmutter in Society."

Haddon Chambers, the English playwright, regards the American movie managers as "uncouth." Says he: "I mean to do more work for the cinema, but I am content to wait awhile, till the conditions have readjusted themselves, as they certainly will. I have had fewer opportunities of considering the situation here. But in America the author is confronted with a perfectly impossible intermediary—the commercial autocrat of the moving picture world. Technically the cinematograph is wonderful. But the persons with whom one has to deal are simply uncouth. They do not understand the temperament and the needs of the artist. So far, my disposition has been just to respond to the demand for permission to adapt my plays to the picture theater, to get the best fee I could, and not distress myself with the artistic result. But there will certainly be a change."

Col. Savage's plans for the impending season include a play by Johnstone Platt, a writer of movies; and a German farce adapted by Guy Bolton.

Miss Rose Winter has succeeded Miss Janet Beecher in "Fair and Warmer."

The New York Morning Telegraph says that the head of a New York movie concern recently dispatched a scout through the studio to discover if any of the employés was a member of the national guard. Finding none belonging, announcement was issued granting full pay to all enlisted men while they were away on the border.

After further appearances in vaudeville, including one in Chicago, beginning Aug. 21, Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry will become leading woman for James K. Hackett.

Capt. Costigan, the vinous Irishman of "Pendennis," will be played in John Drew's production by Lester Lonergan. Miss Gail Kain will be Mr. Drew's new leading woman.

Among the plays burlesqued in "the Cohan Revue," due next month at the Grand, are "The Boomerang," "Common Clay," "Hobson's Choice," "Major Barbara," "The Great Lover," and "Our Mrs. McChesney." Richard Carle and Valli Valli are the leading players.

When "Common Clay" reaches the Olympic in a fortnight or two, its principal rôles will be played by John Mason and Miss Clara Joel, who appeared not long ago at that theater in "Kick In."

Mlle. Rosina Galli of the Ravina Opera

The members of Fiske O'Hara's company are assembling in Chicago to rehearse a new play, "His Heart's Desire," under the direction of Augustus Pitou.

James Jay Brady, once the manager of the Colonial theater, has been relieved of the direction of the Cohan theater, New York, and will become the press representative of a Klaw & Erlanger attraction.

Laddie Cliff, an English dancing comedian, familiar to American vaudeville and musical comedy, will sail on Tuesday to enlist in the British army.

The plans of Joseph Santley include his appearance with Raymond Hitchcock in "Betty," and later in "One Time in May," in which he will have the leading rôle.

Leslie Stuart, who will play the piano for Miss May De Sousa's songs at the Majestic this week, is the composer of "Florodora." This is his vaudeville debut.

"Fast and Grow Fat" is the title of a comedy to be produced soon by Charles Dillingham. It is by George Broadhurst out of a novel by Frank R. Adams called "Five Fridays."

"Hobson's Choice," which was so gloomy a failure in Chicago, is one of the unusual "hits" if the London season.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

MAJESTIC.

Carl McCullough—I was watching Hiram packing for a trip to Europe and noticed that he put a woman's night gown in his trunk. "What's that for?" I asked.

"That's to wear on the ship," said Hiram. "In case of a wreck it's women and children first."

Hiram was on a train one day when the sheriff got on with a lunatic, who was handcuffed. They sat in front of Hiram and after a while he leaned over to the sheriff and said: "What's the matter with him?"

"Bugs,' 'said the sheriff.

"Bugs?" asked Hiram.

"Yes, bugs in his head. He's insane."

"Well," said Hiram, "with bugs in his head and handcuffed, I should think he would be."

McVICKER'S.

May Page Taylor: I didn't sleep much all last night; in fact, I'm a very light leeper. That is, I'm a woman who is easily awakened and is a long time getting to sleep. Well, anyhow, last night I slept in a hotel, and such a hotel it is. Why, I couldn't get to sleep at all. I tossed about that bed for about two hours. Then I finally succeeded in getting into a sound sleep. I was asleep for about fifteen minutes when I heard a loud knock on the door, so I yelled out. "What you want?" I said it just like that.

"Package downstairs for you, lady," came back the answer.

"Well, let it stay down there till morning," I shouted back.

The boy he shuffled down the corridor and after a long time I fell into a sound sleep again. I was asleep about twenty minutes this time when another knock came on the door. So I yelled out again: "What you want now?"

Then came back a slow reply: "That package."

"Yes," says I.

"Well, it ain't for you," shouted back the bellhop.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The constitution follows the flag a lot less certainly than the stage reflects the mental state of the nation it serves. A sad people demand the right to be sadder. A gay people insist upon being gayer. Prosperous times make for a flighty drama. Hard times inspire truth telling tragedies and sermons on suffering for sufferers.

When the European war started there was a brief turn in America toward serious drama. Trivial plays were passed by rather deliberately. It was reasonably predicted that it would be a season in which important plays would have the call and theatrical froth prove a drug on the market.

For a time this condition held. Then a change set in. Europe might be suffering, and reflectively sympathetic America suffered with her. But—times were good at home. People were working and salaries were being paid regularly. Europe was, after all, 3,000 miles away, and—well, why should one believe all one reads of any such horror as a world war?

First page spreads of killed and wounded, of drives and counter drives, became a commonplace sensation. Blessed were the peace lovers, for they had inherited a good time. The nation was gay, and demanded gayety in its entertainment.

In New York, and in London, too, for that matter, the turning was toward musical plays, toward the light comedy and the frivolous farce. The serious drama was, save in a couple of abnormal instances, deliberately passed by. And so successful were the lighter forms that by the end of the season practically nothing else was being attempted.

The second year followed the first with even a more marked tendency on the part of the playground crowd, casuals and regulars, to put their recreation money into nothing serious. And so successful were comedies and musical plays that thirty-six fewer productions were made than during the season previous. Which means that thirty-six fewer changes were necessary in the theaters devoted to productions; that 150 new plays satisfied all demands in place of 186 needed the year before.

Now we have the third year of the war approaching, and a third theatrical season under war conditions being prepared for. And what does the list hold forth? Ninety per cent comedy, with and without music, and 10 per cent drama. And this because the back country has also turned from any desire to be harrowed by artificial horrors and demands the live stuff with tunes and Totties.

There is only one thing less important, and less truthful, and less to be depended upon than a theatrical manager's forecast of his future activities. And that is the forecast of his competitor. They serve only as reminders of what might be, not of what will be. They are promises filled with wind, bubbles lighter than the air wasted in dictating them.

But still we must have them, rather enjoy them, in fact, coming at a time of year, as they do, when our resistance is low and there is need of subjects for front porch gossip. It is, for instance, enough to keep the rocking chair chinners busy an entire evening if the youth who sits at the corner table remarks casually, and apropos of nothing in particular, that he sees Billie Burke is to return to the stage in December. Because some one else is sure to have heard that the beauteous Billie is just at present preparing such a beautiful, nest at her Hudson river estate that the stork is bound to be pleased with it when he pays his anticipated visit this early fall.

Such an announcement, too, leads to an interesting discussion of motherhood in its relation to art, which brings in Ethel Barrymore, and Louise Homer, and Schumann-Heink, and all of the other little mothers of the stage world. And thus one learns that Miss Barrymore will not reappear until late in the fall, and then in a comedy in which she is to play two characters in place of one, thereby proving her versatility. Which, as you may see, readily starts a discussion of personality and what it means—to the discusser.

Seriously, there is an interesting reflection in skimming the forecasts and discovering that all the emotional ladies are this year going in for comedy. Margaret Illington will restrain the heaving torso and develop a natural laugh in an Avery Hopwood farce. Margaret Anglin will again desert her emotional past to indulge her love for comedy in a piece called "Caroline," written by W. Somerest Maugham, whose touch is light.

Jane Cowl, tearful Jane of "Common Clay," will frolic relievedly in a comedy called "Betty, Behave." Even Kathryn Kidder, who has not been acting a great deal the last few years, is to try it again in a play written by her busy young husband, Louis Anspacher, and called "That Day." Sounds ominous, but Miss Kidder's rôle is pure comedy, according to promise.

William Faversham, catching the comedy fever and presenting Bernard Shaw's "Getting Married," has engaged Henrietta Crosman to share the wit of the lines with him. Cyril Maude, who refused for years to come to America and now refuses to go home, will trade "Grumpy" for a dramatization of a Stephen Leacock sketch, "The Barber of Mariposa," which he is to do here at the Empire in October or thereabouts.

Laurette Taylor, though "The Wooing of Eve" got no better than a fair start in Philadelphia, will hold to her program of loyalty and art and go through with the répertoire her husband has mapped out for her—three plays of the laughter and tears school, of which she is just now the finest female exponent.

There is to be a comedy called "Old Lady No. 31," which should be interesting. The story is that of an aged couple in an old ladies' home—father being taken in by the girls out of the goodness of their hearts because otherwise he would have to go on to the poorhouse. Once in the home he becomes "No. 31," and the fuss they make over him, to his increasing annoyance, causes most of the fun.

Rachel Crothers did the play from a book written by an obscure authoress some years ago. Emma Dunn will play the wife of "Old Lady No. 31."

Three or four plays that Broadway has not seen but which have been doing well elsewhere even without a New York indorsement, include "Pollyanna," a sermon of optimism, from which much is expected; "His Majesty Bunker Bean," which caused Chicago and Taylor Holmes to be talked about; "Paganini," which George Arliss picked up as a successor to "Disraeli," and "Mr. Lazarus," which is Henry Dixey returned to comedy and doing very well, according to reports.

Another laugh combination will be that of Thomas W. Ross and Maclyn Arbuckle. As co-stars they are to have a comedy by George V. Hobart, with another play or two held in reserve if that should fail to register. This as a reward for their service to that well known dean of comedians and sputterers, William H. Crane. Every year some one reports that William H. is about to retire, he having arrived at retiring years and a better than comfortable fortune. But each time he fools his prophets and insists on playing another season.

The last two years in "The New Henrietta" were a bit hard on Mr. Crane. He played almost as many small towns as he did fifty years ago. But a summer's rest along and on the Pacific has put him in condition again and he will revive Ade's "Father and the Boys" in San Francisco this fall. Ross and Arbuckle will begin their season in Chicago.

The Dolly sisters are also going to star. They have a comedy called "His Bridal Night," in which they impersonate twins, and, we suspect from the title, rather mix up a prospective groom. Which recalls an incident of the winter when these light footed Hungarians were dancing on the roof of the New Amsterdam as a feature of the "Midnight Frolic."

Gowned alike and appearing as much alike as twins possibly can, they greatly puzzled an interested celebrant who had left his eyeglasses at home, but kept a firm hold of his table glass from the beginning of the performance. When the Dollys danced in he followed them carefully for several minutes and then, turning to his neighbor, remarked, seriously, "Say! do you like her?"

Thomas Wise, ambitious Shakespearean, is to have his wish after all, and will play Falstaff on the road in a revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Thomas was an overnight success in the rôle last winter, when he was suddenly called in to replace James K. Hackett, then in bed with a rheumatic knee.

But Wise was under contract to the Frohman company at the time, and the run of the Hackett revival was broken to release him. Some said it was because James K. could see no good reason why he should start T. W. in a part he had planned to play, and still hoped to play, himself. Whatever the cause, Wise was out. And then the play for which he was under contract to the Frohmans was shelved and he was unhappy.

There are a lot of other plays scheduled. Some will come to something, many will come to nothing. So far as midsummer plans go it promises to be the busiest season in the more or less familiar history of the theatrical capital. But they all promise to be that—in midsummer.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

WE might attempt to enumerate and describe to you all the many features that have been combined in the New Series Fairfield "Six-46" to make it the last word in elegant and luxurious motoring.

But we should prefer to have you make your own examination. You know, perhaps, of the power, buoyancy and perfect control of the motor—supreme among the Sixes for gentlemen's driving.

But we want you to see for yourself what we have added. We want you to see the new beauty of the car, the new refinements of all the little things and big things that count, the still greater comfort, elegance and luxury of a car already acknowledged leader of the "Sixes."

We want you to come and satisfy yourself that our claim and the public's award "the most completely equipped motor car that can be purchased on the American market—absolutely irrespective of price"—is accurate and well merited. Make your own comparisons. Arrive at your own conclusions.

Just come and see this sumptuous motor car.

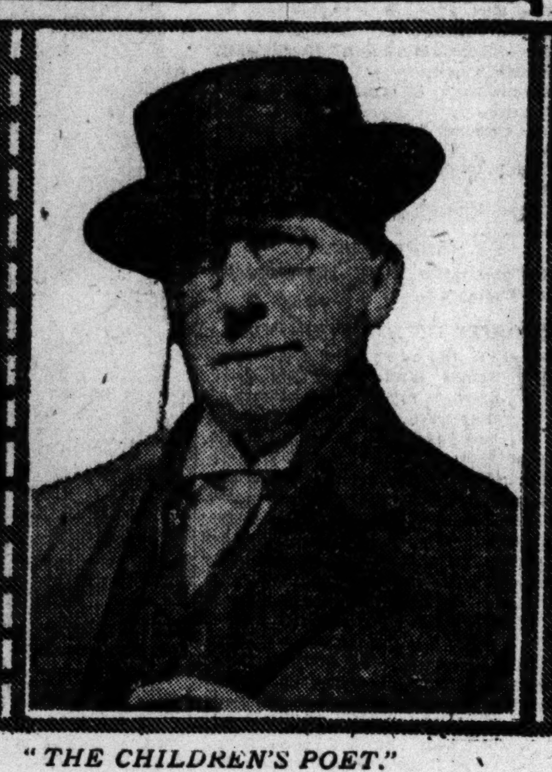
The World's Greatest News Film.

In the two issues this week are shown:

Number 60

IN EL PASO.

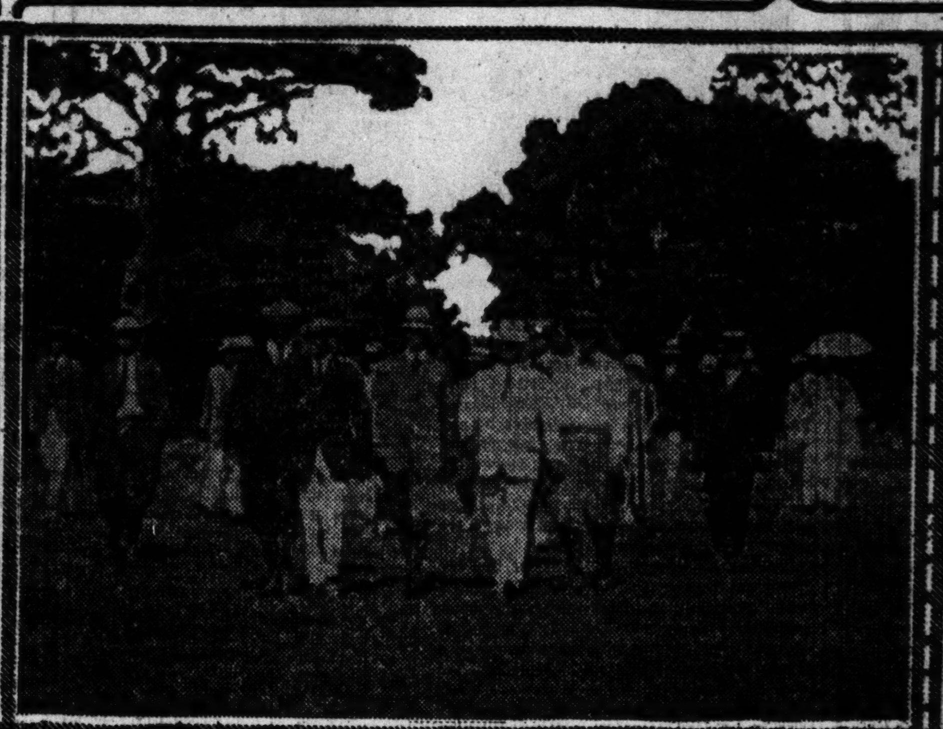
In El Paso the soldier boys are working much, playing some—and praying a good deal. (Witness them at services.) They are also dropping with the heat, for "going up" is the best little thing the thermometer does in that region.



"THE CHILDREN'S POET."

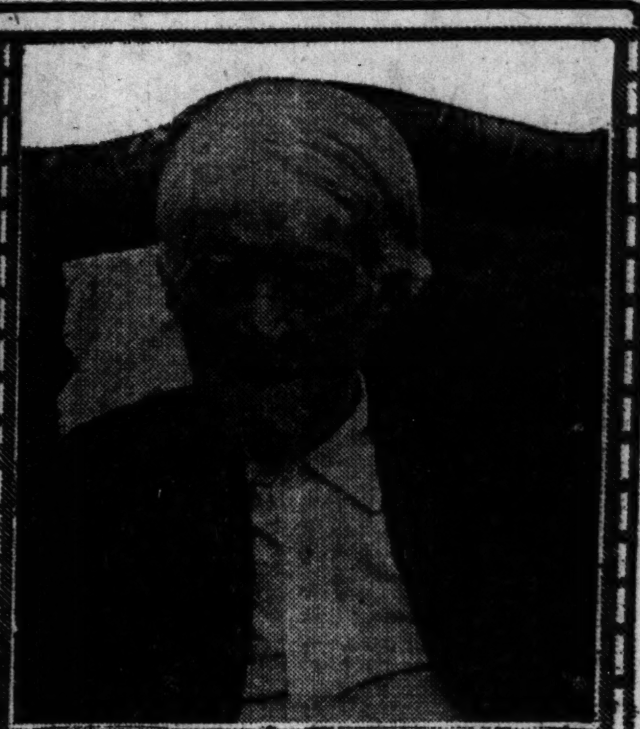
One time a motion picture photographer "caught" James Whitcomb Riley as, surrounded by little ones, he told them the stories and recited the poems they loved so to hear. The film shown you is this one and makes you realize how truly a good man "gone out" has been immortalized.

Number 61



PLAY GOLF?

If you play golf—and you probably do or have at some time or other—you'll be interested in seeing "Heine" Schmidt of Oakland, Cal., winning the western golf championship at Del Monte, Cal.



A BOY 105 YEARS OLD.

CROWDS SEE WAR PICTURES.

THE TRIBUNE German war pictures, procured by Edwin F. Weigle, staff photographer, at the risk of his life, have been drawing record breaking crowds at the Colonial theater. This is the second week and interest seems undiminished.

Mabel Normand recently rescued a stray kitten from hunger and thirst as it meowed pitifully at her window and the now happy feline has been promoted to the position of "studio mascot."

O, girls—you who can write! David Horsely wants five reel scenarios for Crane Wilbur. "Dramas of the sociological and psychological nature being desired." Look up and find out what he means. Also, five reel scenarios for Margaret Gibson could be used. Get busy!

Creighton Hale is the only actor appearing on the screen or the legitimate stage who has qualified to become a member of the Aero Club of America.

John Emerson, who has been directing Triangle films, has gone to Famous Players, where he will direct a series in which Mary Pickford will star.

In order to supply warm lunches to companies on location, the Lasky company constructed a portable lunch wagon similar to the "soup cannons" used by the German army. It is pulled by a horse and is so constructed that there is no danger of spilling.

Little Mildred Platts, 4 years old, is the latest star to be acquired by the Selig company.

Wanted—A scenario for an outdoor story which will not require many interior scenes or the use of lights for night work. Myrtle Stedman is seeking such a vehicle for her next screen play.

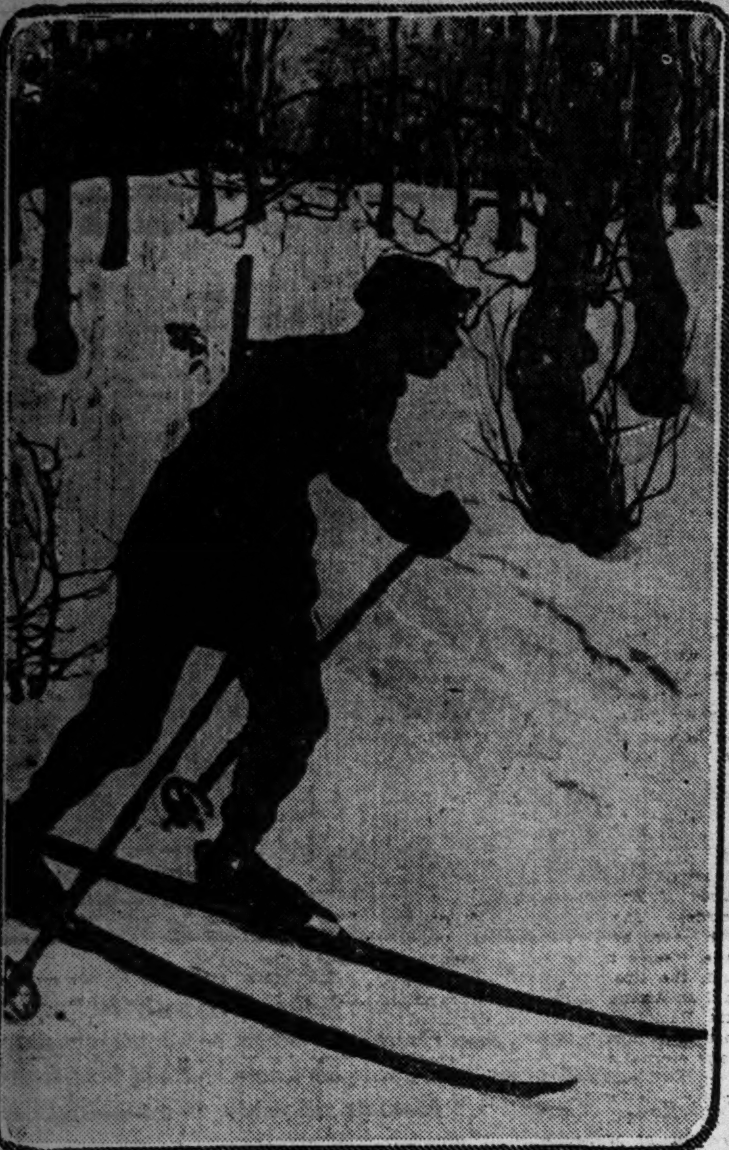
ART By Louise James Bargelt



Skiing, by Elsa Backlund-Celsing. In the Swedish Exhibition at the Art Institute

CATON PORTRAIT AT INSTITUTE.

THE portrait by Anders Zorn of the late Arthur Caton has just been rehung in the Art institute and given a place of greater prominence than before. This portrait, which is owned by the Chicago club, is loaned to the institute during the Swedish exhibit and is one of the club's most valued paintings.

It is as a portrait painter that Anders Zorn has won his finest laurels and made for himself a place among the world's highly appreciated artists. This picture of Mr. Caton is one of the statellest things ever marked with Zorn's name. He has caught a vigorous nature on his canvas and characterized it remarkably. He has gone beneath the surface of the man's exterior for the soul that makes the cover what it is. With a real warmth of feeling which cannot help but add to the artistic merits of any painting he has made each feature of Mr. Caton's, as well as his whole attitude, reflect his well remembered personality, and produced a finished piece of portraiture from every point of view.

In all Zorn has done some hundred portraits of American men and women and this picture ranks among the finest works Zorn ever did. Chicago people are fortunate right now in being able to view this painting of Mr. Caton, as it is not often on public exhibition of any kind.

Zorn has always loved America. According to his own statement he believes that he has done better work in America than in any other foreign country, not excepting Paris even, which is supposed to be the canonizing nucleus of all artistic endeavor. He finds a primitive inspiration and feeling in this country which he says is not to be found in the older civilizations of Europe.

There are those who have expressed great surprise that a man of Zorn's admittedly corporeal sensuousness, as expressed in his extreme fondness and appreciation of all the senses, and his indifference to psycholizing over human nature, should be such an ingenious portrait painter. But Zorn inclines to the belief that soul and body are one and relies on his feeling for the characteristic in the play of lights and shadows on the features for many of his best effects.

Zorn is still the same indomitable worker that he was in the days of his youth, when he was wrestling quick recognition from a world which has always been lavish in its appreciation of his genius. The incident of his painting of the portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer at the time of the Chicago world's fair is typical of his indomitable perseverence and resourcefulness. He was commissioner of art for Sweden at the fair, and while out horseback riding one day was thrown from his horse and sustained some serious injuries. For some months he was ordered to wear his right arm in a sling. He was working on the portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer at the time, and decided that rather than not finish the piece of work he would complete it with his left hand, which he did, and although the work is hardly an intimate portrait of Mrs. Palmer it is a beautiful picture of a beautiful woman.

Zorn has always been a queer mixture of the Dalecarlian peasant and the accomplished cosmopolite. Into his cradle at birth the fates threw a generous measure of inheritance in the way of real talent and the capacity for hard and systematic labor. His father was German, and this mixture of blood was important in bringing his powers to an early and astonishing bloom.

Among the other exhibits at the Art institute now are those paintings loaned by Mrs. W. W. Kimball and Frank G. Logan. The exhibit of Swedish paintings continues to attract an extremely large attendance at the institute.

It will be of wide interest to the public to learn that Mr. Carpenter, director pro tem of the institute, together with its board of trustees, has decided on the regular exhibitions, which will be held at the Art institute during the seasons of 1916 and 1917. Among the regular exhibitions are included:

Exhibition of applied arts.
American oil exhibition.
Atlan and Ceramic club exhibition.
Artists of Chicago and vicinity.
Chicago Society of Etchers.
Chicago Architectural club exhibition.
Art Students' league exhibition.
Water colors, pastel, and miniatures.

Some of the special exhibitions have also been decided on, and among them are British paintings, collected by Harrington Mann, Edward W. Redfield, Wilson Irvine, Maurice Sterne, French cartoons, Childe Hassam, Howard Cushing, A. E. [Mr. Russell], and Alson Clark.

It was also voted to authorize the director to arrange for the following exhibitions:

Fifty paintings by California artists, selected by J. Neilson Laurvik, director San Francisco Art association.

Memorial exhibition of the work of John W. Alexander.

Joint exhibition of paintings by Wallace L. De Wolf and Edward B. Butler.

Work of the teachers of the school of the Art institute.

Exhibition by nine artists, consisting of Gifford Beal, George Bellows, William M. Chase, Paul Dougherty, William Glackens, Robert Henri, Hayley Lever, W. Elmer Schofield, and J. Alden Weir.

Paintings by John F. Carlson.

Small bronzes by Phimister Proctor.

Paintings by De Witt Parshall.

Joint exhibition of paintings by Hayley Lever and Ernest Lawson.

Paintings by Charles Rosen.

Paintings by the New Hope group, consisting of R. Sloan Bredin, Margan Colt, Daniel Garber, W. L. Lathrop, Charles Rosen, and Robert Spencer.

Paintings by Bertha Menzler Peyton.

Sculpture by Chester Beach.

Paintings by Charles P. Gruppe.

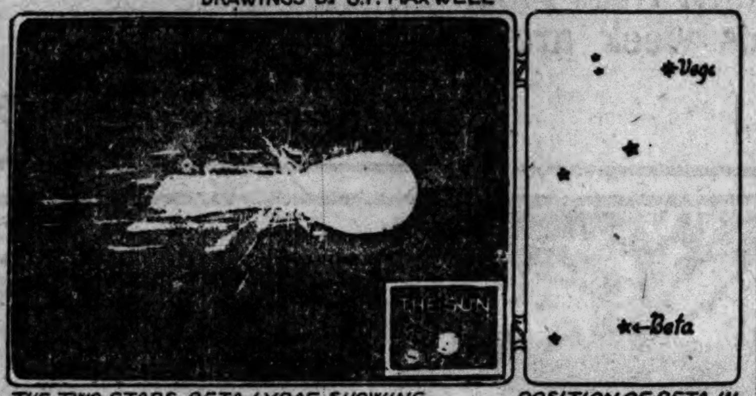
ASTRONOMY by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

THE SYSTEM OF BETA LYRAE

DRAWINGS BY S.F. MAXWELL



THE TWO STARS BETA LYRAE SHOWING DIMENSIONS WITH RELATION TO THE SUN

POSITION OF BETA IN THE CONSTELLATION OF LYRA

THE DUMBBELL STAR.

IN the constellation of Lyra, of which the chief star is Vega, is a beautiful and wonderful system, a variable star, identified as Beta Lyræ.

The diagram above will show its relation to Vega in the constellation. Last Sunday, in considering the ring nebula in the constellation of Lyra, directions was given for the locating of Vega, which is the starting point for the identification of phenomena of less striking appearance in the constellation.

It may be necessary to repeat the directions for the finding of this conspicuous star that the variable Beta may be located. Vega will be found by imagining a line drawn from the star at the junction of the bowl and the handle of the Big Dipper to the pole star and then at right angles in the direction in which the handle projects to a distance of 40 degrees or eight times the distance which separates the stars in the outer edge of the bowl of the Dipper.

With Vega identified—and it discloses itself by its exceeding brilliance—the variable Beta, the dumbbell star, may be located. A variable star is one which increases and diminishes in radiance. It does so because it is not a star, but a system of stars, and the periodic eclipse caused by the movement in the system cuts off or releases light from one of the luminaries.

In the case of Beta Lyræ the two stars are both luminaries. In the case of the most popularly known variable, Algol, the Winking Demon, the live sun is eclipsed by a dark companion. There are systems such as the Algol system with a dark companion reducing the light of the living sun and there are systems such as Beta Lyræ with two live suns operating to vary the radiance of the single star which represents the system as seen from the earth.

In the constellation of Lyra there is a distinct parallelogram just south of Vega. Beta is the star in the southwestern corner of the parallelogram. In this group it will be seen sometimes as the most conspicuous star, sometimes as the least conspicuous.

At its greatest magnitude it is third. At its least it is fifth. Next Saturday it will be at its minimum.

The light is never constant, but continually varies. From the greatest brilliancy of third magnitude the light drops to the fifth in about eighteen hours and s quickly returns. After a day there is another slow decline to fourth magnitude and a more rapid rise, the whole taking seven and one-half days. After a day's rest at third magnitude the cycle recommences. The period is twelve days and twenty-one hours. The latest maximum eclipse occurred July 28-29. The next minimum will occur Aug. 5.

The spectroscope shows the star to be a close double, so close that the two are in contact. Could the human eye behold the system directly it would see a great blazing "dumbbell" star whirling in the sky. Because of the eccentricity of the orbit of the smaller star there is a fierce collision at each revolution. The small star actually tears a path through the substance of the larger one, leaving clouds and streamers of brilliantly heated gases in its wake. This collision happens on the side of the system turned toward the earth shortly after the smaller star has passed out of direct line with the earth and its companion. Were it on the other side our spectroscope might never have detected this wonderful phenomenon.

The dimensions of the system of Beta Lyræ are enormous. The larger star is 10,000,000 miles in diameter and twenty-one times as massive as the sun. The smaller one is 6,000,000 miles in diameter and nine times as massive as the sun. The velocity of the pair in their orbits is over 100 miles a second. The smaller of the two stars is by far the more intrinsically bright. The larger is a huge, dull, semi-nebulous body. The actual densities of the two are not much greater than that of air at sea level. The temperature averages 15,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The two stars of Beta Lyræ form a young system. The pair is slowly separating, and in the course of time it will be seen double in the telescope.

James Whitcomb Riley

MEMORIES OF HOOSIER POET.

WITH the news of the death of James Whitcomb Riley there arose in my mind the picture of that birthday of his in October two years ago, when the whole state of Indiana gave a birthday party for him, the picture of his gentleness and serenity, going about his every day round of riding, stopping at his publishers for a few minutes, chatting with a friend on the corner, going back to the formidable old house in Lockerbie street for a nap, and finally sitting at the head of a great room full of tables, where men from the seven seas had gathered to bring him birthday greetings.

And I felt again as I felt it that day of his in Indianapolis, the almost unbelievable throb of his personality through the whole body of the community. I remembered the morning I spent with his birthday mail, literally thousands of letters and post cards from children who sent their love to him, from his own friends and contemporaries, from old men and women, who said they wished they had his heart of youth.

With all of these memories bright before me I realize now that James Whitcomb Riley can never have a death day, only birthdays in the hearts of the countless thousands who have loved him.

What his fellow poets have said of him seems as appropriate a memorial as we can build for him with a foundation of the unvoiced love of the thousands "happy and pore":

I have read his poems with great pleasure, and think they show the true poetic faculty and insight—Earliest encouragement, from Henry W. Longfellow.

Today, in presenting Mr. Riley to you, I can say to you of my own knowledge, that you are to have the pleasure of listening to the voice of a true poet.—James Russell Lowell.

James Whitcomb Riley is nothing short of a born poet and a veritable genius. He gets down into the heart of a man, and in a most telling way, too, this delineator of lowly humanity, who sings with so much ferver, pathos, humor, and grace, and who has done things, perhaps, which will outlast the more laborious work of some of the older and more pretentious poets.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The simplicity, and innocence and sincerity, and unconsciousness of Riley's old farmer are perfectly simulated, and the result is a performance which is thoroughly charming and delicious. This is art—and fine and beautiful, and only a master can compass it.—Mark Twain.

No poet has shown such a passion for the homely and humble things of life and has dared to portray them with such unshrinking fidelity, such fond and unpatronizing tenderness. No one else has conceived so truly and so kindly of children or has been able to tell us so sweetly what they are.—William Dean Howells.

James Whitcomb Riley is loved in Indiana because he has revealed the Hoosiers to themselves. He has aroused among the people of our state a sort of smiling pride in their neighbors and home surroundings. He is the only writer in the Hoosier collection who hobnobs sentimentally with the LL. D. and the farm hand at the same moment. He is the quintessence of all that gives characteristic flavor to life in Indiana. He was the most likable individual ever grown in the state.

—George Ade.

Every one knows where is Lockerbie street,
For there a poet has lived and sung,
Wise as an angel, glad as a bird,
Fearless and fond in every word,
All his life. And if you would know
The secret of joy and the cure of woe—
How to be gentle and brave and sweet—
Ask your way to Lockerbie street.

—Bliss Carman.

This is the reason why all men love you, Remember your songs and forget your art:
Other poets may soar above you—
 You keep close to the human heart.

—Henry van Dyke.

Your trail runs to the westward,
 And mine to my own place;
There is water between our lodges,
 And I have not seen your face,
But since I have read your verses
 'Tis easy to guess the rest—
Because in the hearts of the children
 There is neither east nor west.

—Rudyard Kipling.

James Whitcomb Riley is to Indiana and the middle west what Burns was (and remains) to Scotland. Time did not diminish his serenity and sweetness, but added to them. He was the cheeriest and hopefuliest spirit in American literature. —Meredith Nicholson.

What is the thing in the work of Riley that gives it its subtlest and its strongest appeal? Sometimes I think it is the dialect, which captures the accent of the soul as well as the tongue. Sometimes I think it must be the eye of the student and the psychologist that discovers and reveals beneath his personages a people. Sometimes I think it is his fund of nonsense and whimsy; his child love and child lore. Sometimes I think it is the blend of all of these. And sometimes I think that, after all, the finest quality in Riley's work is James Whitcomb Riley.

—Louis Untermeyer.

James Whitcomb Riley was one of the small group who have earned the right to sit on that classic step between the sublime and the ridiculous.

—Carolyn Wells.

They didn't call him James Whitcomb Riley 'round where I lived. Taking the liberty of old friends, they telescoped the James, amputated the Whitcomb, and said Jim Riley. And they pronounced the words with a loving heart as they might say "the old folks at home" or any other tender fragrant epithet.

—Edwin Markham.

FROM the F-W-D Home Office at Clintonville, Wisconsin, a series of questions was sent to F-W-D owners. These men had operated F-W-D trucks for two years—three years—five years. Among the questions was, "Days Idle for Repairs?"

The answers came back, "none," "none," "none." Scores of these letters are in the company's files.

Their piled-up evidence is of value to you. If you know anything of trucks you realize that they must be on the road every day to earn money for you. You can't afford to have your hauling and delivery work interfered with by repairs. You can't afford to have an expensive piece of machinery idle.

Illinois and Adjacent States Provide Scenic Trips for National Touring Week.

By J. C. Burton.

NATIONAL touring week, the nation wide motoring vacation officially scheduled to begin a week from today, has roused the touring spirit in automobilists from the Atlantic shore to the Pacific. Linked with the slogan "Buy your car now," and spreading broadcast the sentiment "See America first by seeing your own state first," the movement has gained a headway that will carry the touring impulse all the way through the fag end of summer.

The greatest organized automobile travel this country has ever seen is assured for national touring week itself. The idea of an official automobile tour participated in by every motorist who can make his vacation coincide with the week of Aug. 6, has gripped the interest of the owners of motor cars through the land. The early momentum the movement has gained has surprised the originators of the idea. All Americans who think of automobiles and vacations in the same breath are thinking with the red letter date "Aug. 6" branded on the mind. The automobile trade and automobile clubs have enlisted in the movement and are driving it ahead with characteristic force.

That American motorists should spend their vacations in their automobiles on the road is common sense. That as many of them should attempt to do so on an official touring week is merely an efficient method of arousing the nation to seeing America now.

The organization of national touring week is neglecting no department or phase of this nation wide motoring outing. Hotels are being stimulated to provide for the week, and the proprietors are making extra preparations to care for the exceptional travel at that time. Supply dealers are strengthening their organizations to meet the demands of the greatest coincident mileage they have ever faced.

"See America first by seeing your own state first" is a timely reminder to the motorist that the finest vacation offered him is the one nearest—a vaction tour of his own state in his own car. The average automobilist knows less about the beauty and natural wonders of his own state than any other part of his country, notwithstanding the fact that, whatever his state, spots of picturesque charm are hidden without number within a radius of a hundred miles of his garage. With a road map and an intelligent eye for guide posts he may link them on a circuit that will stand forth as the tour of his life.

The motorist who fails to tune up his car for the week of Aug. 6 is jeopardizing the full joy of his vacation.

ILLINOIS.

The motorist living in Illinois is ideally situated to enjoy the charms of the road, not only those offered in his own state, but in the neighboring commonwealths, which are rich in scenic and historic places. To the north are Wisconsin and Michigan. Indiana calls from the east, and on the West Iowa sings the seductive song of the Lorelei.

Illinois motorists have neglected their own state. One needs not seek the reason why. Sufficient it is the fact stands that the automobilist from Illinois knows the charm of New England, the grandeur of the Rockies, and the scenic wonders of the Pacific coast, but he knows not our Illinois, and the charm and grandeur of its scenic wonders are at his finger tips.

Illinois is not an expanse of commonplace. It has its automobile tours as alluring as the best outing lures of the land. True it is, according to the gospel of the United States government survey, the most level state in the union, next to Louisiana. But that need not cause an automobilist to harbor a grudge against Illinois. As a matter of touring and touring in quest of novelty and scenic beauty, Illinois affords her automobilists many a trip sparkling with novelty, beauty, and individuality.

Moreover, this commonwealth abounds with spots, cities, and villages that are fraught with historical interest. In it there is many a point made famous by the sinister stories of the Indian war. Many of its towns and districts are linked with the life of Lincoln, not to mention other public men of lesser importance.

The general aspect of its scenery, too, has its beauty and charm. Its rivers, wide and numerous, flow between picturesque banks. Nature herself has played some queer pranks with the earth of Illinois. Few states can offer a more weird grandeur than may be found in the Starved Rock district and on the Black-hawk trail.

The Illinois automobilist of any section of the state may, with a few hours' moderate speed, place himself upon a circuit of scenic and historical points that will afford him an automobile tour equal to any an eastern state offers. Let automobilists of Illinois make an excursion inside the confines of their own state, and they will discover that Illinois motorists need not emigrate 1,000 miles to spend an exhilarating vacation on the road.

A practical circuit of many Illinois show places may be traveled with Chicago and Rock Island as terminal points. Leaving Chicago through the beautiful Fox River valley, by way of Elgin, the motorist may visit Rockford, one of the most attractive spots in this state. Turning to the south from this point, and following the contour of the Rock river, or what in the old days of the Indian war was known as the Black Hawk trail, he reaches Oregon, where two miles across the Rock River rises the colossal statue of Chief Black Hawk. This, in many respects the most remarkable work of art on this side of the Atlantic, rises in commemoration of a day of dread that has gone the way of history.

Still following the Black Hawk trail, the motorist wheels on to Dixon, a charming city of old homes. From Dixon to Sterling extends one of the most attractive strips in the Rock River valley. The tourist finishes the out trip at Rock Island on the Mississippi river, where on the Arsenal island the government maintains one of its most beautiful parks and a genuine munition plant, a mecca for the automobilists who know.

Touring south at Rock Island, the motorist may strike for Galesburg, a university town bound up with the lives of many celebrities.

Swinging north, the tourist heads through attractive country for Kewanee and Princeton, a charming, old fashioned town.

His next objective point is Ottawa, by way of La Salle. Ottawa is the gateway to Starved Rock park, one of the most remarkable scenic spots in the country. The place takes its name from a huge sandstone cliff jutting into the Illinois river. A few miles south is Deer park, a park that presents a panorama of scenic beauty such as cannot be found in the country nearer than the Rocky mountains.

Another tour, which swings farther to the south, begins with the trip to Ottawa and Starved Rock park. Veering south, the motorist reaches Peoria; thence he may follow the contour of the Illinois river down to Beardstown, reputed to be the greatest inland fishing ground in the United States.

Passing east, the route then leads to Springfield, the capital of the state, with its numerous state institutions.

The circuit of the tour may be completed by two routes, both through attractive farm land country. One links Bloomington, Pontiac, and Joliet; the other Decatur, Urbana, and Champaign.

WISCONSIN.

"Lake Land" might well be another name for Wisconsin, but to this should be added "Vacation Land," for no other state has such a variety of lake scenery or such wonderful possibilities for vacations and vacation automobile tours.

Nevertheless, though Wisconsin may boast of a population of motorists well up in the rank of states, and though its "vacation land," with its many motor journeys, beckons to them, there is no general realization among Illinois automobilists of the wonders and pleasures to be found within a few days' trarvel of their garage.

A dozen or more good trips of from three and four days to two weeks' duration may be planned in loops to cover practically every section of the state. In no case would the motorist find any stretch of landscape wanting in scenic beauty or those features that go to make up the modern "show spot."

A grand tour which might daunt the average motorist, but which is nevertheless practical, may be started with Duluth and Milwaukee as the basic points. Upon this grand tour one may link practically every important city of the state. He may cut it short or stretch its length as suits the time of his vacation. The red letter points, which would mark this state encircling trip, are Milwaukee, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Green Bay, Wausau, Abbotsford, Ashland, Superior, Hudson, Eau Claire, La Crosse, Baraboo, and Madison.

This tour would reveal to the Wisconsin motorist wonders of his home land of which he had not dreamed. It would carry him into that realm of rest, the Lake Superior country, through a region as thickly dotted with lakes as the diamonds of a tiara. His travel would be a continuous stretch of scenic beauty and restful landscape. He would travel sequestered valleys and tour through forests of pines. When he had transcribed the circle around the boundary of the state he could say that in addition to the reinvigoration of vacation he had schooled himself in the beauty and wonder of his home land.

The stretch from Milwaukee to Madison takes one to the scenery of the Dells. From Madison to La Crosse by way of Baraboo takes the tourist through the most famous scenic district of the state and one which, even though the tourist has already traversed it, is always worth another trip. The Wisconsin river is crossed at Sauk City. The route continues to Prairie du Sac, a region noted for its extensive Indian mounds. The journey then wends westward through Elroy, Cashton, and St. Joseph. It follows the St. Joseph ridge through scenery that is considered the acme of beauty in the state.

The view of the Mississippi valley on entering La Crosse is one of the most inspiring on the Father of Waters. Turning north the tourist heads for Eau Claire and the waterfall country.

At Eau Claire he must decide whether he will attempt the trip through the north country to Duluth. In case he has the courage he turns west to Hudson and Moulton; thence he goes northward through a district thickly studded with lake towns, Clear Lake, Turtle Lake, and on to Trego.

His next objective points are Superior and Duluth. Having visited Superior he retraces his way to Hawthorne, and turns to Ashland, whence he begins an arduous but general vacation trip southward through Mellen, Park Falls, and Prentice. Reaching Abbotsford, he turns eastward to Wausau. With Oshkosh as his objective point, he may go by way of Green Bay or through Stevens Point. On his way to Oshkosh he tours the shores of Lake Winnebago. From Fond du Lac he completes the circuit of the grand tour to Milwaukee.

This crescent may be cut in half at Eau Claire by striking across to Abbotsford through Chippewa Falls, Stanley, and Withee.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan is the nation's summer vacation playground. With its smaller lakes almost countless, its two great lakes, and its elongated shore line, its rivers and its forests, it spreads before the vacation seeker—notably the man who may seek his vacation in an automobile—an array of beauty and delight worthy of a poet's dream.

Michigan is perhaps the easiest in the entire union in which to chart an automobile tour. It is unique in that a grand tour of it would practically follow the governmental boundaries of the commonwealth. One may start at any of the cities on either of the great lakes and transcribe the contour of the state with his automobile wheel tracks.

The grand tour of tours follows nearly always within hailing distance of the lake front, except along the Indiana boundary line, from Detroit, through Mount Clemens, Port Huron, Bay City, Mackinaw, Petoskey, Traverse City, Manistee, Muskegon, and St. Joseph. To these cities may be added an inland stretch through Paw Paw, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Jackson, and Ypsilanti. While not all of the route—so far as the roadway is concerned—would please the average automobile owner, the scenic beauty would. Moreover, it can be varied by detours or shortened to suit the driver's whim and fancy, or the dictates of the length of his vacation. On this trip the tourist would view every phase of Michigan life and development and every type of its scenic beauty.

Going up the west Michigan pike system, of which there are two branches—one along the shore through Muskegon and Manistee, the other through Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, and Cadillac—the tourist reaches Traverse City, ready for the trip around the tip of the peninsula. If he has traveled the shore route he has traversed a delightful country, skirting at all times many lakes. The inland route passes through pretty farming and fruit raising country.

From Traverse City, the route leads through the finest resort district of Michigan—Charlevoix, Petoskey, and finally Mackinaw, opposite Mackinac island.

The east Michigan pike strikes Cheboygan, Alpena, and finally reaches Saginaw, whence the completion of the grand tour may be effected either through Flint or by way of Vassar, Port Huron, and down the St. Clair river.

The lower stretch of the tour—the cross state section of it—may be routed through Ypsilanti, Jackson, Battle Creek, and Kalamazoo, with a noteworthy stop at Ann Arbor, the seat of the University of Michigan, or it may be charted through the hill country—Adrian, Hillsdale, and Coldwater—and rejoin the route at Battle Creek.

In addition to the scenic beauty of these routes, the cities of Michigan, which are universally beautiful, increase the charm of your travels and, what is more to the point, assure the tourist creature comforts at excellent hotels.

Motor tourists can well take their way to the picturesque Adrian lake region, that is attracting more and more attention in the middle west, and which is justly called the "Killarney of America." The locality abounds in exhilarating drives. This is the region where James Fenimore Cooper composed one of his famous novels. Here was the line of the old stage coach travel from Detroit to Chicago. Here buildings nearly a century old stand as rare specimens of the pioneer builder's craft, which add to the romance of the scenery through which your motor travels. Given a love of nature, the trip through Adrian, Hillsdale, and Coldwater to Battle Creek will be good medicine for fagged nerves. Even a penurious driver will not regret the wear on his tires as he views the exhilarating sweep of hill land and every now and then catches a glimpse of the silvery splotch of a lake.

On the grand tour of the state the West Michigan pike is universally good to Mackinaw, but from Mackinaw to Saginaw the going will not be pleasng to a critical driver. If one is not disposed to do a little "roughing it," it is well to cut the grand tour at Traverse City, thus avoiding the "jack pine" region. With the exception of the Straits of Mackinac, the shortened trip will catch most points of interest in the state and take the tourist through the finest of forest and farming country and territory that is known the world over for its scenic wonders.

A delightful scenic trip from Detroit may be routed along the St. Clair river to Port Huron and thence along the shore of the thumb of Lake Michigan to Port Austin, from where the return trip is made through Vassar and thence through either Flint or Lapeer to Pontiac and Detroit.

INDIANA.

The smallest state west of the Appalachian range has in truth the greatest diversity of scenic character and beauty. No matter in what section of Indiana the automobilist lives, he has almost within sight of his home the route of an automobile tour well worth the trip of a thousand miles to reach.

The topography of Indiana is as individual as its Hoosiers. The landscape is never commonplace, no matter where you view it. When one consider the state as a whole one is astounded by the variety of it. It slopes from its southern hills, or "knobs," so rugged and broken that they might well be a leaf out of the magnificent volume of the Rocky mountains, to the lake district in the north, studded as thickly with lochs as the diamonds of a tiara.

The so-called "knobs" of Indiana offer an outing 'midst scenes to charm an artist or a geologist. Here the vagaries of Hoosier nature are at their weirdest. The hills are as honeycombed with caves and subterranean hallways as a wasp's nest. Set in deep woodland, the tips of the "knobs" are as bald as Alpine peaks. They are miniature Rocky mountains, undermined by natural catacombs where nature's antics stage eternal surprises. For instance, a river will vanish into the earth to reappear miles away.

Between the "knobs" and the lakes is a belt of productive land, productive both below and above the surface, with mines, farm lands, and oil wells. Throughout this area numerous streams rescue it from monotony, and achieve their work with signal artistic success.

For the automobilist seeking a vacation excursion of four days to a week, Indiana offers its motorists at least three tours, loops, as it were, all with alluring characteristics. These might well be termed "knobs," "the lake tour," and "the Hoosier trail."

The drive through the "knobs" for rugged natural scenery cannot be excelled nearer than the far west. Leaving Indianapolis, the tour strikes for Martinsville through an attractive valley country. From Martinsville it leads to Bloomington, a pretty university town, the seat of the state university. From Bloomington it veers through the coal mining region to Terre Haute.

The route then drops southward, never far distant from the state line and the Wabash river, through the oldest settlements of Indiana, those made by the French, notably at Vincennes, and reaches Evansville, the second largest city of the state. From this point there is a pleasing side trip to the Mount Vernon district and New Harmony, the site of an early religious attempt at communism.

From Evansville the tour plunges into the wildest section of Indiana. With Leavenworth on the Ohio river and the world famous Wyandotte cave as objective points, the road meanders along the river, touching it at Rockport. After a visit to the Wyandotte cave, which is not far from Leavenworth, the route strikes north to Paoli and French Lick, the heart of the most picturesque regions of the Hoosier state.

The return trip of the circuit retraces the path to Paoli, and then travels north to Bedford through the famous stone quarry district. Thence it proceeds to Columbus, another point of Hoosier picturesqueness. Columbus is the gateway to Brown county, one of the charmingly sequestered sections of the state.

Don't Use Dangerous Antiseptic Tablets

It is an unnecessary risk. Use the safe antiseptic and germicide, Absorbine, Jr.—it kills germs quickly and surely without any possibility of harmful results; made of pure herbs, non-poisonous, and there is no danger whatever if the children get hold of the bottle. It retains its germicidal powers even when diluted one part of Absorbine, Jr, to 100 parts water—and its antiseptic powers one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts water.

The germicidal properties of Absorbine, Jr., have been tested and proven both in laboratory and actual practice. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr., $1.00 and $2.00 per bottle at druggists or postpaid.

A liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c in stamps. W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F. 308 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

A Trim, Racy Roadster With Plenty of Room for Four

It's a companionable, chummy arrangement, and one that's most convenient.

A wide aisleway between the front seats gives easy access to the roomy rear compartment, where two adults can ride in perfect comfort.

There's nothing cramped about the rear seat—not even on an extended tour.

It has ample leg room—plenty of room to stretch out and relax.

All seats are placed forward of the rear axle, giving the fullest and most complete riding ease.

The four passenger roadster has the same long wheel base—the same great motor—the same identical chassis as the famous Abbott-Detroit Six seven passenger touring car.

But the body is lighter and gets more away from the conventional.

It is different, yet exceedingly practical—built to meet a demand, not a fad.

This new car has a striking symmetry of lines. It has finish, speed, power and endurance.

In addition, it possesses that keen balance of weight, power, gear ratio and wheel size which gives the Abbott-Detroit Six greater power moment than any other car now built.

Such a body on such a chassis is supreme as a practical sporting type of car.

Examine this new Abbott-Detroit. Sit in the rear compartment. Its roominess and riding comfort will delight you.

We will be glad to prove the car's supremacy.

Come in today and let us arrange for a practical demonstration.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JULY-AUGUST

Beginning August

WITH August come days when life walks slowly in many colored silks, as a prince of Bagdad, serenely and with long slow stride, perfumed among the flowers, indolent in the heat of the day. The carpets of Persia spread over the fields where fox grass waves between golden rod and button rockets, between snap dragons and helianthus, and is, with its filmy plumes, the earthly continuation of the haze which fills the west before sunset.

The processes which bring the seed to fruit and the fruit to seed in the circle in which life runs are at their full in fragrance and fruit and, being at their full, seem to rest. For the moment it is sufficient to be and not to do.

August is a static month, a moment when creation being at full, it rests before turning to go back towards recreation by the way of destruction. The birds whose song always is vernal, now moulting, cease to sing and the woods have the ponderous silences which suggest realized power.

The small voices which intensify the silence by emerging from it and deepening it because they sound at all, sound from grass and tree. The black cricket and the snowy tree cricket, the katydid and the occasional owl are voices in a brooding silence of life after accomplishment and at rest.

Golden Bantam comes to pot and Esau is content. Joe Pye weed is in the meadows and along the ways, the Turk's cap is in bloom, wild raspberries are red, early golden rod is yellowing, and wild asters are near their time. Life is buxom, provident, and content and hums to have you know it is at rest.

Samuel Rogers born 1763; James, earl of Douglas killed at Otterbourne 1388; William Penn died 1718; Thomas Gray died 1771. "O, that like thine, my epitaph were—Peace!"

Rough wind, that moanest loud
Grief too sad for song;
Wild wind, when sullen cloud
Knells all the night long;
storm, whose tears are vain,
Bare woods, whose branches strain,
Deep caves and dreary main,
Wail for the world's wrong."

The Emperor Trajan died 117; Stephen Marcel slain at Paris 1358; Cosmo de Medici died 1464; Richard Savage died 1743. "Swift summer into the autumn flowed."

THE CLOUD.

"I am the daughter of earth and water,
And the nursling of the sky;
I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores,
I change but I cannot die.
For after the rain, when with never a stain,
The pavilion of Heaven is bare
And the winds and the sunbeams with their convex gleams,
Build up the blue dome of air,
I silently laugh at my own cenotaph,
And out of the caverns of rain,
Like a child from the womb, like a ghost from the tomb,
I rise and unbuild it again."

For the rose is beauty; the Gardener, Time."

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

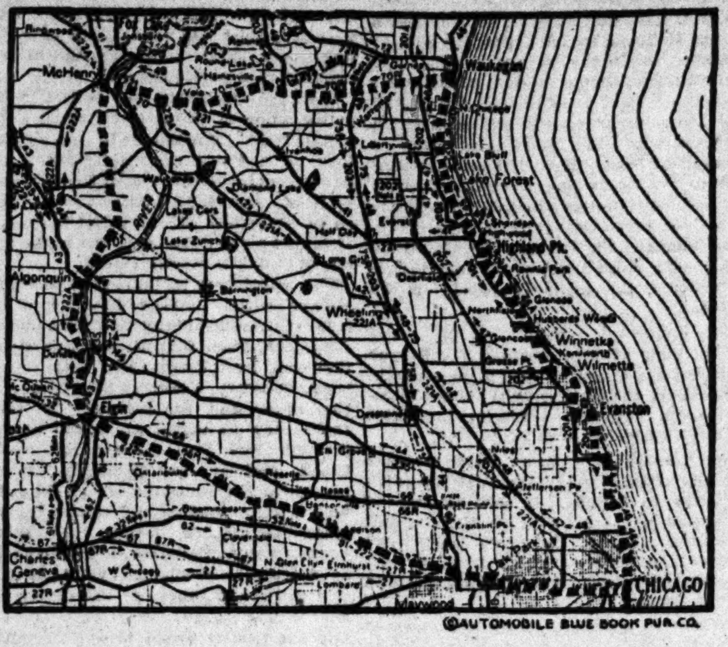
Conducted by J. C. Burton

Where Shall We Drive To-Day?

CHICAGO TO M'HENRY AND RETURN.

[Arranged by the Blue Book Touring Bureau.]

THE north shore still offers one of the most attractive fields for motor outings near Chicago, and the following trip, going up along the shore and over to the Fox lake regions, down the Fox river valley, then back to the city, covers some of the best roads and the most scenic parts of the Chicago section.



©AUTOMOBILE BLUE BOOK PUB. CO.

At Melrose avenue turn right for a block and then immediately left in Abbotsford road and then out Warwick avenue, following the travel into Winnetka [19.3 miles]. Leave Winnetka in Lincoln avenue and at the end of the street turn left in North avenue for a block and immediately right in the Green Bay road, which you follow into Glencoe [22 miles].

Here, at the end of the road, turn right and take the first left, following the winding road through the woods. At one and one-quarter miles beyond and at the four corners turn left, and then immediately right, still winding, and at the entrance to Lake Forest college keep to the left, and then gradually curve right half a mile beyond, turning right with the tracks.

Pass through Lake Forest [33.1 miles] and Lake Bluff station [35.1 miles]. Two and one-half miles beyond cross the railroad, then turn left in Twenty-second street and immediately turn right with the trolley past North Chicago station, following the trolley under the railroad and turning into Waukegan and Genesee streets.

Coming into McHenry and passing the postoffice on the left, cross the iron bridge and gradually bear left, going straight south about five and one-half miles and following the travel; here, at the four corners, keep to the left and then take the first right turn just beyond, continuing south about two and one-half miles to the end of the road; here keep left with the travel and then take the first right turn, gradually coming into a diagonal four corners, and keep right again. About one and one-half miles beyond cross the Northwestern railway just north of Cary and keep ahead, following the main travel into Algonquin [78 miles].

Leaving Algonquin, continue south on the west side of the river, crossing through the western edge of Dundee [83 miles] and coming into Elgin in North State street [88 miles].

Leave Elgin in Villa street, going east and turning slightly left at five corners, at electric tower, and follow the direct road through Ontarioville, Bloomingdale, and Addison; and at the fork immediately beyond the iron bridge bear left, going straight east into Franklin Park. At Franklin Park turn right, and then at the first left cross the Desplaines river and come into Chicago in Grand avenue.

The total distance of the trip is about 182 miles.

After eight years' connection with the selling division of the Packard Motor Car company, O. G. Heffinger has organized a new company, the Chicago Motor Car company, to handle exclusively in Chicago and the surrounding territory the new Liberty car manufactured by the Liberty Motor Car company of Detroit.

Exhaust Echoes

By J. C. Burton

Jay Hall, general sales manager and associate executive of the Olds Motor works for the last three years, has tendered his resignation to that firm, to take effect next Tuesday. No announcement is made as to Hall's plans, but it is generally believed that his resignation is merely preliminary to an appointment of even greater responsibility than his present duties.

The greatest wholesale change of motor equipment ever made in this country is being gradually put into effect by the Fifth Avenue Coach company of New York. This company, after a series of the severest tests, has decided to standardize Moline Knight engines for its new equipment exclusively.

The Yellowstone Trail association has put into service what is called the road condition map service, and by it information is given of the entire road of the Yellowstone trail throughout its entire length from Plymouth Rock to Puget sound. The service consists of a large detailed map of the entire Yellowstone trail. Along the line of the trail the letters of the alphabet are placed at about equal distances, each letter designating a certain portion of the road. In the printed space on the map is a key to road conditions, 1 meaning good improved road, 2 meaning good natural road, 3 meaning heavy road, 4 meaning rain or snow, etc. Once each week there is mailed out from the headquarters of the Yellowstone trail to the places the maps are in service a resumé of the road condition. This is simply done by combining the letters and figures in this manner: "K-1-4." This would mean that the section of the road designated by K is a good improved road and that there has been rain in that part of the country.

The first of the new Cole-Springfield body type of eight cylinder cars, manufactured by the Cole Motor Car company of Indianapolis, to reach the city arrived last week and are now attracting attention at the local Cole salesrooms. This new Cole eight product is an all year round motor vehicle, suitable for every kind of weather and all sorts of temerature.

BALDWIN
WHERE THE GAME FISH ARE

The favorite haunt of Michigan sportsmen for thirty years. Its brooks and lakes teem with trout, bass, pike, pickerel, bluegills and perch. Though fished by thousands, they are never depleted, because the natural hazards have been left untouched, providing perfect breeding grounds; and 3,000,000 fry are planted annually. 27 lakes and 12 trout streams within six miles of town, including the famous Pere Marquette river and its branches, Michigan's most noted trout waters. Motor boating, rowing, bathing. Good gravel roads, fine water, dry air; 460 feet above Lake Michigan. On West Mich. Pike. Camping sites free. Get away from the fashionable centers and back to nature, where your vacation means rest, health, pleasure and less expense. Hotels, farm homes, furnished cottages. No fancy prices. Write

Marlborough-Blenheim,

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

THE LEADING RESORT HOUSE OF THE WORLD

Capacity 1100 American and European Plans

The great essential of a resort hotel, as distinguished from a city hotel, is ample public space devoted to the use of its guests, in the form of bright and airy Exchanges, Lobbies, Parlors, Galleries and Solariums, affording pleasing vistas and beautiful promenades, the whole combining into a harmonious vision of grandeur and beauty, while replete with the cozy group seclusions of home, and yet affording full view of the pleasing panorama of the resort life. In this essential the Marlborough-Blenheim stands without an equal in Atlantic City or elsewhere.

Its "Ownership Management," while accounting for its unique reputation, is a guarantee of the high character of its patronage and the unexcelled quality of its service and cuisine. It employs only white service in both its American and a la carte dining rooms.

It makes a specialty of high-class music every evening throughout the year, with special Sunday night solo features.

Atlantic City, with its only real competitor (Europe) this year impossible, is offering unusual attractions and entertainments. Two flying boats are daily sources of interest. Two golf courses, the Yacht Club, the fishing fleet and the wonderful bathing each attract their respective devotees, while the pier amusements, numerous theatres, the Boardwalk, the fine motor roads and the splendid hotels and restaurants, afford enjoyment to all. There is only one Atlantic City, and this summer it is particularly gay and attractive. Write for illustrated booklet and rates. JOSIAH WHITE & SONS COMPANY

TRIP

30,000 Islands of Georgian Bay

(Penetang to Parry Sound.)

Algonquin Provincial Park

(2½ million acres beyond description.)

Charming Muskoka Lakes

Let the Grand Trunk Railway tell you how well this trip fits in for a two to four weeks' vacation. Those who know say it is the most beautiful, interesting and restful of all the moderately priced circle tours from Chicago. Ticket includes all forms of transportation—rail, steamship, stage coach, yachting fleet, etc. This year, with war in Europe, is the time to use ingenuity in planning your trip. Choose "something different"—a journey of interest; one you will like to talk about.

Your visit to Algonquin Park alone will more than pay you. It is one of the most beautiful resorts in America. Two and one-half million acres of Provincial Government Reserve. Ideal for canoeing and fishing, amid the pines, balsams and cedars. Good hotels and rustic camps. There are a thousand people in Chicago who would start for Algonquin Park next week if they could but know of its beauty, charm, tranquillity and ideal vacation arrangements. Investigate. If the law permitted we would guarantee to refund the fare of anybody who visited Algonquin Park and was not satisfied.

Dramatis Personae of the Speed Spectacle

NO. 15—DAVE LEWIS, CRAWFORD.

PLAYING the rôle of the young speed Lothario that came out of the west to pay court and carry off the wild and elusive women, Fame and Fortune, Dave Lewis, who is a member of Billy Chandler's Crawford team, made his first apeparance east of the Rocky mountains in five years this season, having confined his activities to the Pacific coast since 1910.

Although he has yet to win his first 1916 race, Lewis has made the best showing of any of the three Crawford drivers. His record on the speedways this year is as follows: Tenth in the Chicago 300 mile event, fourth in the 150 mile race at Des Moines, second in the fifty mile, and third in the ten mile contests at Sioux City, and fourth in the fifty mile race at Omaha.

Lewis is not a neophyte in the temple of Mercury. He made his debut as a race driver on the Atlantic seaboard six years ago and then went to California, where he established a reputation as a speed merchant by taking third money in the 301-450 class event at Santa Monica in 1911.

On the Pacific coast Lewis became the especial protégé of Earl Cooper, and in his campaign in California he has generally driven one of the Stutz cars owned by the road racing champion of 1913 and 1915. Until this season, however, he was a free lance, accepting any mount that he could get.

His only start in 1912 was in the Santa Monica free for all, in which his Stutz failed to finish. The following year he was an also rain in the same event, but took second money in the Tacoma Montamarathon with a Fiat. In 1914 Lewis finished second with a Cadillac in the Spokane-Walla Walla road race, but was forced to withdraw from the Corona grand prize and the Vanderbilt cup classic when his car suffered from mechanical trouble.

Last season Lewis finished second to Bob Burman in the Oklahoma City road race. His other starts were at Venice and in the Montamarathon and Potlatch trophy races at Tacoma.

Executives and Managers.

ADVERTISING AND SALES PLAN MAN, MERCHANDISE ANALYST.

I have scented the smoke of 38 advertising campaigns. Many of these I nurtured from their birth. Today each is a full fledged success. Their total yearly appropriations are far in excess of $1,000,000.

Each was built on a solid foundation. The facts were gained through intensive merchandising investigations. I have conducted over a score of these investigations. They range from a $100,000 piano company to a $5,000,000 steel corporation. I learned their logical markets, distribution, competition, sales resistance, attitude of trade. As a result I have acquired a keen merchandising vision.

I can scent the selling idea from afar. I have been unusually successful in creating big selling ideas, dynamic selling plots, sales stimulants. These have removed my campaigns from the commonplace. They have put scores of products across big.

Note, please, what this means in dealer co-operation. For one advertiser spending $30,000 per year in publication advertising I induced his dealers to spend $150,000 a year in local advertising. Another advertiser spending $26,000 a year secured $10,000 worth of free dealer advertising in sixty days. I can cite many similar cases. This results from my knowledge of dealers—how to win them. For one and one-half years I was in charge of the Merchandising Service Department of one of the country's foremost advertisers. I planned and wrote the campaign of 87 large retailers.

Likewise I have been extremely successful in winning the co-operation of sales departments. In many cases I have been obliged to oversome strong opposition. I have discovered plans which invariably succeed.

For two years I was vice president of a Chicago art studio. Judge what this means in layout ability. Samples of my advertising will verify your conclusions.

My copy is strong, dynamic, pungent. A large advertiser recently referred to it as "advertising that steam whistles for attention and is punctuated with dynamite." It has stood the acid test in some of the country's largest mail order campaigns. Its proven pulling power is almost unbelievable.

In a recent commercial report R. G. Dun & Co. say of me: "Possesses unusual business ability for his age." One of the biggest agency men in the country states: "Has rare ability to scent the merchandising-advertising idea and put it across big." Gilt edged references furnished from some of the most prominent advertising agencies in Chicago.

At present employed. Sufficient reasons for change. Seek affiliation with an agency that recognizes the broader aspects of merchandising. To such an agency I offer the means of securing new accounts and increasing present appropriations. Address N 284, Tribune.

MY "Big Corporation Experience."

Will Save You Thousands of Dollars on Printing and Advertising.

By analyzing your particular requirements and ordering by new standardized methods I can cut down costs on stationery, forms, and advertising.

Big Corporation Experience has given me many big ideas for successfully marketing commodities, creation of new selling points that win, and numerous short cuts that stop waste and strengthens business.

Age 34, married; can convince of ability, loyalty, and trustworthiness. Can leave present position now. Address O 103, Tribune.

SUCCESSFUL LAND SALESMEN, ATTENTION!

How would you like to belong to an organization which has a permanent future?

Are you not tired of jumping from one proposition to another every year or so, losing the cumulative effect of your hard work every time you make a change?

Some successful land men are organizing a company combining the land business with an industrial and manufacturing enterprise. This business should continue for an indefinite period; it should grow in volume each year, and its profits should eventually enable us to retire from this eternal hustle.

We can make room for two or three additional live wire producers.

Investment in our company is not essential, though we can show the man with a little capital an opportunity to join us on a ground floor basis in an enterprise that has tremendous possibilities.

HIGH GRADE JOBS FOR HIGH GRADE MEN.

Sure, it's hot. We can't get around the fact, too, that it does take the ambition out of lots of us, but after all talking about the weather won't get you that better job, nor help us take care of the orders that we have from these 15,000 concerns with whom we deal. Our faith in the ability of the average red blooded young fellow who wants to better his condition to come back is so strong that we are willing to go the limit for him. Put into force that extra energy that you have somewhere in your makeup and let us help you to that better job. Now is the time, not tomorrow when it's cooler or the next day. Look at this layout of positions actually open. Remember we have to deliver the position built along the lines you require in order to earn our compensation. You can't lose. The jobs are here. You have the experience. Call and be convinced of the worth while nature of our service.

Draftsmen are a scarcity. If your job is not what you think it should get, get in touch with us and let us better it.

Don't overlook the fact that our service appealed successfully to over 200,000 of the highest grade office and technical men who are actually working with the concerns with whom we deal at present, and these positions have been secured through our service. Any high grade man with a clean record can't afford to pass up our service as the most up to date "result getting" business insurance to be had. It costs absolutely nothing to talk this proposition over with one of our department heads. Your case can't be the exception. We have handled too many, so don't take our word for it, come and find out for yourself. That will convince you. Again, it's hot, but let's don't let the weather kill our ambition. 100% service to high grade men is our slogan.

Canada.

Opportunity Davidson Saskatchewan, Canada Farms

Last year many farmers in this district produced more than enough grain to pay for the entire farm at present going land values. Crop prospects are again practically perfect this year. You can still buy this land in tracts to suit you at low prices, with a small cash payment and the balance arranged on easy 6% terms.

We can give you a very cheap round trip excursion ticket rate on certain dates this summer to inspect this land. It costs very little to investigate. See it now. This country has no extra war tax of any kind. When peace is declared crowds will be seeking these opportunities. Land producing such results will surely boom later on. Be forehanded, look now.

Write us for full information, map, settlers' letters, kodak views, railroad excursion rates, etc.

IF YOU ARE CONSIDERING THE PURCHASE OF FLORIDA LAND

By taking more land than we needed for our own use, we secured a very low price on the finest body of land that we know of in Florida, high, well drained, good citrus soil, as well as general farm land, intersected by railroad and only 30 miles from Tampa.

We will sell our surplus land, amounting to several hundred acres, to one or more buyers at a very attractive figure. The high development of our own tract will largely increase the value of adjoining property.

This is an opportunity to get a small block of land at a wholesale price, where you can share in a large development that will make you money without effort on your part. Address N A 199, Tribune.

FOR SALE—15,000 ACRES IN LAKE AND Sumter Counties, Florida, at a very attractive price. Address P. F. QUINN, Vinton, Iowa.

Idaho.

SEVERAL HUNDRED

Families have moved to Idaho within the last ninety days. There are many great opportunities to buy rich, fertile land at reasonable prices. Let me send you a crop report showing what returns some farmers received last year—it's an "eye-opener"—you can do as well. R. A. SMITH, Colonization and Industrial Agent, Union Pacific System, Room 623 Union Pacific Headquarters, Omaha, Neb.

FARMING

THINK HOW MUCH is being printed about farming! The press reflects the thoughts and opinion of the public. Every well informed person is keen to this topic in its relation to the high cost of living.

FARM TENANCY is being fastened upon our country. The rapid increase in land values is hastening it. The future of the well-to-do class lies in the ownership of land. Take this lesson home. What are you building on for your future, for a sure income, for your children's future, for a home and independence for your family?

WITH ALL THE PRESS of this country, the government itself, and every state appealing for more farmers, can't you see that farming is a good business to go into? Fewer fail in it than in any other line. Co-operative stores, owned by farmers for selling their produce direct to consumers, is a growing movement full of promise for elimination of middlemen and for securing to the farmer a larger percentage of profit than ever before. But first of all you face the problem of securing your land. You want a working plan to do it. I bring the best and surest plan, even to the man of limited means.

TO YOU mechanics, men of all trades, city toilers, you who were brought up on farms, you farm renters overburdened by excessive rents, I bring a message. There are still over fifty thousand acres ready for your ownership and occupancy in the Swigart Tract in Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford counties, Michigan.

WHEN YOU LEARN that you can buy land in this tract for $10 to $25 per acre, on terms of $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month, and much of the best land at $18 to $20 per acre, and can make the short, inexpensive trip, requiring but three days, to see these lands, you ought to join my next excursion and investigate.

SIZE UP THE SITUATION. Come and see the crops of rye, oats, vetch, corn, wheat, alfalfa, beans, and potatoes. Talk to the settlers. Judge for yourself the amount of improving and developing going on. Forecast in your own mind what the future has in store for you in this tract, with new towns, good markets, several railroads, steamship lines, good schools, good roads and electric power dams being built. Verify my claims as to the advantages of locating in the central part of Michigan's Fruit Belt, where the climate, moderated by nearness to Lake Michigan, is mild, balmy, and most healthful. Drink the delicious, pure water. I will take you in one of my automobiles over many miles of well drained lands of quickly producing, warm, sandy loam soil.

I WANT TO TELL YOU more about this district, the upbuilding of which I have been identified with for many years. I have published a 72 page booklet containing 115 views and a thorough description of all the conditions for farming. Send for it and also get a large map, or call if you can and see samples of crops on display in my offices. You will be interested in the co-operative side of my proposition—the insurance feature, the corps of farming instructors I maintain on the lands, the demonstration farm, my large orchard, seed distribution plan, and other features that make for a united and well directed effort for progress in this district.

OUR NEXT EXCURSION is Tuesday, August 8th. Rate from Chicago to Wellston, our Michigan headquarters, and return, $12.50, which includes railroad fare, meals, and lodging. Railroad fare will be rebated on your land purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women. You return to Chicago at 7:00 a. m. Friday, Aug. 11th. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Class & Price

There is more satisfaction in owning a famous high grade make of automobile than anything else. It's something to be proud of; you never have to apologize for it.

There is more distinction, more class, in owning an

than a cheap car that isn't new after you have had it a week. The class and the price are both what you want.

Read This List Carefully.

A REBUILT CADILLAC
It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

BE AN INSIDER.

A company which has unusual opportunity for big profits needs a large tract of land in its business.

I control the only logical property available for this purpose and will require about $10,000 additional to clinch the option.

A syndicate furnishing this money in amounts of $1,000 or more will share the inside profits to be obtained in turning this land over to the company, and have the privilege of acquiring a substantial stock interest in the company without further investment.

Each member of the syndicate will be fully protected by individual title to an adequate portion of the tract, which on account of the company's development will increase largely in value. Address L X 159, Tribune.

"HAIG, THE SILENT," the man who planned and engineered the great drive of the British on the western front. Soudan, South Africa, Mons, Ypres, and Loos—those were the schools that Sir Douglas Haig went through before he became commander in chief of the English forces in France last December, when he succeeded Gen. Sir John French. He is shown here with Lieut. Gen. Sir Pertab Singh, high commander of the Indian forces on the western front.

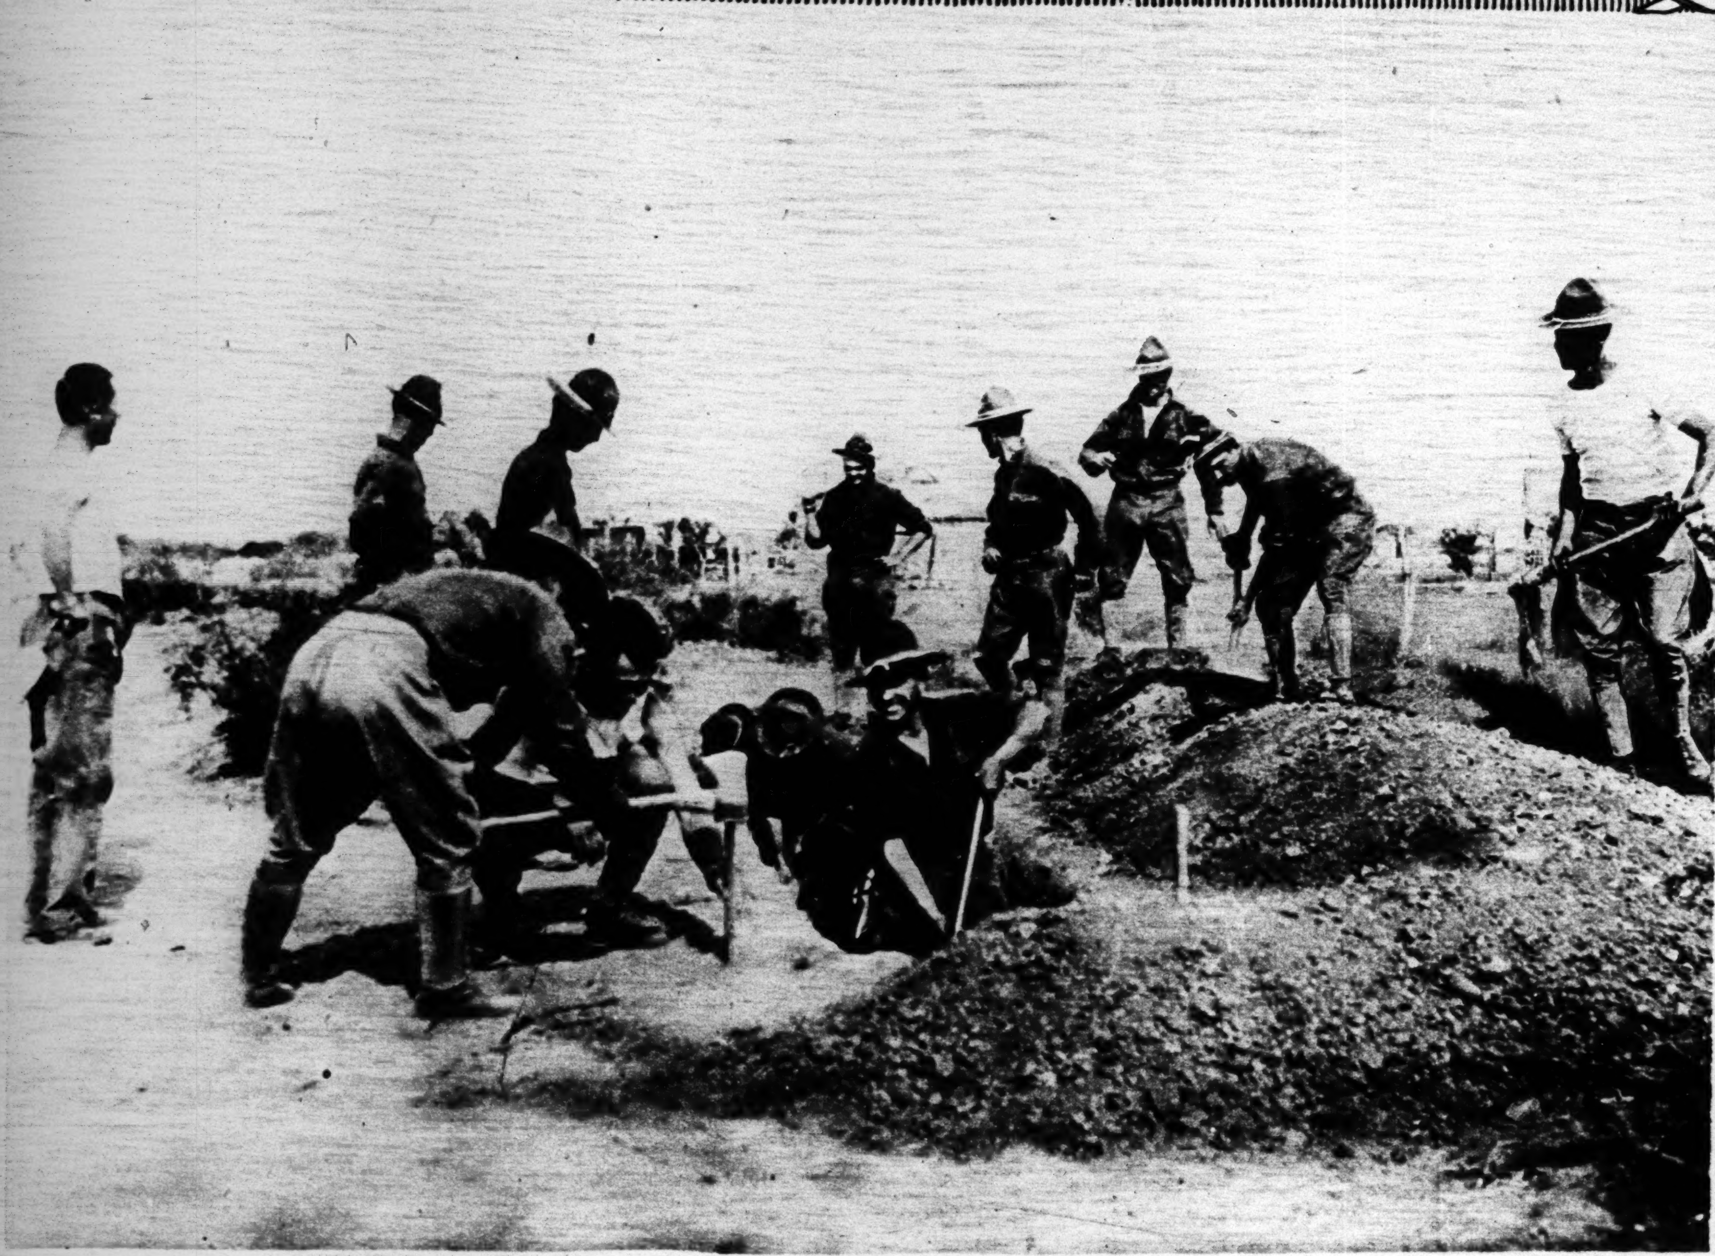
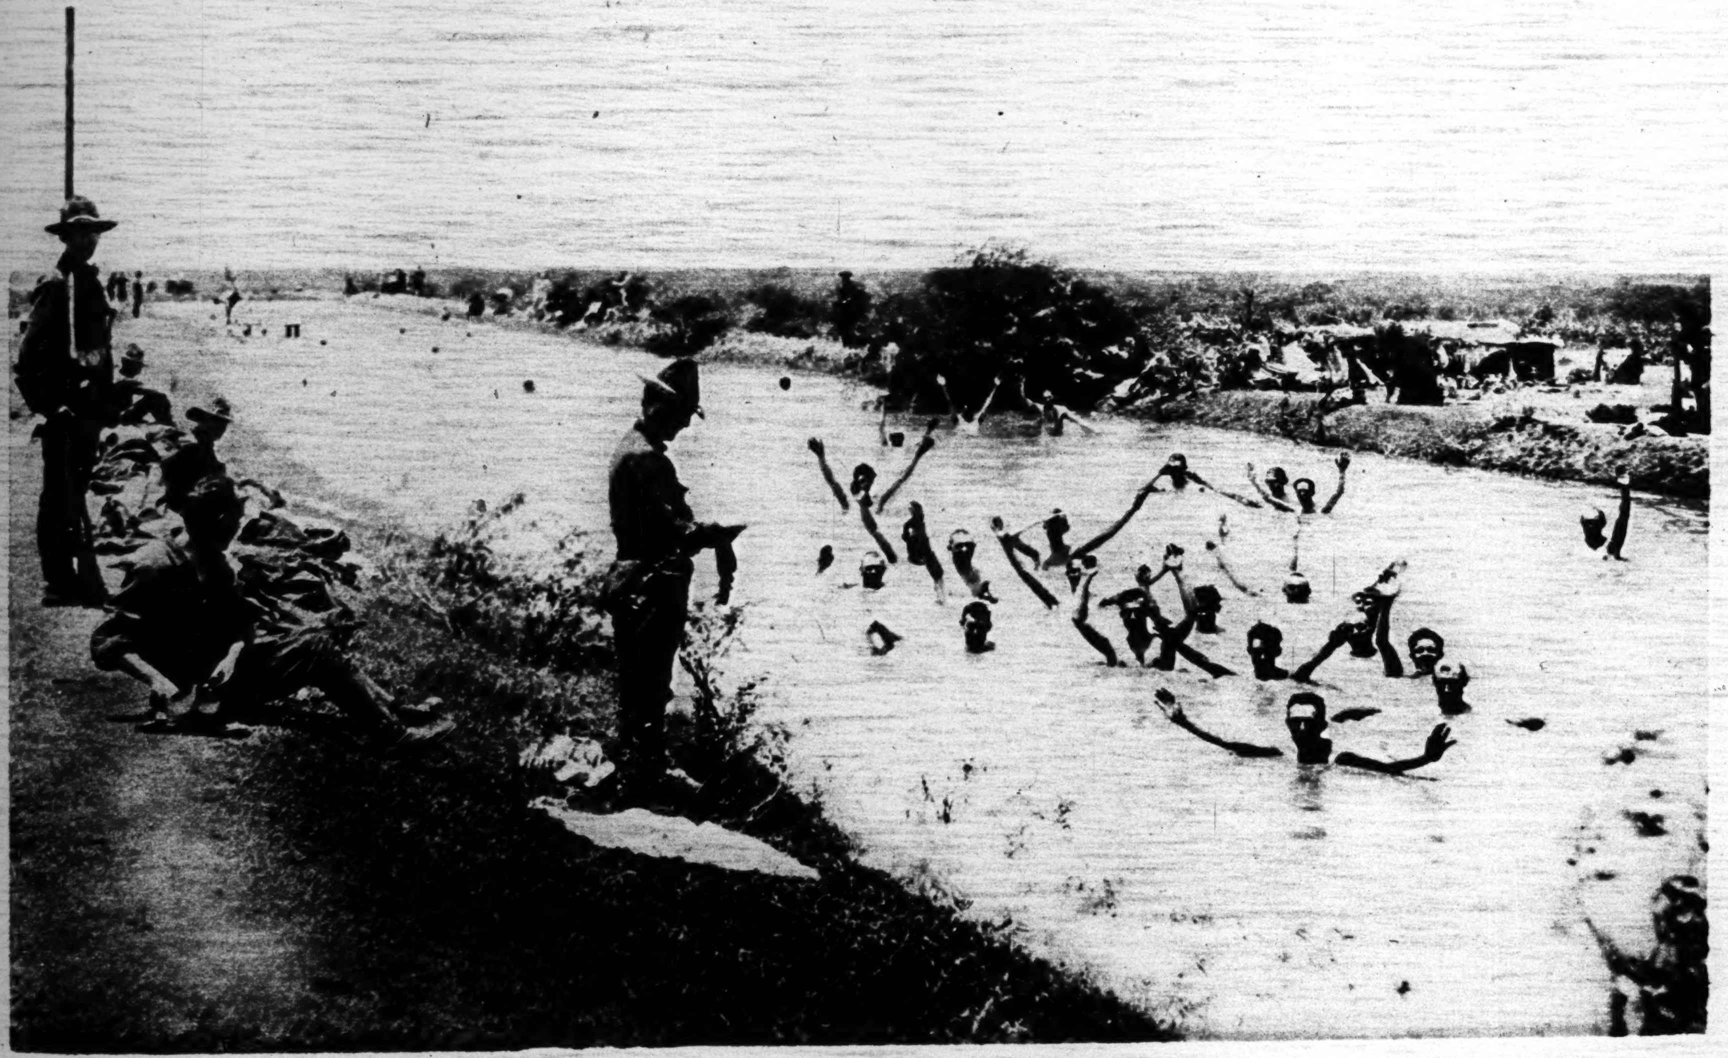
NIGHT EYES FOR THE BORDER—Two great searchlights, the larger with a thirty-six inch lens, the smaller with a twenty-four inch lens, now in use on the Mexican line. The smaller carries its own generator and will throw a light eight miles. The generator of the larger is on a separate truck.

AN IMPORTANT BRANCH OF THE SERVICE—These two are getting dinner ready for Company B, Seventh Illinois infantry, in an open air kitchen that just at the moment the picture was taken was not as tidy as it might be.



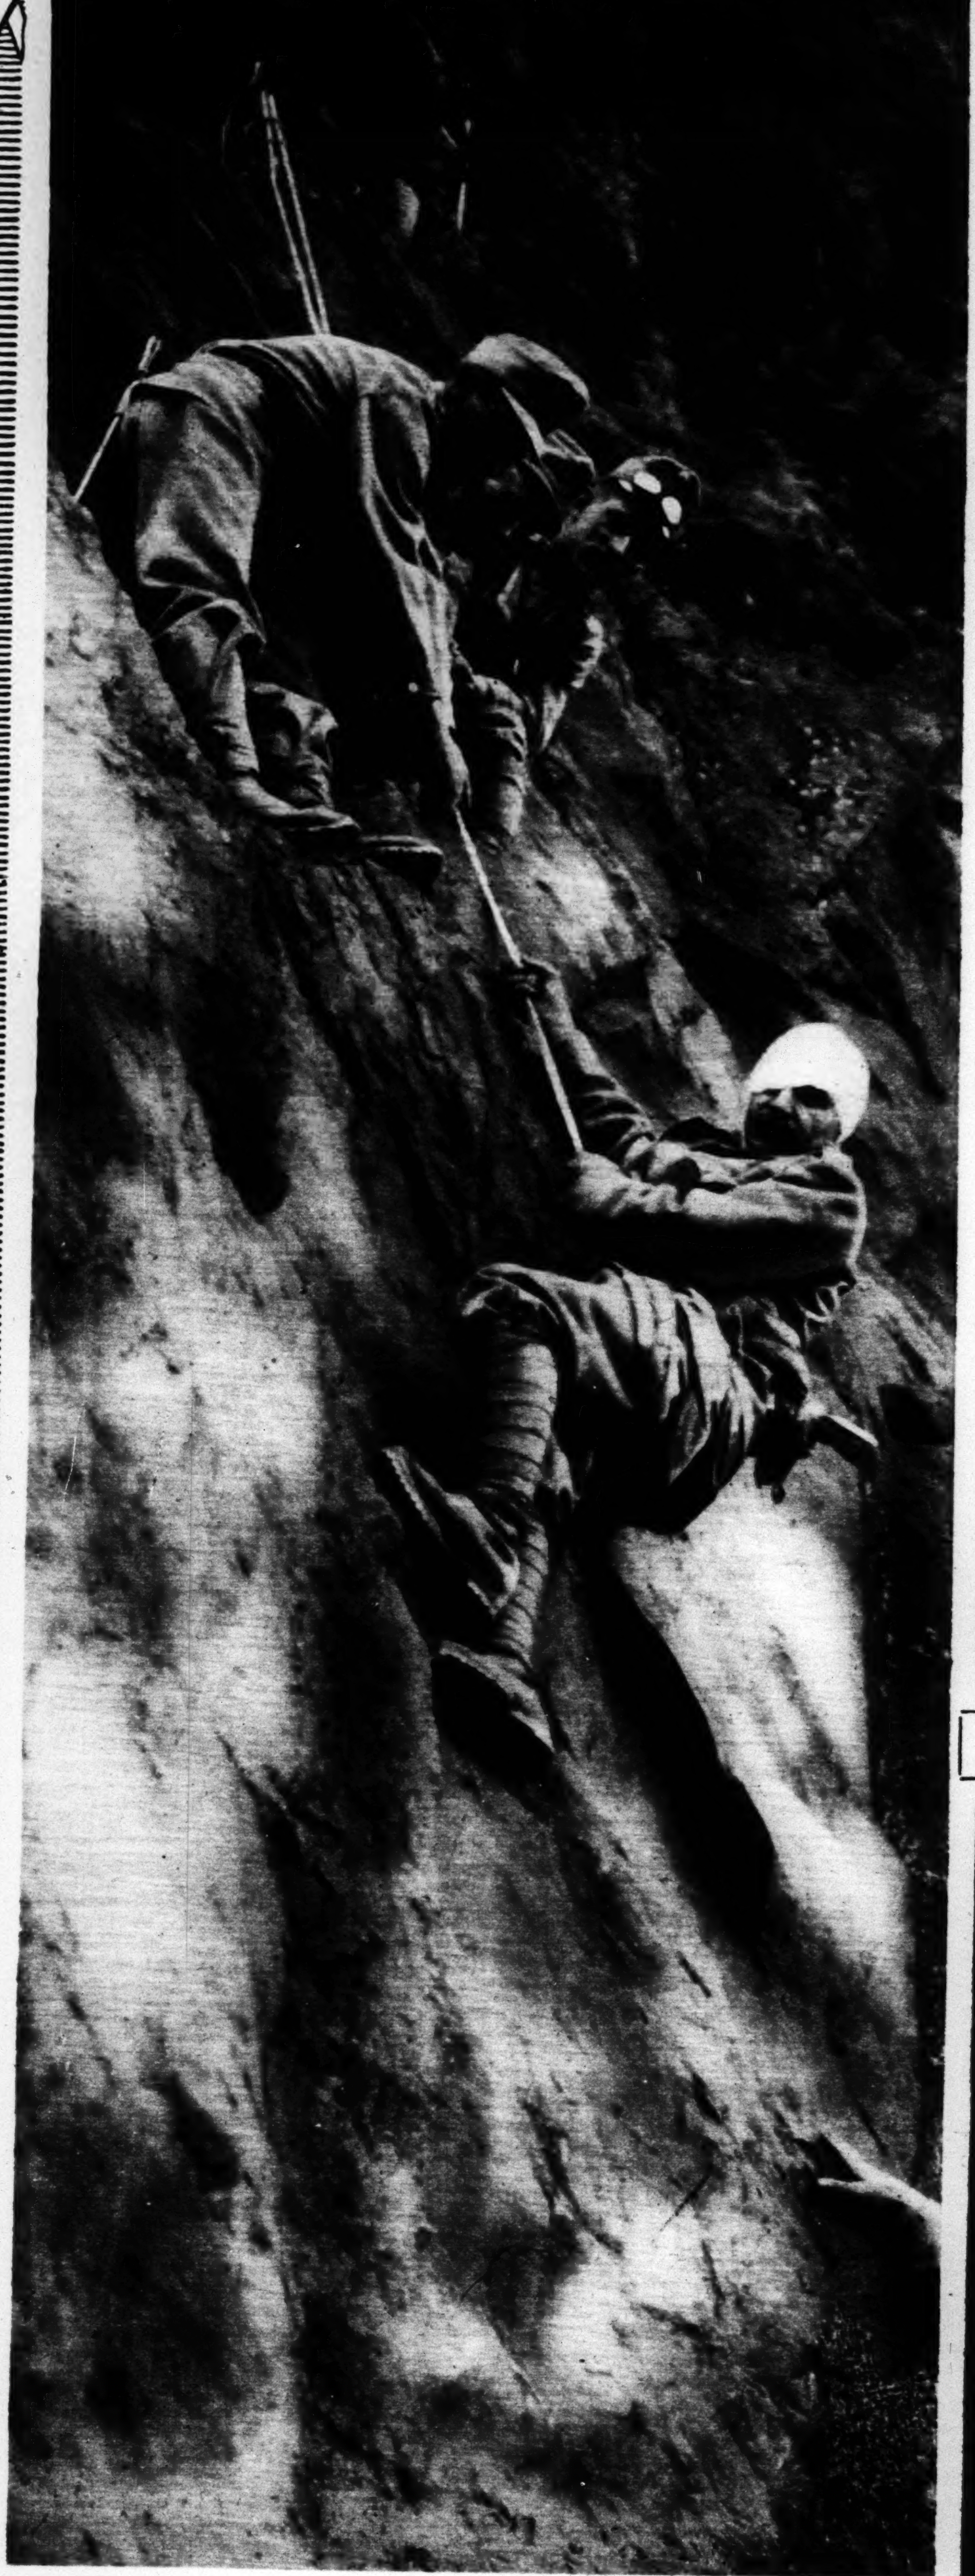
DIG, COMRADE, DIG—That was the order that was given in some of the national guard camps along the Rio Grande, and the soldier boys obeyed.

(Photograph by American Press Association.)



COOLING OFF IN THE RIO GRANDE—They're having as much fun as kids in the old swimming hole, these members of the Seventy-first New York, and if you look real closely you will see a trooper "chawin' raw beef" on one of his fellows.

(Photograph by American Press Association.)



WOUNDED, YET FACING DEATH EVERY MINUTE, this soldier is being taken to an Alpine hospital. One slip of a foot, a broken rope, and both well and wounded would go plunging into some abyss.

and converted into an anti-aeroplane rifle.

GEN. SARRAIL DECORATES FRENCH OFFICERS AT SALONIKI—The ceremonies were attended by the entire populace, and were held in the Tour Blanc, where the remains of the wrecked Zeppelin, L 25, have been erected.

SOME OF ENGLAND'S FIGHTING MEN receiving medals for bravery in action on the western front. The little piece of metal, the hand clasp of a leader, and the cheers of one's trench mates—perhaps these give war what little joy it has.

JUST ANOTHER PICTURE OF MISS ANGELICA BROWN—She has had hundreds taken, but none just like this, which shows her at the Southampton Kennel club's dog show. "Girlie" Brown, as she is known, is one of the loveliest and most popular girls in eastern society, and her beaux are as numerous as her pictures. Among them, at various times, were Maurice Burke-Roche and Harold Vanderbilt.

For tired aching feet.

One or two teaspoonfuls of Sylpho-Nathol in a foot tub of water will give wonderful relief.

If your feet burn and smart, feel heavy, tired, and "too big for your shoes," try this simple remedy. Just let the feet rest in the solution for a few minutes. The rejuvenating results will amaze you!

One foot sufferer says: "Sylpho-Nathol is a true remedy for tired, aching feet. It relieves the soreness, softens the callouses, and the first application will help greatly."

Economical. Safe to use. The U. S. Govt. has pointed out that many so-called disinfectants have no more germ-killing value than water. Be safe; ask for and see that you get

Louis XIV. paid high for his coffee

Paris got her first taste of coffee in 1669, when Solemon Aga, the Turkish Ambassador, introduced it to the court of Louis XIV.

The "petit noir," as the Parisians call it to this day, gained instant vogue with the French aristocracy. The demand for coffee soon became so strong that the price rose to $40 a pound.

This seems like a most exorbitant price. Today, Yuban, the monarch of coffees, sells at a modest figure.

The present price is possible because Yuban is grown in large quantities, and is handled and marketed by the world's largest coffee merchants. Order a package from your grocer today.
